Wine of Cardui Cured Her.

213 South Prior Street,
ATLANTA, GA., March 21, 1903.

I suffered for four months with extreme nervousness and lassitude. I had a sinking feeling in my stomach which no medicine seemed to relieve, and losing my appetite I became weak and lost my vitality. In three weeks I lost fourteen pounds of flesh and felt that I must find speedy relief to regain my health. Having heard Wine of Cardui praised by several of my friends, I sent for a bottle and was certainly very pleased with the results. Within three days my appetite returned and my stomach troubled me no more. I could digest my food without difficulty and the nervousness gradually diminished. Nature performed her functions without difficulty and I am once more a happy and well woman.

HER BURGLAR

By ELOISE DAY

MILDRED could not sleep, though the soft mellow warmth and balmy breezes of Indian summer made this Hallowe'en night soothing as a lullaby. Insomnia had for the time being taken possession of her—perhaps because she had been doing, or trying to do, altogther too much for her slender strength.

She turned with contempt from the counting of sheep going over a wall. She wonders wearily how people can be so foolish. Surely, the people who sleep like tops invent silly futile games for the poor unfortunates who do not.

She got up, went over to the open window and sat down to admire the deserted street now bathed in silvery moonlight. Afar she hears the singing and calling of the students who are parading the streets in hundreds in their usual annual celebration of Hallowe'en.

After a while she feels oppressed by the loneliness and quiet of the night, the absence of sleep and the smallness of her room. Anything for a change. She will go downstairs for a little while into the big drawing-room below. She she wraps herself in a dressing gown and slips her feet into her warm noiseless bedroom slippers and glides cautiously down the stairs with much care, not to awaken the sleeping household.

With the same precaution, she pushes up the blinds of all the drawing-room windows and lets a flood of moonlight into the long room. How ghostly the chairs and sofas look, every object stands out clearly in the weird pale light. She even sees plainly the pictures on the walls.

The students must be coming nearer for she can hear the words of the song they are singing.

They must be very near now, on the next street perhaps, and there seems to be some sudden commotion for the song breaks off abruptly in the middle of a verse, and the voices that only just now sounded so musical gave way to the most unmusical calls and yells. While straining her ears to hear the song go on again her attention is attracted to hurried footsteps flying along the quiet street, and the tall figure of a man appears running at full speed.

For a second he pauses in front of the very window from which Mildred is looking and gives a hurried, haunted look about him before he jumps nimbly over the fence into the garden at the side of the house.

Mildred's heart is in her mouth. The newspapers lately have been filled with accounts of burglaries and highway assaults and robberies of all kinds.

What availeth it now that for long months past she has seen to the secure fastening of all the doors and windows in the house each night herself, even to those in the cellar, when at this very minute there is a dreadful man, a most desperate character, loose and at large in their own garden.

She almost wails aloud (only she is too terrified) as she remembers she had forgotten to push up the little bolt at the top of the French window that opens into the lawn. Probably it has blown a trifle open, an aggravating little way it has that she had often thought might prove in some evil hour inviting to a lurking burglar.

With a decided feeling of relief she sees the substantial (to her just then the delightful) form of a policeman walking quickly up and down across the street looking carefully around him, peering into dark doorways and peeping over fences.

And then all at once a great wave of pity sweeps over Mildred. Mildred has a very tender heart. Pity born all in a moment for the poor hunted wretch in the garden.

Perhaps it is his first offense. This dreadful band of burglars that are such a terror to the town may have got him ensnared and entangled in their toils quite against his will.

If he is caught he will be sent without fail to jail.

Mildred shudders. She has heard it is such a dreadful place, and often makes weak men bad and bad men worse. Of course crime should be punished, but yet that awful jail. If the stern officer of the law crosses the street and looks over their fence he will be certain to see the thief in the bright moonlight, and then he will be caught and sent to that enforced habitation of criminals. At the thought Mildred forgets herself and her fright, forgets everything but the outcast in the garden, and hurries over to the long French window. She finds it, as she had been afraid, slightly open. As she opens it wide she trembles, but remembers having read of little children not afraid of burglars, and why should she, a big woman? Mildred's friends would have laughed at the "big woman." She looks out into the night and bravely in her sweet soft voice speaks to the astonished man outside.

"You may come in here and hide for a little while. A policeman is looking for you now at this very moment across the street."

Vague and uncomfortable thoughts of compounding a felony and of being an accessory to a crime flit through her mind.

As for him, he advances reverently, cap in hand, fearing that it is a vision that will vanish if he speaks.

He wonders was there ever a Juliet as lovely as this girl in a blue dressing gown with a long plait of fair hair hanging over her shoulder, standing in the moonlight, sweet concern for his fate in her face. As he still hesitates, she goes on a little impatiently:

"You had really better come at once if you don't want to be caught. You may hide here this time, but I hope you will turn over a new leaf and never steal or do anything wrong again."

The missionary spirit that lies latent in all women warming up into life within her. Oh! she thinks, if she could only pluck this brand from the burning.

She sees it is a very handsome "brand" as he steps quietly into the room. At her words a gleam of something else besides admiration shines in his deep gray eyes.

"You are very good; I don't know how to thank you." He evidently has seen better days, she thinks. His voice and manner, as well as his appearance, are unmistakably those of a gentleman. Ah! the pity of it, for he looks quite young. He must be tired after his run; and sitting down herself she thoughtfully requests him to do the same. They have both lowered their voices to almost a whisper. "Is this the first time you have been guilty?" Mildred asks. As he sadly confesses it is not he lowers his head to hide the absurd gleam that comes again into his eyes. Absurd, indeed, for what is there to be amused at?

Mildred feels rather horrified, evidently a hardened criminal of the worst type and quite used to prison. "Have you never thought of reforming? Has no one ever tried to turn you from your evil ways or read to you in the penitentiary?" she whispered.

"Only once; a bounder with long hair and glasses," he whispered back, a turn for invention he hadn't suspected coming to the surface. Mildred feels quite stern at the levity of the tone.

"You shouldn't criticise anyone that meant kindly. I dare say he was a very good man. What started you on your downward path?"

"I was in love and the girl most cruelly jilted me," lies now coming quite glibly to his lips.

"Poor man!" Mildred sighs.

"She was a beautiful girl," he goes on enthusiastically, "and seemed as good as she was beautiful. She had large brown eyes and chestnut hair."

"Well, if I were you I would just try and forget her," Mildred breaks in, a strong feeling of resentment rising up against the unknown brunette. "I wouldn't let any woman ruin my life—but should just make up my mind to begin over again—working for an honest living and looking forward to that better, brighter life to come." Her voice has grown very sweet and earnest, and he really feels ashamed and thinks what a darling she is.

"Oh! if I could only persuade you—could only help you," she goes on. "What do you do—when you, when you?" She hesitates. Gallantly he comes to her assistance.

"When out of a job, oh! nothing. I just sleep anywhere, and help myself to food and clothes—being used to it you see it comes natural and is quite easy." She notices that his clothes, although old, are of a good style and cut quite the same kind as her brother and his friends wear. She wishes she dare steal up to her brother's room now to get a suit of his clothes to give this man—but what if it should awaken him —better not risk it. Instead she pulls off a ring she is wearing and gives it to him—he is most reluctant to take it, but she presses it on him, saying it is one she doesn't care for at all and that she has many others. She says if he accepts it she will take it as a sign and promise that he will try to do better in the future.

It will give him some meals and a place to lodge for a little while. She urges him to find some honest employment—and then looking out and seeing no sign of the policeman now—she opens the French window again and bids him good night.

On the 'varsity lawn Saturday afternoon Mildred is one of a large crowd of spectators watching a most exciting match of football between the H. Tigers and the home team. In a scrimmage near where she stands one of the 'varsity men with the ball in his arms rolls almost to her feet. In an awful flash of recognition she knows at once her burglar, and he the face of his dreams, the owner of the ring he must send back. The game continues, but one of the team is not playing in his usual splendid form, but makes several stupid muffs.

Mildred in hot resentment sees it all. Hallowe'en students, old clothes, pranks, policeman, flight. Well, if she ever meets him he will see! She does meet him and receives in cold disdain her ring.

Months later, thoroughly repentent, he gets it back again, and in its place Mildred wears a half loop of diamonds, bright stones that pave the short and pleasant way to a plain little gold one. —Canadian Magazine.

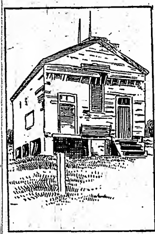
TO SAVE LANDMARK

A CHURCH THE OLDEST BUILDING IN INDIAN TERRITORY.

Fort Gibson a Place Very Rich in Historical Associations—Some of the Noted Characters Connected Therewith.

Guthrie, Okla.—Strong efforts are being made here to preserve the famous "old church on the hill" at Fort Gibson, I. T. The building is an old one, and figured prominently in the early days.

The above dispatch from Oklahoma's capital tells of the attempt to preserve a landmark which has stood for almost a century, and has been the scene of many western social functions during the time when Indian massacres and frontier fights were every-day occurrences. The old garrison church, located on what was known to the soldiers as Garrison's Hill, has been occupied continuously since 1832 and possesses the distinction of being the oldest building in Indian Territory. After its occupation as the garrison church, a school was opened within its timeworn walls and Henry M. Stanley, then a mere youngster, was engaged as its teacher.



OLDEST HOUSE IN INDIAN TERRITORY.

Fort Gibson, the oldest town in the territory, is rich in historic lore, very little of which has ever been recorded in print. The town was settled shortly after 1803, the date of the Louisiana purchase, and about 15 years later a military post was established there. From that time to this many distinguished men have made the fort their rendezvous, living in the old church, and to-day one may see headstones in the United States cemetery, less than a mile from the church, bearing the names of past war heroes who were killed or died there in the service of the flag. In the graveyard there are buried about 2,500 bodies of soldiers, all of whom figured more or less prominently in Indian warfare on the frontier.

The wife of Admiral Dewey, in the early days, married to Gen. Hazen, left her home in Cincinnati and for many years lived at the fort, and was declared to have been the most stylish woman who ever visited the place. Zachary Taylor, afterwards president of the United States, and Jefferson Davis, afterwards president of the confederacy, both lived at and commanded the fort. From this place Jeff Davis, then an untried lieutenant, eloped with Miss Betty Taylor to Van Buren, Ark., without the consent of either of the principals' parents. After the elopement Davis commanded the fort, living within its precincts until the time of the Mexican war, in which conflict he won distinction by saving the day for the Americans at the battle of Buena Vista. Gen. Taylor after that exploit exhibited great pride in Davis, and, it is declared, almost forgave the act which bereft him of a daughter and gave him a son-in-law.

Gen. Samuel Houston, a character who is surrounded by a veil of mystery, came to the fort after resigning the governorship of Tennessee, leaving his newly-wedded wife, coming west and joining a band of Cherokees, among whom he was a feared and admired leader. Not long after his arrival at Fort Gibson, he married a pretty Indian maiden, Tallihina Rogers, and with her he lived at the historic place until his departure for the war in Texas in 1832. By his heroic conduct in the battle in which his troops routed the Mexicans and won the independence of Texas, he was favored by being made the first governor of that state.

Washington Irving wrote his "Tales of a Traveler" just outside the old parade ground on Garrison Hill. In Longfellow's "Evangeline," he describes graphically and accurately scenery about Fort Gibson.

Among other notables who visited the place are Gen. Winifred Scott, Gen. Robert E. Lee, Gen. George B. McClellan; Col. Coppinger, who commanded the fort; James G. Blaine, Gen. Arbuckle, who was in command at one time; Gen. Belknap, Col. Loomis, Col. Wilson, Col. Morrison Braxton Bragg, Capt. Little, Early Steen, Capt. McLous and Albert Sidney Johnson, a man who figured prominently in southern history.

W. W. GARRISON.

Both Right.

A well-known judge was standing at the door of a ballroom when a very beautiful woman passed him.

"What a lovely woman!" whispered the judge, but so loudly that the lady overheard his remark.

Turning her head she recognized the speaker.

RUSSELL SAGE QUITS

LITTLE BY LITTLE THE OLD MAN LETS GO.

Not the Miser Generally Represented—Rigid Economy Necessary in Early Life Becomes a Habit—Given to Advising.

From New York comes the intelligence that Russell Sage, the greatest money lender that the world ever saw, is frequenting his office less and less, sometimes an entire month separating his visits, and that in a short time he will retire altogether from the financial swirl and strife of money-getting.

All the enormous transactions which less than a year ago the great financier would trust to no hands but his own are now being manipulated by clerks, not even the name Russell Sage entering into the deals. It is not hard for one to guess the reason for the action of Mr. Sage in casting business to one side and retiring to private life. The fact is his iron constitution is beginning to feel the wear and tear which constant attention to office duties necessitates, and after so many years of steady labor the old gentleman is himself forced to admit that his fighting days are practically over.

RUSSELL SAGE.

Many persons who have achieved their information concerning the character of Russell Sage from hearsay declare that the man has been a miser all his life, and neither wealth nor old age would ever be sufficient excuse to cause his retirement from the business world; but, although some time ago it seemed that their declarations were very true, it is now certain that Mr. Sage believes that he has enough of this world's goods, and intends to step out.

And another fact. The great financier, as much as his transactions would seem to point to it, never was a miser in any sense of the word. His policy was to eliminate from his schedule all fads and fancies, and never to buy anything the purchase of which he might have cause to regret. This fact is illustrated by his declaration, at the time when the tariff issue was so widely talked of, that the suit which he wore cost him only $8.50, and he was not ashamed to wear it, because it served as an index to his position on the great question, namely, that low duties made cheap clothing.

Russell Sage made it his policy to turn everything which came his way into money, and was always willing to lend anybody cash, providing the proper security was forthcoming. His friends tell a story about him and his money-making instinct. He had received an advertisement from a theatrical firm inclosing a check for four cents to pay for the time which he was obliged to spend in reading it carefully. The same sort of a letter was sent to thousands of other New Yorkers, but it is recorded that the only check which was cashed was that made out in Mr. Sage's name.

A secret of the success of this great money-lender is that although he was happy to have others borrow from him, he was never during his whole career known to ask pecuniary aid of any person. His economy has always been manifest in things of small value, as his nature at one time rebelled at the thought of paying three cents for a one-cent paper. The incident occurred one evening after working hours when he was bound for his train. He had reached the depot and found that from the nickel which he handed the newsboy he had only received two cents in change. He immediately retraced his steps and demanded the correct amount from the boy.

Russell Sage always has a bit of advice at the end of his tongue for any young man who may be near to receive it. He believes in the church, and declares that every one should give to the Christian movement as much as he or she can consistently afford.

Greed for money, although it finds a place in this great man's make-up, is not supreme in his nature. Throughout his life Mr. Sage has always enjoyed a fine physique, and along with this came his love for out-of-door pleasures. He has been a horse fancier since the first day that he was considered old enough to sit astride one of the animals, and, in fact, has owned several equines which were declared to be fairly fast.

Between his schemes for money-making run many morals and the texts for many sermons which any preacher would be proud to set before his congregation. Russell Sage may be compared to the country banker, whom David Westcott so neatly describes, and regarding his joy at turning transactions into money and his love for thoroughbred horses, the author seems to have had the money-lender in his mind when constructing his characters.

The wounds were dressed, and while they are decidedly sore no serious results are anticipated.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

A Citizen Replies to Mr. Sweaas.

Referring to an article appearing in the Thief River Falls Press signed by one A. A. Sweaas in reference to the offer by the City of Thief River Falls to give their old City Hall and Jail for a Court House to Red Lake County. It behooves the farmers of Red Lake County not to have the wool drawn over their eyes by such a light and flimsy offer where it is the Attorney General's opinion and the Supreme Court has ruled that the officers of any municipal council or otherwise could not give away public property without laying themselves liable to the tax payers of such a district. So what the Court has decided cannot be done it seems impossible to me that such a matter could be backed up by a bond that it would be done.

MUNICIPAL CORPORAITONS — Village has no power to donate village property to be used for court house purposes.

Attorney General's Office.

Dear Sir:—

In response to your verbal request, I have examined somewhat farther the subject of your former inquiry with reference to the power of a county to receive conditionally a deed to certain real property in the village of............from private citizens of that village.

I see no reason to change in any substantial particular the opinion written rather hastily July 15th to Mr......... .....president of the village council of.............., a copy of which was on that date forwarded to you, as being a reply to a joint inquiry.

A settled rule in this state, adopted repeatedly by our supreme court, prevents a donation to be made by a village to a county of any property to be used as a court house, or any funds to be used in its construction and authorizes the recovery back of any money so donated. The cases cited by you of Borough of Henderson vs. Sibley County, 28 Minn. 555 and Village of Glencoe vs. McLeod County, 40 Minn. 44, support this proposition. The supreme court in the case of Bazille vs. Board of County Commissioners of Ramsey County, 73 North Western Reporter 845, held that the county had no power to purchase land for the express purpose of making a donation, and that if it entered into a contract to purchase, which was known to the vendor, that the purchase price could not by such vendor be recovered in an action.

W. B. DOUGLAS, ATT'Y GENERAL.

If the said Mr. Sweaas will look back some eight or ten months ago he will see where the citizens and papers of Thief River Falls complimented and thanked the citizens of this city for helping to obtain a certain sale at that place. Very true, we did not have any part on the opening of the reservation, nor did we turn a stone to delay or hamper it. It was for the benefit of the citizens of Thief River Falls to have the reservation opened.

Regarding the taxes of Red Lake county Mr. Sweaas is as much off as he is in other matters that he tries to lay before the farmers of Red Lake County. He does not seem to be aware that there is a ditch lien of $117,000 filed against Red Lake County lands which is drawing interest and which is payable one-tenth each year. If he will take the trouble to look at the full county tax that is collected from the farmers of Red Lake county he will notice that there is a reduction in the rate of taxation each year as follows: in 1901 the full taxes to the County for roads, bridges, and other matters was 15.17 mills, 1902 9.47 mills, 1903 9 77 mills, 1904 9.07 mills, showing that the County Commissioners have handled its affairs most economically and with less expense to the tax payers as the County grows older.

It is very true with the development of the county, with the building of new school houses and new roads that the tax payers are assessed higher but this is for local improvements, and then there is a ditch lien on ⅓ of the land of $28.75 each quarter. This is not a criterion to follow as lands in Bray, Numedahl and Polk Centre and towns where there has been no local improvements in the matter of drainage are paying the same rate of taxation as are similar lands in Polk County.

Regarding the Buse property which was purchased. Mr. Sweaas' value of said property is fully as much in variance as it is in regard to the taxes. A property that is bringing an income of $750 per year in rentals must be worth something, and that if Thief River Falls had not thought to bring the county seat fight up at this time the price would have been considered very reasonable and cheap. It is really a matter the commissioners should have purchased years ago only they were handicapped, having no funds on hand.

Today they are renting the side properties for a sum amounting to about $200 each year so it in fact brings a free Court House to the County with a vault built into the building and a jail handy for use. Any fair minded man outside of the City of Thief River Falls will admit that the present court house belonging to the County of Red Lake was purchased as a good business proposition. It is suffic'ent to take care of the county officers in a very comodions way and also to handle the district court matter. The property is 100 by 125 feet in dimension.

Considering the value of other properties in Red Lake Falls, I think the Commissioners did wisely in purchasing the same and that the same was purchased at a fair value.

LATE COURT DOINGS

Brief Resume of Late Doings at Last Week's Session of the March Term of the District Court.

The petit jurors drawn for the term of the District Court were discharged last Friday, and a few court cases were taken up by Judge Watts until the following day when he returned to Crookston. The following is a brief resume of the cases tried since our last issue: Wm Belair vs. Robertson Lumber company. Evidence taken and written arguments to be made to Judge Watts.

Merit Waslie vs. Town of Numedahl, for care of pauper; arguments made and evidence taken but no decision rendered.

A. P. Erickson vs. John Grady, administrator, in hands of court. No decision.

Merchants State Bank vs. Jacob Hannem, replevin suit; decision not yet made.

Case of Rice vs. Freund postponed on account of illness of plaintiff.

The judge will go to Lambert some time during the next few weeks to try several cases that are pending from that neighborhood.

ROCHEFORD NOT GUILTY

Jury Clears Thief River Youth Who Was Tried for Breaking Into Box Car at Up-River Town.

The case of the state of Minnesota vs. Rocheford was tried before Judge Watts last Thursday, attorneys Mabey and McIntyre appearing for the defendant and County Attorney Garmo for the state.

The arguments lasted most of the day, and the judge delivered his charge to the jury, shortly after supper, a verdict being returned of not guilty after a brief deliberation.

Rocheford was charged with breaking into a Great Northern car at Thief River Falls last year and bound over to the grand jury, but released on bail, and the evidence introduced was not sufficient to make the case against him stand in the eyes of the jury.

COURT TERM IN MAY

Several Cases To Be Tried at Special Term of District Court Here Next Month.

A brief term of the District Court for Red Lake county has been set at some date about the 16th of May, at which time Judge Watts will be here to try several cases on the present calendar that have been put over from the present calendar.

Quite a number of cases were not ready for trial and the Judge decided to hold the special term in order to dispose of them before the fall grind.

A Prosperous Creamery.

Thief River News: Treasurer Gustafson, of the St. Hilaire creamery, was in the city last Friday. He had with him the checks for the creamery patrons for the month of February. Although February is considered the poorest month in the year, the St. Hilaire creamery paid out over $1,600 to farmers for cream. The largest check received by one person for the month of February was received by Gus Konikson, who was paid $63.07. Others receiving sums of from $30 to $40.

The St. Hilaire creamery is a well patronized institution and has proved a great benefit to the farmers living in the vicinity of St. Hilaire, who own the institution. In the summer months it pays out as high as $3,000 per month for cream, and is one of the institutions that is doing much for Red Lake county.

H. W. LEE GIVES BONDS

Waives Reading of Indictment and Asks That Postponement of Case Be Made Until Next Term.

H. W. Lee was brought down from Thief River Falls last Friday morning by Sheriff Linnihan who arrested him on a bench warrant issued by Judge Watts and immediately upon arriving appeared before the court, pleaded not guilty to the charge, waived the reading of the indictment and asked that his case be continued until the next term of court, and as the county attorney consented the Judge granted his request, and asked bonds in the sum of $300 for his appearance at that time.

The indictment against Mr. Lee charges him with larceny in the second degree, and was brought at the instance of Ole Arneson, a resident of Thief River Falls.

Mr. Lee claims that he can completely exonerate himself of the charges against him, while Arneson's friends are as strong in the opinion that they can make the charge stick, and in the meanwhile the public will sit back and watch the proceedings with interest.

IMPORTANT MEETING

Meeting of Those Interested In Advancement of Red River Valley To Be Held at Crookston.

There will be a meeting of those interested in advertising the advantages of the Red River Valley in Crookston on April 7. There has long since been a discussion of the matter among those interested and it has finally been decided to hold a convention and the call has been issued by Israel Sjorherg, of Roseau, Roseau county. The convention will assemble in the city hall in Crookston at ten o'clock on the day indicated and proceed to organize a Red River Immigration and Advertising Bureau. The organization has been thoroughly discussed and an organization looking toward cooperation in advertising will be effected if present plans carry.

The following letter is self explanatory:

Editor Gazette:—

Sir—A convention for the purpose of discusing and inaugurating an effective system of advertising the upper Red River Valley in Minnesota will be held on Friday, April 7th in the city of Crookston.

All interested in the upbuilding of this section of the state are cordially invited to participate. Assurances from leading men all over the valley have been received and a large and enthusiastic convention is assured.

Very truly yours,
ISRAEL SJORBERG.

WYLIE FARMER DEAD.

Peter Anderson Prominent Farmer of Polk Center, Dies.

Peter Anderson, a prominent and prosperous young farmer of Wylie, died Saturday at that place after a short illness.

Mr. Anderson had recently decided to try his fortune in the west and had sold his farm. Last week he sold off all of his horses and machinery and had nearly completed his arrangements for his departure with his family when he was taken suddenly very ill. His family called in a physician at once and everything possible was done but he died in four days from the time he was taken ill.

Mr Anderson was very well known here and was a frequent visitor in the city, doing the bulk of his trading in this city. It has not been learned whether his family will go west but it is believed they will remain at Wylie at least for a time.

THE NEW SERVICE

Nothing Definately Announced In Regard To New Train Service on Branch.

Various rumors have been afloat this week as to the establishment of the new train service over the Great Northern, and Monday's Crookston Times announced that the new schedule would go into effect the coming Monday.

A large number of railroad officials were here in their special car Monday, but so far as The Gazette could learn gave out nothing in regard to how soon the change would go into effect.

The track-laying and ballasting crews have finished their labors and everything on the new extension is ready, so that it is apparent that the service will be put on as soon as arrangements can be completed.

The dispatchers are said to be working on the new schedule, and as soon as it can be announced the people along the line can look for the new service, which will likely commence the coming Monday.

ASSESSORS WILL MEET

April 27th Set As the Day for the Gathering of the Recently Elected Town and City Assessors.

Thursday, April 27th, the last Thursday in the month, as prescribed by law, is the date set by the statute for the annual convention of Red Lake county property assessors at the office of County Auditor Ford and all assessors duly elected must attend or lose their jobs. The notices being sent out by County Auditor Ford state implicitly that all assessors who are not present will forfeit their positions and the state laws prescribe that the auditor shall after the first day of June filll all vacant places with his own selections, provided the town board fails to fill any vacancies that occur.

The meeting of the county assessors in this city is a matter of importance to the entire county and will mean more to the coming year's tax receipts than most people have any idea of. The assessor primarily is the man who sets a price on your property who says what you shall pay into the county strong box and the meeting in this city the last Thursday of the month will determine what methods shall be pursued by them in their labors, what general plan will be followed in the work and what classes of assessments will be made.

The auditor has all of the assessment books in process of preparation and at the meeting of the scribes they will be given out. No assessment of real estate will be made this year as that class of property received the attention of the assessors last year and is assessed every two years, but the assessor of the several newly organized towns of Red Lake county will be required to list the real property this year for the first time. The assessment books are made returnable to the auditor on July first and property acquired after the first day of May is not taxable for this year.

LATE COURT DOINGS

Brief Resume of Late Doings at Last Week's Session of the March Term of the District Court.

The petit jurors drawn for the term of the District Court were discharged last Friday, and a few court cases were taken up by Judge Watts until the following day when he returned to Crookston. The following is a brief resume of the cases tried since our last issue: Wm Belair vs. Robertson Lumber company. Evidence taken and written arguments to be made to Judge Watts.

Merit Waslie vs. Town of Numedahl, for care of pauper; arguments made and evidence taken but no decision rendered.

A. P. Erickson vs. John Grady, administrator, in hands of court. No decision.

Merchants State Bank vs. Jacob Hannem, replevin suit; decision not yet made.

Case of Rice vs. Freund postponed on account of illness of plaintiff.

The judge will go to Lambert some time during the next few weeks to try several cases that are pending from that neighborhood.

ROCHEFORD NOT GUILTY

Jury Clears Thief River Youth Who Was Tried for Breaking Into Box Car at Up-River Town.

The case of the state of Minnesota vs. Rocheford was tried before Judge Watts last Thursday, attorneys Mabey and McIntyre appearing for the defendant and County Attorney Germo for the state.

The arguments lasted most of the day, and the judge delivered his charge to the jury shortly after supper, a verdict being returned of not guilty after a brief deliberation.

Rocheford was charged with breaking into a Great Northern car at Thief River Falls last year and bound over to the grand jury, but released on bail, and the evidence introduced was not sufficient to make the case against him stand in the eyes of the jury.

COURT TERM IN MAY

Several Cases To Be Tried at Special Term of District Court Here Next Month.

A brief term of the District Court for Red Lake county has been set at some date about the 16th of May, at which time Judge Watts will be here to try several cases on the present calendar that have been put over from the present calendar.

Quite a number of cases were not ready for trial and the Judge decided to hold the special term in order to dispose of them before the fall grind.

A Prosperous Creamery.

Thief River News: Treasurer Gustafson, of the St. Hilaire creamery, was in the city last Friday. He had with him the checks for the creamery patrons for the month of February. Although February is considered the poorest month in the year, the St. Hilaire creamery paid out over $1,600 to farmers for cream. The largest check received by one person for the month of February was received by Gus Koniksou, who was paid $63.07. Others receiving sums of from $30 to $40.

The St. Hilaire creamery is a well patronized institution and has proved a great benefit to the farmers living in the vicinity of St. Hilaire, who own the institution. In the summer months it pays out as high as $3,000 per month for cream, and is one of the institutions that is doing much for Red Lake county.

H. W. LEE GIVES BONDS

Waives Reading of Indictment and Asks That Postponement of Case Be Made Until Next Term.

H. W. Lee was brought down from Thief River Falls last Friday morning by Sheriff Linnihan who arrested him on a bench warrant issued by Judge Watts and immediately upon arriving appeared before the court, pleaded not guilty to the charge, waived the reading of the indictment and asked that his case be continued until the next term of court, and as the county attorney consented the Judge granted his request, and asked bonds in the sum of $300 for his appearance at that time.

The indictment against Mr. Lee charges him with larceny in the second degree, and was brought at the instance of Ole Arneson, a resident of Thief River Falls.

Mr. Lee claims that he can completely exonerate himself of the charges against him, while Arneson's friends are as strong in the opinion that they can make the charge stick, and in the meanwhile the public will sit back and watch the proceedings with interest.

IMPORTANT MEETING

Meeting of Those Interested In Advancement of Red River Valley To Be Held at Crookston.

There will be a meeting of those interested in advertising the advantages of the Red River Valley in Crookston on April 7. There has long since been a discussion of the matter among those interested and it has finally been decided to hold a convention and the call has been issued by Israel Sjorberg, of Roseau, Roseau county. The convention will assemble in the city hall in Crookston at ten o'clock on the day indicated and proceed to organize a Red River Immigration and Advertising Bureau. The organization has been thoroughly discussed and an organization looking toward cooperation in advertising will be effected if present plans carry.

The following letter is self explanatory:

Editor Gazette:—

Sir—A convention for the purpose of discusing and inaugurating an effective system of advertising the upper Red River Valley in Minnesota will be held on Friday, April 7th in the city of Crookston.

All interested in the upbuilding of this section of the state are cordially invited to participate. Assurances from leading men all over the valley have been received and a large and enthusiastic convention is assured.

You will greatly assist in the good move by publishing this in your valuable paper for which I beg to thank you in advance.

Very truly yours,
ISRAEL SJORBERG.

WYLIE FARMER DEAD.

Peter Anderson Prominent Farmer of Polk Center, Dies.

Peter Anderson, a prominent and prosperous young farmer of Wylie, died Saturday at that place after a short illness.

Mr. Anderson had recently decided to try his fortune in the west and had sold his farm. Last week he sold off all of his horses and machinery and had nearly completed his arrangements for his departure with his family when he was taken suddenly very ill. His family called in a physician at once and everything possible was done but he died in four days from the time he was taken ill.

Mr Anderson was very well known here and was a frequent visitor in the city, doing the bulk of his trading in this city. It has not been learned whether his family will go west but it is believed they will remain at Wylie at least for a time.

THE NEW SERVICE

Nothing Definately Announced In Regard To New Train Service on Branch.

Various rumors have been afloat this week as to the establishment of the new train service over the Great Northern, and Monday's Crookston Times announced that the new schedule would go into effect the coming Monday.

A large number of railroad officials were here in their special car Monday, but so far as The Gazette could learn gave out nothing in regard to how soon the change would go into effect.

The track-laying and ballasting crews have finished their labors and everything on the new extension is ready, so that it is apparent that the service will be put on as soon as arrangements can be completed.

The dispatchers are said to be working on the new schedule, and as soon as it can be announced the people along the line can look for the new service, which will likely commence the coming Monday.

ABOUT FISHING SEASON.

Extract From Game Laws Shows What May Be Caught.

Several inquiries have been made regarding what kind of fish may be taken between the 1st day of March and the 29th of May and the Gazette publishes the following extract from the fish and game laws of the state so that all may be posted:

"No person shall catch, take, kill or have in possession or under control, for any purpose whatever, any of the fish hereinafter mentioned within the periods herein limited, to wit: Any variety of trout, except lake trout, between the first day of September and the fifteenth day of April following; any black, gray or Oswego bass between the first of March and the twenty-ninth day of May following; any variety of herring between the first day of April and the first day of September following; any variety of pike, muskalonge, whitefish, crapple, perch, sunfish, sturgeon, lake trout, catfish, or any other variety of fish between the first day of March and the first day of May following; except that pickerel, suckers, bullheads, redhorse and carp may be speared ond had in possession between the 15th day of March and the 1st day of May following.

"Any person who shall violate any of the provisions of this sec. shall be guilty of misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not less than (10) dollars, nor more than (50) dollars, and costs of prosecution, or by imprisonment in the county jail for not less than (10) days nor more than (30) days for each and every fish so caught, taken, killed or had in possession or under control."

Climatic Cures.

The influence of climata conditions in the cure of consumption is very much overdrawn. The poor patient, and the rich patient, too, can do much better at home by proper attention to food digestion, and a regular use of German Syrup. Free expectoration in the morning is made certain by German Syrup, so is a good night's rest and the absence of that weakening cough and debilitating night sweat. Restless nights and the exhaustion due to coughing, the greatest danger and dread of the consumptive, can be prevented or stopped by taking German Syrup liberally ond regularly. Should you be able to go to a warmer clime, you will find that of the thousands of consumptives there, the few who are benefited and regain strength are those who use German Syrup. Trial bottles, 25c; regular size, 75c. At all druggists A. L. Reichort.

Duties of Notaries.

The attention of the Gazette has been called to the passage of a law by the present legislature, which amends the law under which notary publics now exist. It will be of interest to all, and we publish the change, which is as follows:

Each notary public so appointed, commissioned and qualified, shall have power throughout this state, while residing within the county for which he was appointed, to administer all oaths required or authorized to be administered in this state; to take and certify all depositions to be used in any of the Courts in this state; to take and certify all acknowledgments of deed, mortgages, liens, powers of attorney and other instruments in writing, and to receive, make out and record notarial protests.

Every notary public, taking an acknowledgment of an instrument, taking a deposition, administering an oath, or making an notarial protest, shall, immediately following his signature to the jurat or certificate of acknowledgment, indorse the date of the expiration of his commission; such endorsement may be legibly written, stamped or printed upon the instrument, but must be disconnected from the seal, and shall be substantially in the following form: My commission expires ——, 19—.

Sec. 2. This act shall take effect and be in force from and after Jan. 1st 1906.

Millionaire's Poor Stomach.

The worn out stomach of the over-fed millionaire is often paraded in the public prints as a horrible example of the [illegible] of great wealth. But millionaires are not the only ones who are afflicted with bad stomachs. The proportion is far greater among the toilers. Dyspepsia and indigestion are rampant among these people, and they suffer far worse tortures than the millionaire unless they avail themselves of a standard medicine like Green's August Flower, which has been a favorite household remedy for all stomach troubles for over thirty-five years. August Flower rouses the torpid liver, thus creating appetite and insuring perfect digestion. It tones and vitalizes the entire system and makes life worth living, no matter what your station. Trial bottles, 25c; ragular size 75c. At all druggists. A. L. Reichort.

Don't Borrow Trouble.

It is a bad habit to borrow anything, but the worst thing you can possibly borrow, is trouble. When sick, sore, heavy, weary and worn out by the pains and poisons of dyspepsia, biliousness, Bright's disease, and similar internal disorders, don't sit down and brood over your symptoms, but fly for relief to Electric Bitters. Here you will find sure and permanent forgetfulness of all your troubles, and your body will not be burdened by a load of debt disease. At W. A. Schrioter's drug store. Price 50c. Guaranteed.

Perhaps those who don't have any children in school will not know what Red marks are. If a pupil gets below 75 per cent in any subject it is put on the report card in red ink. These are what we are trying to get rid of.

The Easter Hat.

The Easter hat this year is to be something entirely new, and it will have much to do with creating the new type of Easter girl.

For many years past Easter Sunday has come so early in the season that a hat of straw and flowers has seemed distinctly incongruous. This year the Easter hat will be suitable to the season. It will be a varied hat as to its shape, and in size it will strike a happy medium. The brims of the majority of the hats flare in the most astonishing of ways. These not only turn up in the front and at the sides, but in the back. The most noticeable feature, in fact, of the newest hats is the way the brim turns at the back, and, generally speaking, it is here that the most effective trimming is massed,—April Woman's Home Companion.

RUSSIANS BLOWN UP

SEVENTY-FIVE PERSONS KILLED BY THE EXPLOSION OF A BOMB AT HARBIN.

Artillery Depot Wrecked, Millions of Finished Projectiles Destroyed and Immense Number of Others Rendered Useless—Renewal of Hostilities Expected Shortly South of Gunshu Pass, Manchuria.

St. Petersburg, April 4.—Seventy-five persons, including four artillerymen and forty Chinese coolies, were killed during the day by the explosion of a bomb in the artillery depot in Harbin. The man who caused the explosion was also killed. The entire laboratory, a huge establishment, was wrecked and 10,000,000 projectiles were destroyed—2,000 packing cases containing 5,000 each. Millions of other projectiles not yet completed were made useless.

WAR WILL BE CONTINUED.

Complete Change in Situation as Regards Peace.

Paris, April 1.—Whatever hopefulness the peace situation may have had some days ago the situation has now completely changed and there is every prospect that the war will drag on again. Consequently dispatches appearing in America saying that Foreign Minister Delcasse and Dr. Motono, the Japanese minister to France, have been conferring at the former's house relative to peace are inaccurate. The foregoing view of the situation is taken by the parties immediately concerned and it is asserted with the authority of the foreign office and the Japanese legation.

RUSSIANS WILL FIGHT

RENEWAL OF HOSTILITIES EXPECTED TO BEGIN SHORTLY BELOW GUNSHU PASS.

Gunshu Pass, Manchuria, April 4.—A renewal of fighting is expected shortly. The concentration of the Russian army is complete, with its advance lines south of the station of Sipinghai, seventy-four miles north of Tie pass. The Japanese are screening their movements well by means of cavalry and it is difficult to locate the bulk of their army. A heavy movement seems to be in progress on the Russian flanks. The railroad station at Chaagtufu, forty to fifty miles above Tie pass, is occupied by Japanese artillery, but so far as ascertainable it does not cover a large body of troops.

A two-wheeled cart of the Russo-Chinese bank containing more than $500,000, which was lost during the retreat from Mukden, has been found, but the cash chest of the Ninth regiment of artillery, which was also lost, is still undiscovered.

A movement of Chinese bandits led by Japanese officers through Mongolia in the direction of Tsitsihar, 300 miles west of Harbin, has been reported and pressure is being brought by the Japanese in China for an open alliance with Japan. Yuan Shi Kai, governor of Pechili province, and General Ma, commander of the Chinese troops on the frontier, are said to be at the head of this agitation.

HIS FEET BLOWN OFF

POLICE OFFICIAL AT LODZ, RUSSIAN POLAND, VICTIM OF BOMB OUTRAGE.

Lodz, Russian Poland, April 1.—Police Commissioner Szabslovicz of the Second district was seriously injured during the day by a bomb which was thrown at him in the street.

The police commissioner had been summoned by telephone to come to the office of the chief of police and started on foot, followed by a policeman. The former noticed at the corner of Konstantinowsk and Zawaski streets a poorly clad man, carrying a basket. As Szabalovicz approached the man suddenly hurled a bomb which exploded with terrific force blowing off the commissioner's feet and severely wounding him in the breast. It is feared his injuries will prove fatal.

Szabalovicz is hated by the socialists. He is charged with the killing of socialists during the disturbances here in December last.

RIOTING AT WARSAW.

Four Jews Killed and Forty Wounded by Soldiers.

Warsaw, April 3.—A serious conflict occurred at 7:30 p. m. in Dzika street, where a Jewish Socialist society, known as the Buki, had organized a demonstration. The troops were called to disperse the gathering and fired into the crowd, killing four persons and wounding forty others.

Supplies for Vladivostok.

St. Petersburg, April 1.—More than ten trains stocked with provisions and war material are leaving St. Petersburg daily for Vladivostok.

CHARGED WITH CONSPIRACY.

J. Morgan Smith, His Wife and Nan Patterson Indicted.

New York, March 31.—The grand jury in this city during the day handed down indictments against J. Morgan Smith, Julia Smith, his wife, and Nan Patterson charging them jointly with conspiracy. The indictments are based upon a letter alleged to have been written by Julia Smith to Caesar Young in which it is alleged was a threat and a demand for money for the Patterson girl.

This action by the grand jury followed a hearing at the criminal courts building at which several witnesses, including the widow of Caesar Young and Mrs. Young's brother-in-law, William Lucs, were examined by Assistant District Attorney Rand who conducted the recent trial of Nan Patterson, charged with Caesar Young's murder, which resulted in a disagreement by the jury. The arrest of Smith and his wife at Cincinnati, according to the local authorities, will have an important bearing upon the new trial of Nan Patterson on the charge of murder, set for April 10. At a previous trial an attempt was made to prove that the revolver with which Young was shot was purchased by Smith and a woman the day before the tragedy occurred.

Smith and his wife have been arrested in Cincinnati after a chase covering almost a year.

ROOSEVELT'S OUTING

PRESIDENT LEAVES WASHINGTON ON HIS SOUTHERN AND WESTERN TRIP.

Washington, April 3.—With cheers and good wishes resounding at the Pennsylvania depot the president at 9:05 a. m. left on a special train for a trip through the South and West. Among those at the station were many friends of the president, including Postmaster General Cortelyou and Secretary Metcalf of the department of commerce and labor.

The special train, which is one of the finest the Pennsylvania road ever has sent out of Washington, consists of three cars, the president's private car Rocket, the Pullman sleeper Forest and the combination baggage and buffet car Viceroy. The train is handsomely fitted and contains every known appliance to insure the comfort and safety of the passengers. In the party besides the president were Secretary William Loeb, Jr., General S. B. M. Young, Dr. Alexander Lambert, Lieutenant C. R. Fortescue, one of the president's aides; A. C. Latta and J. L. McGrew, stenographers to the president; H. A. Strohmeyer, photographer, and representatives of the newspaper press associations.

The trip is being made primarily to enable the president to attend the reunion of his old regiment, the rough riders, which is to be held at San Antonio, Tex., next Friday, and to hunt big game in Oklahoma and Colorado.

ACCEPTS ROCKEFELLER'S GIFT.

Action of American Board for Foreign Missions.

Boston, March 30.—The American board of commissioners for foreign missions announced during the day that its prudentials committee had accepted a report of the sub-committee recommending the acceptance of the gift of $100,000 by John D. Rockefeller, but that final action on the matter had been postponed for two weeks. The report of the sub-committee, in the language of a statement issued by the board during the day, "was received and accepted as expressing the utmost judgment of the prudential committee and the executive officers" and was to the effect that the committee could not accede to the protest of those who objected to the acceptance of the gift.

DUE TO EXCESSIVE HEAT.

Two Pittsburg Mill Hands Dead and Others Seriously Ill.

Pittsburg, March 29.—Two millworkers have died, several are in a serious condition and many have been compelled to quit their duties in the mills in this city and vicinity owing to the excessive heat. The temperature registered 78 degrees and it was the first time within recollection that so much suffering has existed among mill employes on account of warm weather in March.

BLOODY TRIBAL WARFARE.

Natives of Liberia Engage in Deadly Combat.

Liverpool, April 4.—According to a report brought by the Royal Mail steamer Sokoto from West Africa, tribal warfare is now waging in Liberia. Natives of the Picanannynes tribe on March 13 attacked Cestos, killing sixty men and eighty women. The Cestos natives are organizing a big counter expedition. When the Sokoto sailed a fierce encounter, with much slaughter, was expected.

MANY MINERS KILLED

THIRTY-FOUR BELIEVED TO HAVE PERISHED IN LEITER MINE AT ZEIGLER, ILL.

Fifteen Bodies Recovered From the Scene of the Disaster and the Balance of the Entombed Men Are Undoubtedly Dead—Explosion of Accumulated Gas in the Lower Working the Probable Cause.

Benton, Ill., April 4.—Some forty miners were entombed during the day in Joseph Leiter's mine at Zeigler by a terrific explosion of gas, and it is probable that over thirty of the buried men are dead. Fifteen dead bodies have been found. The explosion, it is supposed, was due to the fact that the Leiter mines are not worked Sunday, thus allowing gas to accumulate in the lower workings.

When between thirty-five and forty miners had descended into the mine to resume work, an explosion blew the mouth of the mine high into the air. One of the steel cages was blown to the surface from the bottom of a 500-foot shaft. The shock of the explosion was felt at Benton, twelve miles northeast of Zeigler. A teamster driving along a road half a mile from the mine was covered with falling cinders, and debris covered the floor of his wagon half an inch deep.

One miner was killed and four were seriously injured at the mouth of the shaft in which the explosion occurred.

The work of rescue was begun at once by miners who were arriving when the explosion took place, but the main shaft was demolished so that rescue work has to be carried on through the air shaft.

At midnight the dead were estimated at thirty-four, and the injured at five. Up to that hour fifteen bodies had been taken out. Besides these bodies three were removed alive but with fatal injuries.

COMMISSION IS NAMED

WAR DEPARTMENT ANNOUNCES MEMBERSHIP OF NEW PANAMA CANAL BOARD.

Washington, April 3.—The personnel of the new isthmian canal commission is as follows:

Theodore P. Shonts, chairman; Charles E. Magoon, governor of canal zone; John F. Wallace, chief engineer; Rear Admiral M. T. Endicott, U. S. N.; Brigadier General Peter C. Hains, U. S. A., retired; Colonel Oswald M. Ernst, Corps Engineers, U. S. A.; Benjamin M. Harrod.

These names were announced at the war department during the day and in connection with the announcement Secretary Taft gave out for publication a statement showing the allotments of salaries to the new commissioners and his own letter to the president and one from the latter explaining the plan of reorganization of the commission, the reasons therefor and the particular duties to be assigned to each commissioner. The first reads as follows:

"The president has made an order allowing a salary of $7,500, with travelling expenses, to each member of the commission and to the chairman of the commission the additional compensation of $22,500, to the chief engineer the additional compensation of $17,500 and to the governor of the zone the additional compensation of $10,000. The head of each department is allowed the use of a furnished house upon the isthmus and his traveling expenses when traveling on the business of the commission. The total is $102,000. The salaries and allowances under the former commission amounted to $120,000."

SECRETARY HAY AT NAPLES.

Declares Trip Has Greatly Improved His Health.

Naples, April 3.—The White Star line steamship Cretic, with Secretary of State John Hay and Mrs. Hay on board, arrived here Sunday after a pleasant voyage. Mr. Hay declares that his health has been greatly improved by the trip, and Mrs. Hay also is enjoying the voyage. During the day Secretary and Mrs. Hay drove about the city and later took luncheon at a hotel on the heights above Naples. They returned to the Cretic late in the afternoon and the vessel sailed for Genoa.

OLD SCALE WILL BE PAID.

Threatened Strike of Sixty Thousand Miners Averted.

Philadelphia, April 1.—The soft coal operators during the afternoon stated that they had practically agreed to renew the wage scale. This will prevent the threatened strike of 50,000 miners in the bituminous district. A joint conference of the operators and miners will be held in Altoona April 4 to complete the agreement.

Four Men Instantly Killed.

Troy, N. Y., March 29.—Four men were killed in an explosion of three powder mills owned by the Dupont Powder company at Schaghticoke, near here during the day. The bodies of the men were blown 300 feet from the wreck, and the windows of every house in the vicinity were shattered.

Red Lake Falls Gazette

L. A. DAUTREMONT, PROPRIETOR
SAM S. HAISLET, EDITOR AND MANAGER

Published weekly, Thursday evening, and entered as second-class matter in the post office at Red Lake Falls.

Official Paper of Red Lake County.

Official Paper of Red Lake Falls.

Subscription, $1.00 per Year

The Crookston papers have been full of stories the past week about parties from there out hunting ducks and geese. It would look, if such is the case, that a member of the game and fish commission could have all kinds of fun over there these days, and turn in a lot of money in fines. The Crookston papers should look up the game laws before making such breaks.

Among the senators who were not present when the vote was taken upon the anti-pass bill was our own member, the Hon. E. J. Swedback says the Bemidji Sentinel. However, the whole railroad proposition will be handed over to the next house and the next senate and if the present temper of the people is shown in the selection of both senators and representatives there will be some strange faces in the senatorial symphony olio when the curtain rolls up on the next act.

Friend Eastman, of the News, thinks that it would be a blessing if the county seat were removed to Thief River, so that "Sam Haislet wouldn't get a rake-off on every contract awarded for county work". The Gazette fails to see where the people would benefit, after all, John. Every lesson we have ever had in the art of grafting was from President John Eastman, of the newspaper trust of Red Lake county, and while the pupil has undoubtedly been apt at the art, doesn't it stand to reason that the master hand is still the greater. John's anxiety is easily explained, therefore.

L. A. Rosing of Cannon Falls will succeed J. F. Jacobson of Madison, Monday as a member, of the state board of control. Mr. Jacobson is chairman of the board, having taken the place of James A. Martin. He expects to return to Madison and take up his own business affairs there. The new democratic member-elect has been familiarizing himself with the work of the office, and will take up the work of visiting state institutions when he assumes his position. Judge O. B. Gould will be chairman of the board upon the resignation of Mr. Jacobson.

The dove of peace that has been perching in content at Thief River Falls since the present county seat war was started, has finally been put to flight, and "war to the knife, and knife to the hilt" is on among the rival factions at the up river city. The recent trouble arose over school matters, and as a result the columns of the newspapers there are filled with caustic remarks aimed at the heads of the opposing factions while the county seat question is left hopelessly in the rear pending the settlement of recent troubles. In last weeks Press Banker Prichard crucifies Editor Eastman of the News on a row of crosses a mile long, and reports from there are that John's presses have been running night and day and turning out hot stuff in retaliation. Thief River Falls has a set of citizens that have never been able to agree on any subject that arose, one side opposing whatever project the other advocated, and vice versa, the strange part being that they have this long been able to agree in the county seat controversy. It is plainly evident that should they get the county seat the fight would be waged with renewed bitterness, one element insisting that the doors be opened with a prayer, while the others would want a dog fight or some equally exciting contest as the chief amusement. This would result disastrously for the county, and the people would be forced to take on the extra expense of taking the court house away from them, in order that the county's business might be transacted without interference. "A house divided against itself cannot stand" and the people should be careful of intrusting anything of interest to the county in the hands of a crowd of people who would tear down their temples to wreck vengeance on the opposition forces.

A DIRTY PRACTICE.

Elsewhere in The Gazette will be found a notice offering $10 reward for information leading to the capture of the parties who destroy the arc lamp globes or interfere in other ways with the property of the Red Lake Falls Electric Light company.

This offer is made by the company in an endeavor to put a check on the practice of the destruction of their property throughout the city, and every citizen who has the interest of the city at heart will sincerely trust that they may be successful in capturing these law-breakers who indulge in this practice and make a strict example of them.

The electric light company is one of the most progressive institutions of the city and is ever on the alert to improve the service given the public, and it seems strange and unfair that they should be put to an enormous expense every year to provide property for thoughtless individuals to destroy for the fun of the thing.

Within the last year they have had to replace a large number of these arc globes which have been broken by being used as targets, and The Gazette believes that the city fathers should assist them in their efforts to put a stop to the nuisance.

They merit fair treatment, and the people as a whole should try and see that they get it.

ANOTHER VIEW.

The current number of Collier's Weekly contains an effective drawing by Kemble representing "another view of race suicide." It shows the father of a large family where there has just been an addition, soliloquising, thus: "Out of work and another to support."

It is rather a striking coincidence that on another page of the same issue is given a picture of Judge Dunne, the Democratic candidate for mayor of Chicago, and his family, which consists of a wife and ten children, all happy, healthy and contented looking seated on the lawn in front of their beautiful home says the Duluth Herald.

In turning first to Kemble's doleful picture and then to the other one sees conditions that actually exist in many a workingman's home, and conditions that should and could exist in every American home if justice were done and the doors of opportunity opened to all alike. There is no good reason why any man in this country should be out of work. There is no reason why any healthy and able-bodied man should not be able to support a family and do it well.

A ladies' club of New York recently declared that poor parents who bring a large family into the world deserves no sympathy, because they know that poverty and improper education is to be the lot of their children. For shame to these women that they should make such an admission, and place the blame upon the parents. If they find that the families of the poor parents suffer from the lack of the necessaries of life, while a few accumulate millions that they cannot use, they find conditions which place the blame for the improper rearing of children on the government and the predatory rich. It is there that the censure should lie, not on the heads of the parents, who maybe too poor to support their families properly because the few are permitted to take more than their share.

MIX IS ELECTED.

Crookston Elects A New Mayor By A Small Majority.

The unexpected happened at Crookston Tuesday when Major Charles H. Mix was elected mayor over mayor Chesterman, candidate for re-election, by a majority of 19 votes. The result was a decided surprise to the followers of Chesterman, who had been predicting his election by majorities all the way from 100 to 500.

The interest in the fight centered in the head of the ticket and hard work was done on each side. However, there were two or three aldermic fights which were intensely interesting, and when the smoke of the conflict cleared away it was found out that in three of the five wards the regular nominee was holding down the rear position in the race. Mayor Mix is an old and respected citizen of the "Queen City" and its welfare will be carefully and ably guarded during his administration.

MEETING ARE SUCCESSFUL.

Revival Meetings at the Presbyterian Church Are Well Attended.

Miss Smith and Miss Read the Evangelists are meeting great success in their work in this city. The services are very largely attended and more than forty persons have decided to begin the Christian life. In response to an urgent petition to Dr. Adams, of Minneapolis, he has extended the time of the meetings to next Wednesday night, instead of closing tonight, as is usual in these evangelistic campaigns. Miss Smith will speak both Sunday morning and evening.

The sermon tonight will be on "One Thing Thou Lackest" and tomorrow night on "Excuses." Miss Smith is a speaker of extraordinary charm and tact. She speaks easily and simply and attracts both old and young. She has had wide experience in Christian work, and uses this experience very effectively. Miss Read has recently begun Gospel singing and so has not fallen into any of the common faults of evangelistic singers. She has a rich and pure voice, which is combined with an attractive personality and rare dramatic power.

The people of Red Lake Falls will be sincerely sorry when these meetings close and heartily wish that these same evangelists may return next year.

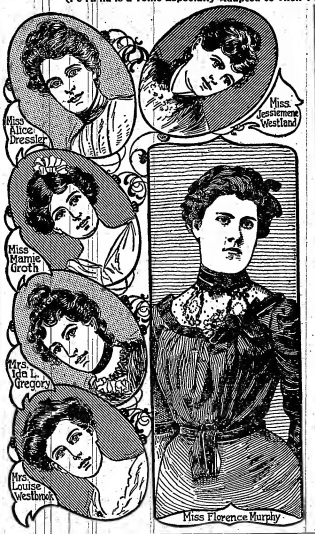
VERY TRYING TO WOMEN

Are the Peculiar Ills Brought on by Catarrh of the Pelvic Organs.

(Pe-ru-na is a Tonic Especially Adapted to Their Peculiar Diseases.)



Catarrh is a very frequent cause of that class of diseases popularly known as female weakness. Catarrh of the pelvic organs produces such a variety of disagreeable and irritating symptoms that many people—in fact, the majority of people—have no idea that they are caused by catarrh.

A great proportion of women have some catarrhal weakness which has been called by the various doctors she has consulted by as many different names. These women have been treated and have taken medicines, with no relief, simply because the remedies are not adapted to catarrh. It is through a mistaken notion as to the real nature of the diseases that these medicines have been recommended to them.

If all the women who are suffering with any form of female weakness would write to Dr. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio, and give him a complete description of their symptoms and the peculiarities of their troubles, he will immediately reply, with complete directions for treatment, free of charge.

"Health and Beauty," a book written especially for women, sent free by Dr. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio.

Miss Alice Dressler, of No. 1313 North Bryant Ave., Minneapolis, Minn., writes as follows concerning Peruna:

"I was suffering from catarrh of the throat and head. One of my college friends, who was visiting me, asked me to try Peruna and I did so and found it all and more than I had expected. It not only cured me of the catarrh, but restored me to perfect health."—Alice Dressler.

Miss Mamie Groth, Platteville, Wis., writes:

"I have for several years suffered with frequent backache and would for several days have splitting headaches. Several of my friends advised me to take Peruna and I asked my physician what he thought of it. He recommended it and so I took it and am entirely without pain of any kind now."—Mamie Groth.

In a recent letter from No. 2 Grant Ave., Denver, Col., Mrs. Ida L. Gregory writes:

"Some six years ago my husband suffered with nervous prostration, and advising with a friendly druggist he brought home a bottle of Peruna. His health was restored from its use, his appetite was increased and restful sleep came to him."—Ida L. Gregory.

Miss Florence Murphy, No. 2703 Second Ave., Seattle, Wash., writes:

"I suffered for over a year with female trouble, and although I tried several physicians none of them seemed to be able to help me permanently.

"It only took a little over three bottles of Peruna to make me well and strong. I never have backache, headache or bearing down pains any more."—Florence Murphy.

Mrs. Louise Westbrook, No. 9 East Columbia St., Detroit, Mich., Secretary of the West Side Lotus Club, writes:

"For several years I suffered with leucorrhœa and painful menstruation, which was followed by general debility, until I was but a wreck of myself. Thanks to Peruna I am a well woman to-day."—Louise Westbrook.

Miss Jessiemene Westland, No. 767 Beaubien Ave., Detroit, Mich., District Deputy of Detroit Independent Order of Good Templars, writes as follows:

"Peruna has been a blessing to me and gladly do I indorse it. For two years I suffered with catarrh of the stomach. I lost flesh and grew thin and emaciated, nervous and exhausted, so that I could neither work or enjoy life. I began taking Peruna and can now eat and enjoy everything I eat. I have been well over a year now."—Miss Jessiemene Westland.

Miss May Watterman, of Ada, is visiting at the home of J. L. Tracy.

The people of the valley in general and Crookston in particular are jubilant as a result of the passing of the Bennet bill, establishing a branch of the agricultural school at Crookston, by the senate yesterday. We Paid $100,000

For Liquozone, Yet We Give You a 50c. Bottle Free.

We paid $100,000 for the American rights to Liquozone; the highest price ever paid for similar rights on any scientific discovery. We did this after testing the product for two years, through physicians and hospitals, in this country and others. We cured all kinds of germ diseases with it—thousands of the most difficult cases obtainable. We proved that in germ troubles it always accomplishes what medicine cannot do. Now we ask you to try it—try it at our expense. Test it as we did; see what it does. Then you will use it always, as we do, and as millions of others do. You will use it, not only to get well, but to keep well. And it will save nearly all of your sickness.

Kills Inside Germs.

Liquozone is not made by compounding drugs, nor is there alcohol in it. Its virtues are derived solely from gas—largely oxygen gas—by a process requiring immense apparatus and 14 days' time. This process has, for more than 20 years, been the constant subject of scientific and chemical research.

The result is a liquid that does what oxygen does. It is a nerve food and blood food—the most helpful thing in the world to you. Its effects are exhilarating, vitalizing, purifying. Yet it is a germicide so certain that we publish on every bottle an offer of $1,000 for a disease germ that it cannot kill. The reason is that germs are vegetables; and Liquozone—like an excess of oxygen—is deadly to vegetal matter.

There lies the great value of Liquozone. It is the only way known to kill germs in the body without killing the tissues, too. Any drug that kills germs is a poison, and it cannot be taken internally. Medicine is almost helpless in any germ disease. It is this fact that gives Liquozone its worth to humanity. And that worth is so great that we have spent over one million dollars to supply the first bottle free to each sick one we learned of.

Germ Diseases.

These are the known germ diseases. All that medicine can do for these troubles is to help Nature overcome the germs, and such results are indirect and uncertain. Liquozone attacks the germs, wherever they are. And when the germs which cause a disease are destroyed, the disease must end, and forever. That is inevitable.

Do You See the Point?

There is just as much difference in the fit of ready-made garments as there is in the fit of garments made at home. When you have a nice garment made you go to the best dressmakers in the city, not to apprentices. There are factories who employ only apprentices, in fact the best artist tailors have to start somewhere, a man is not born a tailor. But the garments turned out by these shops plainly show the novice work. Our

MILLIONS FOR THE MIKADO

Japan's Emperor Receives from the People as Salary Each Year an Enormous Sum.

The emperor's yearly expense of living is limited. For this purpose he draws $3,000,000 from the national treasury. His personal wealth is not to be spent on his own living, so that $3,000,000 is really his yearly salary as manager of the country, writes Hosmer Whitfield, in Success Magazine. He has got to pay out of it some 1,000 employes. The lady-in-waiting is said to be paid $150 monthly. I have no doubt that even a washing girl is paid about $70. Japan is a country where a laboring man's wages are not more than 50 cents daily. The chief cook of the imperial palace is paid $200 a month.

The emperor's daily fare is Japanese. He is perfectly satisfied for breakfast, as a common Japanese is, with a bowl of bean soup and a few similar dishes. But his dinner usually appears in splendid style, in some 20 courses, although he always denounces it as a useless extravagance. When any official feast is held—the cherry-blossom-viewing party at the Kioshikawa botanical garden, or the chrysanthemum party at the Akasaka palace, for instance—he will not spare any expense in preparing an elegant European banquet. The empress is the manager on such an occasion. She is a noted economist. She always gives a hint to her court ladies and the wives of the ministers how to arrange their dresses and how to save expense. She is regarded as an exemplar of loveliness and womanly sweetness. There never was a woman truer to the old teachings in respect to womanly disposition and demeanor.

SHORTAGE IN PEANUT CROP

African Product Reshipped from Marseilles to the United States in Large Quantities.

The peanut has always been regarded so entirely an American product that it will, perhaps, occasion much surprise to many persons to learn that $25,000 worth of them were imported into the United States last year. A report from Consul General Hennis, at Marseilles, says that for the first time African peanuts (arachides) have been received at Marseilles and have been reexported to the United States. The value of these exports during the fiscal year 1904 was $25,055—shelled nuts, $17,411; nuts in the shell, $7,554. As some sample lots of American peanuts had been received in Marseilles the year before this turning of the tables may occasion surprise. It appears, however, that the exports of the nuts from Europe to the United States were in consequence of an unusual shortage in the American crop and consequent advance in price. A repetition of this shortage in the United States is unlikely, although home buyers will now have to consider the foreign market in establishing their prices. The African nuts are inferior to the American for comestible purposes although richer in oil. The Virginia peanut is undoubtedly the finest in the world in quality but yields so poorly in oil as to render improbable the creation of an American oil-crushing industry unless steps are taken to secure a new variety combining the advantages of the standard American nut with the percentage of oil in the foreign nut.

DUE TO DEFALCATIONS.

Bank at Lorain, O., Forced to Suspend Business.

Lorain, O., March 31.—At the usual time for opening the doors of the Citizens' Savings bank there were several hundred depositors on hand ready to draw out their money should the opportunity present itself. The crowd was made up for the most part of foreigners. Posted upon the door was a notice which read:

"This bank closed for business. The affairs of the bank have been placed in the hands of T. F. Fancher as assignee."

The decision to close the bank was reached by the directors after a long session the previous evening. While the directors are extremely reticent it is known that the closing of the institution resulted from defalcations by three of its employes and that the sum taken aggregates at least $90,000.

Wine of Cardui Cured Her.

ATLANTA, GA., March 21, 1903.

I suffered for four months with extreme nervousness and lassitude. I had a sinking feeling in my stomach which no medicine seemed to relieve, and losing my appetite I became weak and lost my vitality. In three weeks I lost fourteen pounds of flesh and felt that I must find speedy relief to regain my health. Having heard Wine of Cardui praised by several of my friends, I sent for a bottle and was certainly very pleased with the results. Within three days my appetite returned and my stomach troubled me no more. I could digest my food without difficulty and the nervousness gradually diminished. Nature performed her functions without difficulty and I am once more a happy and well woman.

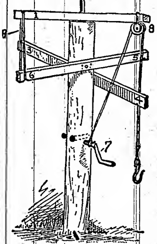
HOG HANGERS.

Device Easily Constructed Which Will Accommodate Four Animals at a Time.

I have seen several illustrations of hog hangers in the Ohio Farmer, writes a correspondent of that paper, but only for a single animal. I send sketch of a plan for hanging any number from one to four. Set up a post six by six inches. No. 1 in the cut is a swinging device at top of post; it swings over cross-car 3-4. Use pulley No. 8, with one-half-inch rope 12 feet long, with hook. Bore one-inch hole through post both ways, to insert one-inch rod, with crank (No. 7), which can be changed as desired, to hang on 3, 4, 5 or 6. No. 9 is a one-half-inch rope to hold swing-bar down. This rope can be moved when swing-bar is wanted over the other cross-bar.



HANDY HOG HANGER.

BREEDING DRAFT FILLIES.

A Scotch Practice Which Might Be Imitated Successfully by American Stockmen.

French, English and Scotch farmers and horse breeders generally breed their draft fillies at two years old, and by generous treatment they develop good, large size at three, when they have a colt, and they have learned to work and earn their keep. Farmers' Advocate says: A noticeable feature in connection with the recent importation of 50 Clydesdale fillies was that the two-year-olds had all been atinted before leaving Scotland. Inquiry disclosed the fact that this is a common practice in that country of good draft horses. On this side it is a very rare thing to breed a filly before she is three years old, although, with our early maturing stock and comfortable stables, the main reason why it is not done is simply force of habit, or a vague impression that immature mares will not produce strong foals. Scotchmen raise the best of horses and breed their fillies at two years old. Why should we not breed a year earlier, and make use of one of the best years in the brood mare's life? Of course, it is redundant to say the filly should be well grown and in thriving condition, and should be kept so. Too often the two-year-old fillies are not given the advantage they deserve because they are supposed to be big and able to forage for themselves, and are only growing anyhow, and, consequently their third year is not remarkable for development. If early breeding is followed by greater care and more liberal treatment, perhaps the ill-effect supposed to result from breeding at an earlier age might be entirely avoided. It is not too late to try breeding the two-year-olds this season, and some valuable experience may be gained from it.

HINTS FOR BREEDERS.

Cleaner and more sanitary milk is the demand of the hour.

The pens where the hogs are kept should be always bright and dry.

A miss is as good as a mile when the old cow kicks at you; and when you kick at her it is better than five miles.—Farm Journal.

Fight shy of the "family cow" which Jim Jockey declares the mention of selling "sterts 'ther ole women to cryin,"—that cow will not suit you.—American Dairyman.

Too close confinement and too heating foods bring about the abnormal condition in sows that often results in the sows eating their young.

The United States department of agriculture has some very good bulletins on clean production of milk, and men interested in the matter should see that their friends send for them.

Whitewash.

Whitewash is to some extent an antiseptic and should be freely used about cow stables. The stables that are whitewashed twice a year are cleaner and brighter appearing than those that receive no attention of this kind. Whitewash is also very cheap.

Special Harness Room.

The more careful owners of horses and equipments have a special room for the harnesses, where they may be kept from both ammonia gas and from dust. This room should be near the horses, to prevent carrying the harnesses back and forth.

EULOGY ON A BRICK.

INSCRIPTION WRITTEN BY ORDER OF ASSYRIAN KING.

Is Translated Into English by Prof. Torrey, of Yale University—Block of Clay Made 2,700 Years Ago.

New Haven, Conn.—An interesting inscription, made upon a sun-baked brick some 2,700 years ago, by order of Shalmanese II., king of Assyria, has just been translated into English by Prof. Charles C. Torrey, of Yale university. The brick has been in the possession of Yale for almost 50 years, but the cuneiform writing in the inscription is of a rude character, and a previous attempt at translation in 1870 was only partly successful.

The inscription is a short eulogy of the king and his father. It ends in a manner calculated to remind one of the old nursery rhyme about "The House That Jack Built." The full inscription, as translated by Prof. Torrey, is:

"Shalmaneser, the great king, the mighty king, ruler of the universe, king of the land of Assyria; son of Ashurnasirpal, the great king, the mighty king, ruler of the universe, king of the land of Assyria; son of Tukulti-Ninah, ruler of the universe, king of the land of Assyria, and he built the tower of the City of Calah."

What the tower of Calah was, and why it was considered of sufficient importance to be mentioned as the chief fact worthy of remembrance in connection with this "ruler of the universe" with the hard name, nobody knows. An attempt was made some years ago to identify the tower mentioned as the Tower of Babel of Biblical fame, mention of it being made in another ancient Assyrian inscription as a noteworthy achievement. However, it is now generally conceded that the ground for supposing them to be the same is very slight.

King Shalmaneser, the author of the inscription, is known in history as among the first Assyrian kings to make captives of the Hebrews. A description of his attacks upon them is given in 2 Kings 29 and 30.

From other sources it is evident that the king was also a practical joker of a grim sort. He himself relates, in another brick, which was presented to Yale at the same time with one recently translated, that he conquered many tribes, and some of them he boiled in pitch and some he made slaves, putting rings in their noses to increase their tractability. He is also said to be the originator of the "turkey dance," now sometimes seen at country fairs, the principle of which is the well-known fact that a turkey, or "anybody" else, dislikes to stand still when the floor beneath the feet is hot. Shalmaneser is said to have induced his captives to dance in a similar manner.

THE OLDEST CONFEDERATE

Patrick Clark of Lucky Hill, Va., Veteran of Three Wars, Passes the Century Mark.

Richmond, Va.—In Patrick Clark, of Lucky Hill, on the Southern railway, between Remington and Bealeton, Fauquier county can boast of probably the oldest confederate veteran living to-day.

Born in Ireland in 1794, he emigrated to this country when a small lad, with his parents. At 18 he enlisted in the American army, and served through the entire war of 1812.

In 1847 he joined the Eighth United States regulars, sailed from New York city to Vera Cruz, was placed in Gen. Worth's famous division, and took a very active part in all the fighting that led up to the capture of the City of Mexico. At the close of the Mexican war he was discharged at the Jefferson barracks, in Missouri.

He served four years in the confederate army, a member of the Sixth Louisiana Infantry, Early's division, army of northern Virginia, and was a participant in some of the fiercest engagements of that bloody period.

His general health is excellent. He can walk around, appears to be very cheerful, and experiences a great delight in describing the numerous conflicts in which he has taken part. He is entirely blind, is very hard of hearing, and almost entirely dependent upon a pension of $12 a month which he receives from the national government for his services in the Mexican war.

NOVEL SMOKING CONTEST.

German Clubman Wins $125 by Making His Cigar Burn Over Two Hours Without Going Out.

Berlin.—At one of the clubs here a lively dispute has just been settled by a novel competition.

A discussion having arisen in the smoking-room as to how long a cigar would last a smoker without going out, it was agreed that the six persons present should light at the same moment cigars of the same brand and thus settle the matter.

One of them was unable to make his smoke longer than half an hour; another 50 minutes. The third smoked just an hour, the fourth an hour and a half, and the fifth one hour and fifty minutes. Finally the sixth alone was smoking, and he continued beyond the two hour mark, and won the prize of 500 marks or $125.

Gum from Rubber Plant.

Salida, Col., expects to have a factory for the extraction of gum from the "Colorado rubber plant" in operation soon. A building was recently donated by the business men to aid in establishing the new industry, and it is now being prepared for the reception of the necessary machinery, which has been ordered.

LAMB FEEDING.

The Methods of a Successful Sheep Owner of Ohio as Given by Himself.

There is more than one way of feeding sheep or lambs successfully even in the same locality, and under similar conditions. Widely separated localities may admit of still greater variations in methods. In another article, we give some advice from Mr. Peter Jansen, whose experience has been gained under Nebraska conditions. Mr. J. E. Wing, whose feeding experience has been with Ohio conditions, in answering an inquiry in the Breeders' Gazette as to the best method of feeding lambs says:

"Our practice is the result of habit very largely. We have learned that certain practices make us money. We once did differently, feeding better lambs and in a more scientific way, possibly, and made less money. To begin with, we lay in an order with a reliable commission firm for our feeders early in the season. We say in effect: 'Get us the best and smallest lambs you can find for mighty little money.' Sometimes a month rolls around before we get them, but there comes a glut in the market some day and we get our lambs. We unload them and hurry them home before the neighbors see them. I had them once when they would jump out of the car doors (I did not run the cars down to the yards) and they were so light and starved that they would scarcely come to the ground and would not make a dent when their feet struck it. Those lambs made me ashamed at first, but they made us more money than any we had ever fed. A careless feeder or a man not fitted to nurse them would drop his wad right there.

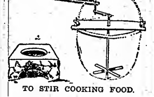
"When they are home we rest them in a shaded bluegrass pasture for two days. Then we dip them carefully. Then they go directly to their sheds and stay there until they go to market. No fall pasturing with western lambs for us. We begin feeding alfalfa hay. At first they eat a lot of it. We give them corn silage, too, with their alfalfa. You cannot make it pay to put corn into a weak, starved lamb.

"About Christmas we begin feeding a little ear corn. Gradually we feed more and more ear corn. Eventually they eat all the ear corn they can hold, very nearly. We never reach quite the full-feed point. We break the ears small at first. We shear in March or early in April. We never ship with the wool on. We make the lambs very ripe and fat and they top the Buffalo markets every time. That is habit, too. With this slow feeding we make them gain about from 50 to 85 or 90 pounds. It pays us because we put into them a comparatively small amount of grain and much rough feed cheaply produced on the farm."

STIRRING COOKED FOODS.

A Home-Made Device Which May Be Readily Made at But a Small Cost.

Where more or less food for stock is cooked, some handy way of stirring it ought to be devised. Of course, the old-fashioned ladle, or the great wooden spoon, is always available, but if the quantity is large, to use these instruments means aching arms and shoulders. A stirrer which will save much labor, says the Indianapolis News, is readily made in the following manner: Make a shaft of a strip of wood two inches thick and long enough so that it will extend three or four inches above the top of the kettle. At the bottom of this shaft make paddles by crossing two thin boards two or three inches wide.



TO STIR COOKING FOOD.

Fasten a crank to the top of the shaft, and to this crank fasten a pole, or not, as preferred. Then prepare a strip of board six or eight inches wide, bore a hole through the middle, through which to pass the shaft, match both ends to fit over the handle of the kettle and at one end fix a slide and a set screw to hold it in place. If the cooking of the food for stock is done away from the house, as it ought to be, one should build a fireplace of bricks and cement in which to set the kettle. The illustration shows both the fireplace, or pot, as suggested, and the plan for making the stirrer, and it will be seen that it is comparatively easy to arrange the device as suggested.

Mule Statistics.

There are 2,757,916 mules in the United States, valued at $217,532,832. Texas is the leading state in the mule industry, with 399,018, and Mississippi second, with 211,444, and Missouri third, with 202,888 mules. South Carolina is credited with 195,204. The United States leads in this great animal industry. The average value of mules is given at $78.88, against $67.93 for horses.—Exchange.

Fox Breeders Are Stockmen.

Fox breeders must now be considered stockmen, for whether the stock is wild or tame, the commercial idea is the same. Elijah Norton, Dover's fox breeder, recently shipped a pair of silver gray foxes to Mr. M. H. Bertrand, of Houghton, Mich. A red fox of Mr. Norton's breeding was also sent. Mr. Norton has sold several pairs of silver grays for $500 per pair.—Maine Farmer.

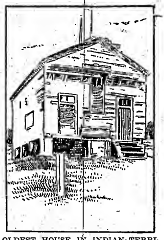
TO SAVE LANDMARK

A CHURCH THE OLDEST BUILDING IN INDIAN TERRITORY.

Fort Gibson a Place Very Rich in Historical Associations—Some of the Noted Characters Connected Therewith.

Guthrie, Okla.—Strong efforts are being made here to preserve the famous "old church on the hill" at Fort Gibson, I. T. The building is an old one, and figured prominently in the early days.

The above dispatch from Oklahoma's capital tells of the attempt to preserve a landmark which has stood for almost a century, and has been the scene of many western social functions during the time when Indian massacres and frontier fights were every-day occurrences. The old garrison church, located on what was known to the soldiers as Garrison's Hill, has been occupied continuously since 1832 and possesses the distinction of being the oldest building in Indian Territory. After its occupation as the garrison church, a school was opened within its time-worn walls and Henry M. Stanley, then a mere youngster, was engaged as its teacher.



OLDEST HOUSE IN INDIAN TERRITORY.

Fort Gibson, the oldest town in the territory, is rich in historic lore, very little of which has ever been recorded in print. The town was settled shortly after 1803, the date of the Louisiana purchase, and about 15 years later a military post was established there. From that time to this many distinguished men have made the fort their rendezvous, living in the old church, and to-day one may see headstones in the United States cemetery, less than a mile from the church, bearing the names of past war heroes who were killed or died there in the service of the flag. In the graveyard there are buried about 2,500 bodies of soldiers, all of whom figured more or less prominently in Indian warfare on the frontier.

The wife of Admiral Dewey, in the early days, married to Gen. Hazen, left her home in Cincinnati and for many years lived at the fort, and was declared to have been the most stylish woman who ever visited the place. Zachary Taylor, afterwards president of the United States, and Jefferson Davis, afterwards president of the confederacy, both lived at and commanded the fort. From this place Jeff Davis, then an untried lieutenant, eloped with Miss Betty Taylor to Van Buren, Ark., without the consent of either of the principals' parents. After the elopement Davis commanded the fort, living within its precincts until the time of the Mexican war, in which conflict he won distinction by saving the day for the Americans at the battle of Buena Vista. Gen. Taylor after that exploit exhibited great pride in Davis, and, it is declared, almost forgave the act which bereft him of a daughter and gave him a son-in-law.

Gen. Samuel Houston, a character who is surrounded by a veil of mystery, came to the fort after resigning the governorship of Tennessee, leaving his newly-wedded wife, coming west and joining a band of Cherokees, among whom he was a feared and admired leader. Not long after his arrival at Fort Gibson, he married a pretty Indian maiden, Talihina Rogers, and with her he lived at the historic place until his departure for the war in Texas in 1832. By his heroic conduct in the battle in which his troops routed the Mexicans and won the independence of Texas, he was favored by being made the first governor of that state.

Washington Irving wrote his "Tales of a Traveler" just outside the old parade ground on Garrison Hill. In Longfellow's "Evangeline," he describes graphically and accurately scenery about Fort Gibson.

Among other notables who visited the place are Gen. Winfried Scott, Gen. Robert E. Lee, Gen. George B. McClellan; Col. Coppinger, who commanded the fort; James G. Blaine, Gen. Arbuckle, who was in command at one time; Gen. Belknap, Col. Loomis, Col. Wilson, Col. Morrison Braxton Bragg, Capt. Little, Early Steen, Capt. McLous and Albert Sidney Johnson, a man who figured prominently in southern history.

W. W. GARRISON.

Both Right.

A well-known judge was standing at the door of a ballroom when a very beautiful woman passed him.

"What a lovely woman!" whispered the judge, but so loudly that the lady overheard his remark.

Turning her head she recognized the speaker.

"And what a good judge!" she said, with a smile.—Cassell's Journal.

Fertile Journal: Red Lake Falls is situated nearly a mile from the N. P. station. One morning during the cold spell last month a St. Paul traveling man who was riding to the station from a Red Lake Falls hotel in a cold bus, began swearing about the distance winding up with, "what on earth made them build that deput so far from the town?." The bus driver shifted his quid of tobacco, "because they wanted it to be near the railroad I reckon," he said quietly. That ended the conversation.

The Hon. Wiley Tindolph came down from Thief River Falls yesterday and remained between trains with his many friends here. Wiley has just returned from his all winter's visit in Cuba and points in the southern part of the states and reports himself as having enjoyed his outing immensely. He talks very entertainingly of the sights of the south, and to hear of his having worn duck suits and straw hats all winter certainly makes one who has been in the shadow of the north pole envious. Wiley says that his eye was caught by the beautiful women of the island of Cuba, and that when he left for the north he was strongly of the opinion that they excelled in beauty anything in the world. When he got to Red Lake Falls again, however, he was compelled to admit that perhaps he had been mistaken in his opinions, and returned home yesterday thoroughly convinced that nothing equalled the feminine beauty of the Red Lake Falls young ladies.

NEW TRAIN SERVICE

Great Northern Runs Trains Around By Way of Dugdale and North Over Extension Here.

The much talked of new train service went into effect last Monday morning, when the Great Northern passenger made the trip from Crookston to Red Lake Falls around by the way of Dugdale and north over the N. P. tracks to this city, using the recently constructed cut-off to the Great Northern here.

The new time card gives the people along the line good service, and it is more than likely that improvements will be made constantly which will be of benefit to the public. The morning tarin now leaves Crookston at 8 o'clock and arrives here at 9:25 a. m., going to Thief River Falls and remaining until afternoon returning here at 5:25 and arriving at Crookston at 6:45 p. m. Connection is made at Thief River Falls with the Greenbush train and at Crookston with the twin city and Winnepeg trains, the new service doing away with the hour wait at St. Hilaire.

The freight arrives here just ahead of the passenger in the morning, and the return trip is made along in the afternoon. For the present the freight backs down from St. Hilaire to Wylie to take care of the business of that place, but it is announced that the tracks along the old branch from Crookston to St. Hilaire will be torn up soon and the towns along that road left without train service, which is indeed unfortunate for those who are doing business there.

The new schedule will mean much for the towns along the line, and gives the people the best service they have ever enjoyed at the hands of the Great Northern.

Chatel Gets Good Contract.

Exerie Chatel, of this city, has secured a large railroad contract for the Great Northern company near York, North Dakota, and is here this week getting his outfit in shape to ship to that place for the commencement of the work. The contract secured by Mr. Chatel is an exceedingly large one and will keep him busy the greater portion of the summer. He says the railroad activity in North Dakota this summer will be something wonderful and that railroad workmen and teams out of work will not have the slightest excuse in the world for being so.

SEND MORE JAIL BIRDS

Thief River Municipal Court Can't Get Cash So Sends Prisioners To Board on the County.

Deputy Sheriff Jarman brought down three more cheap criminals from Thief River Falls, Saturday night to board at the county's expense.

Somebody owed a hotel-keeper up there a dollar and a half, and when attempting to remove his trunk without paying, he with two others was arrested, and the municipal court sent all three down to the county jail to be boarded at the tax payers expense. The man only owed $1.50 but it cost the county $15.00 to commit them to the jail here and it costs three dollars a day more for jailer's fees and board while they are here. This is the way Thief River Falls loves the dear tax payers. If they had the county jail up there, they would be boarding all the city poor and roustabouts that make up the greater part of their population, in the county jail at county expense.

A Dead Petition!

Thief River Falls' Brave and Bold Warriors Witness the Shelving of Fondest Hopes and Retire From the Battle Ground.

Monday night a few of Thief River's bravest and best came down to pave the way for filing the petition. In martial array they paced our peaceful streets, probably afraid lest some of the Thief River chicken thieves in the county jail might escape and claim their acquaintance.

Tuesday morning's train brought the much-talked of petition itself. It was met at the depot by the Thief River military forces and under their protection was solemnly escorted to the court house. First came General Alex Sweaas who acted as if he had already stolen the county seat and was trying to sneak out of town with it. Next came Postmaster Ira Richardson, Attorney General of the expedition, next the Mayor of the City of Theives, and last marched the army, which consisted of a lengthy seven-foot individual whose most apparent characteristics were the size of his fists and a face like Fitzimmons.

Arrived at the court house the petition was presented to the county auditor. It consisted of thirty one separate lengthy petitions verified by the affidavits of sixty-four men, and alleged to contain 2006 signatures. Many of the names were wholly unreadable. The law makes it the duty of the county auditor before filing the petition to examine it and determine if it is in proper form, has the requisite number of names and otherwise complies with the law. Auditor Ford at once referred it to County Attorney Germo, and together they put in a hard day's work examining the petition. But at 3 o'clock in the afternoon citizens of Red Lake Falls presented to Judge Watts at Crookston, a complaint and numerous affidavits showing that the names upon the petition had been secured by crooked, irregular and unlawful means, by the use of whiskey and money and undue influence and other irregularities, and the Court signed an order setting a time for hearing, April 22nd, and forbidding the Auditor filing the petition or taking any further action on it until then. This order was served upon the Auditor at five o'clock in the presence of the Thief River Falls contingent, taking them completely by surprise. A gloom so silent, deep and sad immediately settled over them, that you could distinclty hear a bubble burst at Thief River Falls, twenty miles away.

The petition was pigeon-holed in the auditor's safe. The hearing at Crookston April 22nd, will of course be only on affidavits and merely preliminary, as no actual trial can be had until next fall, but it is likely that either party may appeal to the Supreme Court at once, in which event there could be no final decision before next October.

If Thief River Falls had used proper means to obtain signatures to their petition no injunction would have been asked for at this time. But such a nest of crookedness, corruption and bribery has been revealed that it would be a shame to submit such a petition to a vote of the people. Names have been put upon the petition without the knowledge or consent of the persons answering to them. Women and children apparently signed it, the dead have been brought from the grave to add their ghostly signatures. Many signatures appear in the same handwriting. Even the Thief River News last week admitted that three hundred names were improperly obtained, and they intended to cut them off. But those 300 are still there.

Thus endeth chapter 1 of the removal petition case. The rest are to follow.

TO DEVELOP WATER POWER.

Proposition for Conversion of Latent River Power into Electricity.

Should the designs of a half hundred Red River Valley farmers be carried out in the near future, steam power and the cumbersome threshing engines will be a thing of the past on Minnesota Red River Valley farms, and the wind mills which have done faithfully in pumping water, churning butter, sawing wood, will be found of little use.

The Red Lake River between this city and Crookston, according to State Engineer George A. Ralph, contains 12,000 horse power of dormant electric energy which needs but the hand of man and the expenditure of money for power housee to bring into life and activity, Farmers living in the valley have pondered over the matter since the announcement of the vast amount of undeveloped power was made and as a result developements of an unusually substantial character are possible.

The plan proposed by half a hundred of the agriculturlists at a recent meeting was for the erection of a series of power houses along the Red Lake River and the building of a street railroad from Crookston to Grand Forks, the trolley wire to serve a double purpose, in that they are, according to the plans of the farmers, to be tapped where ever current is necessary for farm work, farm lighting or threshing, and the voltage used paid for at regulation rates to be established. The plans of the farmers interested are said to be feastible, although as yet crude and in a very imperfect state.

A Visiting Day For Parents.

Since our Christmas vacation we have been saving samples of work done by the pupils in all of the grades, and we now have quite a collection of papers and other school work in all branches.

This work does not represent the result of many rewritings of the same paper after repeated corrections by the teacher, but it will be a fair sample of the work actually done from day to day by the pupils of our schools.

We are planning to display this work in the two lower rooms in the Lafayette building so that the parents may have an opportunity to see what we have been doing. The work will be displayed in grades, the North side and South side grades competing and all the grades competing with each other for the best display.

The work will be put in place Saturday of this week and the building will be opened Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday afternoon of vacation week. Don't all wait till Saturday but be sure and see the work on one of the three days. It will encourage the children.

CORBETT VS. ROCKSBURY.

Supreme Court Hands Down Decision Friday Morning.

Crookston Journal: A decision was reached in the supreme court Friday morning in the case of Charles Corbett against the town of Rocksbury, Red Lake county, and was in favor of the defendant. Attorney Charles Loring and Attorney Martin O'Brien were the counsel for the defendant and Attorney A. A. Miner and Attorney Burk Corbett for the complainant.

In 1883 the town of Rocksbury, then in Polk County, issued bonds to the extent of $1500 under the statute which permits the issuance of bonds by towns in Polk county and other counties in the northern part of the state to aid in the construction of roads.

The town of Rocksbury paid interest on the bonds for twelve years but finally under the advice of counsel refused to farther recognize the validity of the bonds issued, claiming that they were in excess of the law.

The law provides that towns in these northern counties might issue bonds to the extent of ten per cent of the valuation of real estate in the town according to the last preceding assessment and the town claimed that the assessment at the time of issuance of the bonds permitted the issuance of bonds of $360 and no more and that bonds in excess of $360 were void.

The plaintiff claimed that the requisites had been complied with for bonds and precluded the time for questioning the validity in the hands of the bona fide holder, and also claimed that there was no evidence in the county records to show what the assessment ruling was, the assessment being defective, and in any event that the town was estopped because of paying interest for twelve years from questioning the validity of the bonds.

The question involved has never been passed upon in the state by the supreme court directly and the plaintiff appealed to that court. The decision handed down today affirms the ruling of Judge Watts in all points and established the rule of law applicable to these securities in the state. In district court Judge Watts held against the plaintiff in all contentions and in favor of the town, deciding that the town was only liable even as against a bona fide holder on bonds to the amount of $360 and no more.

A New Era in Transportation.

The Great Northern Steamship company in placing in service between Seattle, Wash. and Yokohama, Nagasaki, Kobe, Shanghai and Hong Kong, the magnificent American built steamships the "Minnesota" and the "Dakota," make a new era in transportation facilities between the United States and the Orient. These magnificent steamships with their superior facilities in handling immense freight cargoes and the luxurious appointments for passenger travel has given an impetus to our oriental trade. The Northern Pacific Route to the Orient is rapidly becoming the popular one and now that the two palatial steamships, "Minnesota" and "Dakota" have been put in commission, there is no question but that a greater increase in our trade with the Orient as well as increased passenger travel to Asiatic ports will be inaugurated. The first sailing of the "Minnesota," in addition to carrying the largest cargo to the orient ever carried by any ship in the world, as well as an extensive passenger list, augurs well for the future.

The "Minnesota" will sail on its next voyage to the Orient on Saturday April 29th and it will not be amiss to say here that the excellence of her passenger accommodations will be heralded to the traveling public of the United States by all who enjoyed the pleasant voyage across the Pacific on her first trip as furnishing the acme of travel comfort. The fact that the superior accommodations of the Great Northern Steamship company in connection with the comfortable journey afforded by the Great Northern Railway to Seattle, the sailing point of the "Minnesota" will make this route the popular one from Occident to Orient.

Millionaire's Poor Stomach.

The worn-out stomach of the over-fed millionaire is often paraded in the public prints as a horrible example of the evils attendant on the possession of great wealth. But millionaires are not the only ones who are afflicted with bad stomachs. The proportion is far greater among the toilers. Dyspepsia and indigestion are rampant among these people, and they suffer far worse tortures than the millionaire unless they avail themselves of a standard medicine like Green's August Flower, which has been a favorite household remedy for all stomach troubles for over thirty-five years. August Flower rouses the torpid liver, thus creating appetite and insuring perfect digestion. It tones and vitalizes the entire system and makes life worth living, no matter what your station. Climatic Cures.

The influence of climate conditions in the cure of consumption is very much overdrawn. The poor patient, and the rich patient, too, can do much better at home by proper attention to food digestion, and a regular use of German Syrup. Free expectoration in the morning is made certain by German Syrup, so is a good night's rest and the absence of that weakening cough and debilitating night sweat. Restless nights and the exhaustion due to coughing, the greatest danger and dread of the consumptive, can be prevented or stopped by taking German Syrup liberally and regularly. Should you be able to go to a warmer clime, you will find that of the thousands of consumptives there, the few who are benefited and regain strength are those who use German Syrup. Don't Borrow Trouble.

It is a bad habit to borrow anything, but the worst thing you can possibly borrow, is trouble. When sick, sore, heavy, weary and worn out by the pains and poisons of dyspepsia, biliousness, Bright's disease, and similar internal disorders, don't sit down and brood over your symptoms, but fly for relief to Electric Bitters. SPORTS AND ATHLETICS

A sad record was established during the year 1904 in the number of fatalities that occurred in the sporting world—one that has never been equaled. Nine men were killed on the baseball field, two of them by lightning. Sunstrokes and lightning victims have heretofore been a rarity on the ball field, but that year seems to have been an exception. Two accidents of the year occurred in Pennsylvania, one at Indiana and the other at Cherry Hill. In the first Grove Thomas, a Cincinnati boy, was hit by a ball during play and instantly killed. Hiram Williams met a similar death in the other. The saddest feature of both accidents was that the young wives of the players were witnesses to their husbands' terrible deaths. The men who met natural deaths in baseball this year number 11. Probably the most noted of all was James (Chip) McGarr, who died in an insane hospital at Worcester, Mass., on June 6. He was an old-time National league player, and was known throughout the United States. Another well-known player that passed to the great beyond was Ben (Shorty) Fuller, formerly shortstop for the New Yorks. There were two suicides recorded. Hugh Higgens, a well-known amateur player of Louisville, killed himself on March 16. Dan Mahaney took his own life at Springfield, Mass., on January 31. In the turf world the most prominent men to leave this earth were William C. Whitney, who died in New York city, of the effects of an operation, on January 29, and J. Malcolm Forbes, the noted breeder of trotting horses, who died on his estate at Milton, Mass., on February 19. Others of note were Senator J. S. O'Brien, of Stillwater, Minn.; C. E. Jeffers, the Louisville horseman, who was in partnership with Johnny Fay, and David Nagle, an old-time California horseman. In the harness world death claimed George Fuller, known far and wide as a reinsman; Sam Moreland, of Covington, and Uncle Billy Hughes, of Sedalia, Mo. The best-known jockey to die this season was Andy Hamilton. He breathed his last in France on February 1. Hamilton was born in this country, and, although black in color, was at one time considered the best in America. The death of Caesar Young in New York city took from the ranks of the American bookmakers one of the best in the business. His death is still fresh in the minds of the general public, seated beside Nan Patterson, an actress, on Saturday, June 5. The most conspicuous figure to be taken from the boxing world by death was James E. Kennedy, the New York promoter of athletic sports. He died on an elevated train in Brooklyn on April 30. Tommy Warren was the only boxer of prominence to die since the first of the year. There have been three deaths in the prize ring, but none of the victims were known outside their home city, and, like all cases of this kind, their deaths were due to lack of training and not from punishment dealt out by their opponents.

Wm. C. Whitney.

A prominent point winner on the cinder path left the field to his rivals when the retirement of Harry Hillman, Jr., was announced recently. Young Hillman, who is a member of the New York Athletic club and of the Thirteenth regiment, of Brooklyn, and who won a number of firsts and seconds in the Olympic games at St. Louis last summer, has retired from athletics on account of failing health, and will take a good rest. Hillman was considered one of the best hurdlers in America and was the champion quarter-miler of the east. Representing the New York Athletic club, he entered in the 440-yard run at Olympic games, June 4, coming in a close second to D. H. Meyers, of Buffalo, and helping the New York Athletic club win the 45 points which made it second among the clubs represented. In August and September at the Olympic championship meet Hillman broke the 400-meter hurdle record, making the distance in :53 flat. Waller, of the Milwaukee Athletic club, was second, following the eastern man by less than a yard, with Page four yards back and Varnell, of the C. A. A., fourth. The 400-meter dash was also won by Hillman in :49 1-5. On September 1, when James D. Lightbody, of the C. A. A., won the 800-meter race from representatives from Germany, New Zealand, Canada and the United States, Hillman won the 200-meter hurdles in :24 3-5, with F. Castleman, of the Greater New York Athletic club, second. The time established a new Olympic record and gave the New Yorker three championships for his summer's work.

Harry Hillman, Jr.

Jenkins defeated Jack Carkeek for the world's championship at catch-as-catch-can wrestling in two straight falls in a match at San Francisco.

Senator Lightner, of South Dakota, has introduced an anti-football bill, the most rigorous of its kind yet proposed in any legislature. He would instantly suspend from school any player who injures another, make fraudulent registration for purposes of playing football a misdemeanor, and hold the president of the college equally guilty with the student.

CORBETT VS. ROCKSBURY.

Supreme Court Hands Down Decision Friday Morning.

Crookston Journal: A decision was reached in the supreme court Friday morning in the case of Charles Corbett against the town of Rocksbury, Red Lake county, and was in favor of the defendant. Attorney Charles Loring and Attorney Martin O'Brien were the counsel for the defendant and Attorney A. A. Miller and Attorney Burk Corbett for the complainant.

In 1883 the town of Rocksbury, then in Polk County, issued bonds to the extent of $1500 under the statute which permits the issuance of bonds by towns in Polk county and other counties in the northern part of the state to aid in the construction of roads.

The town of Rocksbury paid interest on the bonds for twelve years but finally under the advice of counsel refused to farther recognize the validity of the bonds issued, claiming that they were in excess of the law.

The law provides that towns in these northern counties might issue bonds to the extent of ten per cent of the valuation of real estate in the town according to the last preceding assessment and the town claimed that the assessment at the time of issuance of the bonds permitted the issuance of bonds of $360 and no more and that bonds in excess of $360 were void.

The plaintiff claimed that the requisites had been complied with for bonds and precluded the time for questioning the validity in the hands of the bona fide holder, and also claimed that there was no evidence in the county records to show what the assessment ruling was, the assessment being defective, and in any event that the town was estopped because of paying interest for twelve years from questioning the validity of the bonds.

The question involved has never been passed upon in the state by the supreme court directly and the plaintiff appealed to that court. The decision handed down today affirms the ruling of Judge Watts in all points and established the rule of law applicable to these securities in the state. In district court Judge Watts held against the plaintiff in all contentions and in favor of tha town, deciding that the town was only liable even as against a bona fide holder on bonds to the amount of $360 and no more.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury,

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles never be used except on prescription from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio by F, J. Chenney & Company. Testimonials free.

A New Era in Transportation.

The Great Northern Steamship company in placing in service between Seattle, Wash. and Yokohama, Nagaski, Kobe, Shanghai and Hong Kong, the magnificent American built steamships the "Minnesota" and the "Dakota," make a new era in transportation facilities between the United States and the Orient. These magnificent steamships with their superior facilities in handling immense freight cargoes and the luxurious appointments for passenger travel has given an impetus to our oriental trade. The Northern Pacific Route to the Orient is rapidly becoming the popular one and now that the two palatial steamships, "Minnesota" and "Dakota" have been put in commission, there is no question but that a greater increase in our trade with the Orient as well as increased passenger travel to Asiatic ports will be inaugurated. The first sailing of the "Minnesota," in addition to carrying the largest cargo to the orient ever carried by any ship in the world, as well as an extensive passenger list, augurs well for the future.

The "Minnesota" will sail on its next voyage to the Orient on Saturday April 29th and it will not be amiss to say here that the excellence of her passenger accommodations will be heralded to the traveling public of the United States by all who enjoyed the pleasant voyage across the Pacific on her first trip as furnishing the acme of travel comfort. The fact that the superior accommodations of the Great Northern Steamship company in connection with the comfortable journey afforded by the Great Northern Railway to Seattle, the sailing point of the "Minnesota" will make this route the popular one from Occident to Orient.

Millionaire's Poor Stomach.

The worn-out stomach of the over-fed millionaire is often paraded in the public prints as a horrible example of the evils attendant on the possession of great wealth. But millionaires are not the only ones who are afflicted with bad stomachs. The proportion is far greater among the toilers. Dyspepsia and indigestion are rampant among these people, and they suffer far worse tortures than the millionaire unless they avail themselves of a standard medicine like Green's August Flower, which has been a favorite household remedy for all stomach troubles for over thirty-five years. August Flower rouses the torpid liver, thus creating appetite and insuring perfect digestion. It tones and vitalizes the entire system and makes life worth living, no matter what your station. Climatic Cures.

The influence of climate conditions in the cure of consumption is very much overdrawn. The poor patient, and the rich patient, too, can do much better at home by proper attention to food digestion, and a regular use of German Syrup. Free expectoration in the morning is made certain by German Syrup, so is a good night's rest and the absence of that weakening cough and debilitating night sweat. Restless nights and the exhaustion due to coughing, the greatest danger and dread of the consumptive, can be prevented or stopped by taking German Syrup liberally and regularly. Should you be able to go to a warmer clime, you will find that of the thousands of consumptives there, the few who are benefited and regain strength are those who use German Syrup. NAVAL BATTLE NEAR

RUSSIAN AND JAPANESE SQUADRONS IN CHINA SEA READY FOR ENGAGEMENT.

Rojestvensky's Fleet Passes Singapore, Straits Settlement, Steering in a Northeasterly Direction—Japanese Squadron Under Admiral Togo Believed to Be Somewhere in the Vicinity Awaiting the Enemy.

Londou, April 8.—The sudden shifting of interest in the war from the land to the sea and the apparently imminent prospects of a fateful battle between the Russian and Japanese squadrons in the China sea have revived all the interest shown here in the earlier developments of the struggle in the Far East. It is taken for granted that Admiral Togo's ships, reported to be in the neighborhood of Singopore in the middle of March, are still in that vicinity and the report from Penang, on the west coast of the Malay peninsula, that twelve Japanese ships were seen steaming ahead of the Russian warships is interpreted to mean that the former are scouts sent out by Togo to get in touch with the Russians and when their object is accomplished to retire on the main body of the Japanese squadron.

The reports about the numbers of the Russion ships vary, but at any rate over thirty-five battleships, cruisers, colliers and torpedo boats have passed the port of Singapore. The underwriters here presume from the northeasterly course they were steering that after passing Singapore the Russion ships are attempting to reach tha French port of Saigon, Cochin-China. However, it is pointed out that a Japanese squadron of twenty-two ships is still off Horstburg Light, where it was reported March 14. The two naval forces are only about thirty miles apart and may be in touch at any moment.

SQUADRON IS DIVIDED

ONLY A PORTION OF ROJESTVENSKY'S FLEET PASSED PORT OF SINGAPORE.

Singapore, April 10.—Fifty-one ships of Vice Admiral Rojestveasky's Second Pacific squadron passed here Saturday. The most important fighting vessels of the squadron, including the battleships Kniaz Souvaroff, Alexander II., Borodino and Orel, with their complement of cruisers, torpedo boat destroyers, etc., did not arrive and their whereabouts is totally unknown. The vessels which passed Singapore were the following: Battleships Sissoi Veliky and Oleg; cruisers Admiral Nakhimoff, Dmitri Donskoi, Aurora, Izumrud, Jemtchug, Almaz, Russ, Anadyr, Furst Bismarck, Kaiserin Maria Thresa, Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, Koiser Fredrich, Rion, and seven torpedo boat destroyers, all sailing under the naval flag. Under the commercial flag were the volunteer steamers Voronez, Kief, Yaroslav, Tamboff, Vlodimir and Orel, the Russian Novigation company's steamers Meteor, Jupiter and Mercury, the East Asiatic company's steamers Korea and Ksitai, the North Baltic company's steamer Kniaz Gortchakoff, one salvage ship and fifteen colliers.

A French steamer arrived here Sunday with a sailor belonging to the Admiral Nakhimoff who fell overboard and was picked up off Malacca after having been twelve hours in the water.

St. Petersburg, April 8.—A dispatch from General Linevitch to the emperor says:

"The battle at Tsintsatun, April 7, lasted twelve hours. The enemy's losses were heavy from our artillery and rifle fire. Our casualties were: Killed—Captain Prince Mussalsky and four Cossacks. Wounded—Two officers and thirty-four Cossacks.

"On April 5 our outposts, after a fusillade, pushed back the Japanese outposts to Taipiniin.

"Our infantry the same day occupied the village of Koukouseki, after dislodging the enemy. The Japanese retreated precipitately."

TOWN OFFICIAL MURDERED.

Shooting the Climax of a Bitter Townsite Fight.

Beaudette, Minn., April 10.—As the climax of a bitter townsite fight of a year's duration, intensified by relentless prosecution of the gambling and saloon element, Matt C. Gannon, chairman of the town board of Spooner, the American town on the Rainy river, was fatally shot by a mob from Spooner and died from his wounds several hours later.

Matters reached a climax last week when Gannon made a number of arrests at Spooner and Sunday a posse, headed by saloonkeepers, went to Beaudette. It is alleged that before leaving Spooner each man took an oath to kill Gannon before returning.

The posse ordered Gannon to leave town. He refused and went to the hotel. At 9 o'clock Gannon and members of the mob were in the Catchardt hotel bar, when four shots from a 44-caliber revolver were fired through a rear window. One bullet passed through Gannon's leg, a second entered his back and kidneys and the other two shots buried themselves in the bar woodwork.

Gannon's dying statement was taken by a magistrate. He named those who had arranged the affair, also the person who had done the shooting, whom he had seen through the window.

PEACEABLE SETTLEMENT OF THE STRIKE IN CHICAGO SEEMS FAR DISTANT.

Chicago, April 11.—Thera was nothing in the day's developments that would indicate that there is to be a peaceable settlement of the strike inaugurated by the teamsters against the mail order house of Montgomery Ward & Co.

Wagons and vans of the big store manned by nonunion men made several turbulent trips during the day delivering goods to railroad freight houses. Although big and noisy crowds followed the caravans, and the police were forced to break a number of blockades, deliveries to the railroads were declared by the officials of the store to have been a great deal more successful than last week's efforts.

Fifty members of the employers' association at a meeting during the day issued a statement to the teamsters to put a stop to the sympathetic strike. In the resolution adopted by the employers it is also declared that under no circumstances will they allow the teamsters to interfere with the carrying on of legitimate business as will be the case should the strike be extended to other concerns in order to bring Montgomery Ward & Co. to terms.

THE MINNESOTA IS LAUNCHED.

Latest Addition to the American Navy Successfully Floated.

Newport News, Va., April 10.—The battleship Minnesota was successfully launched at the plant of the Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock company during the day. The vessel was christened by Miss Rose Marie Schaller, daughter of State Senator Schaller, of Hastings, Minn. Her maids of honor were Miss Constance Day of St. Paul and Miss Lilian MacMillan of Minneapolis. Governor Johnson was unable to attend and was represented officially by his private secretary, F. A. Day. The governor's wife was in the party.

Among the distinguished visitors in attendance were Assistant Secretary of the Navy Darling, Rear Admiral Harrington, commandant of the navy yard at Portsmouth; Governor I. J. Montague of Virginia, Senator Thomas S. Martin, Lieutenant Governor J. E. Wolford and a number of naval and army officers at Fort Monroe and Norfolk.

A luncheon followed the launching, at which informal toasts were responded to by Governor Montague, Assistant Secretary Darling, Senator Schaller of Minnesota and others.

Cincinnati, April 6.—Mrs. Cassie L. Chadwick was during the day granted a stay of execution by the United States circuit court of appeals, the decision being announced by Presiding Justice Lurton when court convened. The stay of sentence is to hold until a further order of the court, it appearing that a writ of error had been sued out within the required sixty days and a copy of the same had been lodged in the clerk's office of the lower court. After the decision of the court had been announced Judge Francis J. Wing, counsel for Mrs. Chadwick, said that he expected to be able to present the appeal some time during the month of May.

DEATH LIST GROWING

NOW KNOWN THAT THOUSANDS PERISHED IN RECENT INDIAN EARTHQUAKE.

Of Five Thousand Residents of Kangra Only Five Hundred Escaped. Number of Villages Completely Wrecked, Scarcely a Building Remaining Standing—Great Difficulty Experienced in Recovering the Bodies of the Victims.

Calcutta, April 10.—Telegraphic communication with Dharmsala has been restored. The latest accounts show that the earthquake was even more disastrous than at first believed. Of a total population of nearly 5,000 in the town of Kangra it is believed that only 500 are left alive. Many of these have fled. Of the police only a deputy inspector and four sergeants are alive. Many people are still imprisoned in the ruins.

Dharmsala, Kangra, Palanpur, Dhawan and all the neighboring villages were completely wrecked. Scarcely a building remains standing.

Not much damage was done at Haripur, Deragopipur, Nadaum or Hamirpur, but Sujanpur, having a population of about 6,000 souls, is reported to be in ruins.

The shocks still continue. There is no news from Kulu valley, but according to native rumors a great amount of damage has been done.

An official from Dharmsala says the place is a scene of complete desolation. Owing to the scarcity of labor great difficulty is experienced in excavating the ruins, but the Gurkhas are doing excellent work.

HUNDREDS OF VICTIMS

COLLAPSE OF BIG RESERVOIR AT MADRID RESULTS IN HEAVY LOSS OF LIFE.

Madrid, April 8.—Four hundred persons were killed or injured during the day by the collapse of a new water reservoir in course of construction on the outskirts of this city. Fifty bodies have already been recovered.

A workman who was injured says the collapse was so sudden and complete that it was impossible to tell what happened. The men at work on the reservoir, however, anticipated trouble, as a fortnight ago three arches collapsed and cracks developed in four others.

An exact estimate of the casualties is still impossible. It is stated that there were 236 men in the lower part of the reservoir, all of whom were killed.

SPOTTED FEVER RAGING.

Dread Disease Claims Hundreds of Victims in Germany.

Berlin, April 7.—Spotted fever has been raging for several months in epidemic form in Silesia. Seven deaths are reported from Koultz, West Prussia, and thirty families have deserted the place. Several cases are also announced in the province of Saxony.

ASPHYXIATED BY GAS.

Four Persons Meet Death in a House in Chicago.

Chicago, April 10.—Henry Monroe, his wife Anna, their eleven-months'-old child, and a brother of Monroe, were asphyxiated by gas at night in their home at 2056 Canal street. The body of the father and husband was found near the door, with his arms outstretched as if he had been trying to open the door when overcome. The others were found lying in bed. A leak in a gas pipe in the kitchen was responsible for the accident.

Wonder if that "one A.A. Sweaas" cannot be induced to break into print again. Such a literary genius should never allow himself to die abornin'.

At the present writing Frichard has the best of the school fight at Thief River Falls, while Eastman is put to rout and acknowledges that he lied. The fireworks attachments may be looked for at any time now, however.

His Excellency, Governor John A. Johnson has set Friday, April 28, 1905, as arbor and bird day for the state of Minnesota, and in his proclamation asks that this day be properly observed by the citizens of the great North Star state.

If it wasn't for the fact that the up-river sheets only reach a decidedly small per cent of the people, The Gazette would be getting some good free advertising these days, but as it is we might as well shout down a well and hope for returns as to imagine that we will be a gainer by all this free puffing we are getting.

Editor Harry E. Ives last week dished up a decidedly warm roast to a couple of tax-dodgers of St. Hilaire, and it is safe to say that his article struck a happy chord in the minds of all fair-minded people. Harry is emphatic in his denunciation of everything not on the square, and he should be given hearty support by the people of St. Hilaire.

The up-river bunch encourage H. W. Lee in trying to create all the disturbance he can and make the county a big bill of expense, but when one of their own citizens goes after and gets the great Lee, they immediately set up the holler that Red Lake Falls is back of it all. They care about as much for the feelings of the people of Red Lake county as his satanic majesty cares for the bible, and if occasion ever presents itself they will demonstrate it to the satisfaction of all concerned. Put a pin here, reader, and see.

Eastman says that chicken stealing isn't looked on as a crime here. Swiping one hen didn't look to the grand jury like sufficient cause for excitement, John, and your man sent down to make a bill of expense for the county was let go. There isn't a crime on the statute books that doesn't come under a city ordinance at Thief River if the guilty party has the cash to pay with, but when he is broke he has violated the state law and the county foots the bill. Great lovers of law up there, oh yes.

THE HORTON BILL.

A great deal of discussion has been indulged in by the country press during the past couple of weeks, in regard to the Horton bill which the legislature passed over the veto of Governor Johnson, and the state press has taken sides in regard to the right and the wrong of the matter. The ablest article on the subject coming to our notice is that of Editor Julius Schmal, in last week's Redwood Falls Gazette, and we take the liberty of reproducing it below. Mr. Schmal is chief clerk of the Minnesota house of representatives and knows whereof he speaks in the following resume of the matter:

"The bill placing the new capitol building at St. Paul in the hands of the present capitol commission until it is completed, not to exceed two years which was vetoed by Gov. Johnson on the grounds of political expediency was passed by both branches of the legislature over the veto on Thursday of last week. In the senate the vote was 47 in favor of passing it over the veto, five more than the required two-thirds, and in the house it was 87 votes in favor of the act, or seven more than two-thirds, with four more votes ready to be cast in favor of the bill in case they were necessary.

"In a telegram from St. Paul published in the last issue of this paper it was stated that Gov. Johnson had vetoed the bill, and that it was his first political mistake. The building is still uncompleted, and the capitol commission under whom the noble edifice has been reared at the cost of $4,500,000 to the state, have skilled electricians, skilled engineers and skilled mechanics in charge of the different features of the structure, and it cannot be charged that it was anything but good policy and good politics to continue the care of the building in the hands of this commission and their employees until the structure is eventually completed.

"In conversations with Gov. Johnson shortly after the bill was first introduced, that official by indirect implication at least gave certain senators and members to understand that the provisions of the measure were satisfactory to him. The bill was accordingly passed and it was then that the big Democratic politicians of St. Paul observed a chance to play politics. They insisted that the governor must retrace his steps, and veto the bill, and turn over the capitol patronage to them for strengthening their machine in that county. They would have turned out all these skilled employees and placed political workers in their positions, and if any harm came to the architects' masterpiece—well, the people's money could repair the damage. The governor listened to them—and acted for them.

"The bill was called up in the senate last Thursday morning. The Republican senators issued their statement, in which they stated that their action was not a slap at the executive but simply one of expediency, protecting the property of the people against a horde of unskilled and untrained place seekers. Then the bill was placed upon its passage over the veto, and it was successful. The bill, with a message from the senate and from governor, came over to the house shortly after noon. At 2 o'clock the Perley bill taking the normal schools and universities out from the board of control, was a special order and an hour later it was passed. During the hour given for consideration of the bill a number of Democratic politicians were in lounging recesses lobying with Republican members against overriding the veto. Their actions were observed by Speaker Clague, and when the Perley bill was disposed of, and it was found that 114 out of 119 members could be secured under a call of the house, the speaker announced a message from the senate, and Chief Clerk Schmahl read the communication of the governor, together with the action of the senate. The bill was re-read and then came the voting, and after an hour spent in calling the roll and members explaining their votes, it was found that 87 votes had been cast in favor of over-riding the veto, and Speaker Clague announced that the bill had become a law, notwithstanding the veto of the governor."

GOLDEN NUGGETS FOR SALLOW PEOPLE

Of the many dirty deals perpetrated on the public by the Thief River Falls newspapers during the present controversy, the most contemptible was their stories last week as to how Red Lake Falls called a special grand jury to indict H. W. Lee at the county's expense. It seems absurd that they do not credit the general public with more sense than to believe any rot of this sort, but as long as they have spread it broadcast they simply announced openly that they believe that the Red Lake county people are suckers and they intend to play them as such. The actual truth of the matter is that the grand jury was asked for by a man living many miles from Red Lake Falls, who wanted the Thief River Falls murder case investigated, and as soon as this was announced a pronounced epidemic of "grand jury" fever made its appearance at Thief River Falls, which had its grasp on every witness wanted in that case and the grand jury remained in session several days in an endeavor to get the facts in regard to the shooting affray but the fellows up-river who have such regard for law kept getting the "fever" and sufficient witnesses could not be senured to warrant an indictment. Unbeknown to a single person in Red Lake Falls, Ole Arneson appeared and laid the facts of his case before the grand jury, which resulted in an indictment against the great Lee, and as the vote came within one of being unanimous it would appear that Mr. Arneson had a pretty strong case. Not a man from Red Lake Falls was in any way mixed up in the deal, nor did one from here care a snap of their fingers whether or not Lee was indicted, and the charges of the up-river lepers that Red Lake Falls was at all connected with one of their own disturbances should convince the people of their insincerety in all they say. Red Lake Falls has never worried one moment over the actions of Henry W. Lee, and shan't begin to now, as inside or outside of the pen he has no terrors for the people here, and his monkey business has ever been taken as only a huge joke.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

Athenian Editors—Stella Hennemuth, Mike Connaughty and Paul Brunnelle.

Hurrah, for the Athenian program Friday afternoon.

Mabel Rue was absent the first of the week, on account of sickness.

The pupils were awarded a large number of old magazines last week. If you don't believe it look in the pupils desk.

The boys got out and practiced base ball last Friday and made an excellent showing. The only place that is hard to fill out of the material now at hand is a pitcher. As it is, Crookston will have to have about 11 "ringers" to make a show with us.

Wait Johnson and Orson Doe have quit school. They are both greatly missed, not only by the class of '06 but by the rest of the school. Wait was to hold down a position in the left field on the base ball team. We hope to see them both back next fall.

Come and hear the Baritone solo given by Drew Marshall Friday.

The Great Northern went over the new road south of the school Monday and caused quite a commotion among the pupils in the back end of the room.

Chas. Bourdon of the eighth grade has left school.

Miss Guynoir McConnell was down from Thief River Falls Friday and visited the High School.

Come and listen to some good singing tomorrow by the Athenian quartette.

Joseph Toupin took the flyer to Thief River Falls Monday and returned at 5:30.

If you never heard good recitations you will if you attend the program Friday at 3:00 p. m.

The "Lesher Burn" has disbanded.

The High School Band will accompany the baseball team this spring if they go out of town.

Remember the Baritone Solo, Quartette and numerous recitations Friday at 3:00 p. m. sharp. Come one! Come all!

The program given by the Athenians Friday will be the last and best one given by them this year. The program is as follows:

Song, by school. Essay, "An Exaduration" Stella Hennemuth. Recitation, "Told by the Hospital Nurse" Mable Zalser. Piano Solo, "The Flower Girl" Olaf Floan. Recitation "A most obliging little Sister" Ina Linnihan. Essay, "A bad Boy" Albert LaFreniere. Original Story, "Football team of '05" Paul Brunelle. Newspaper, Lizzie Casserly. Prophecy of Class '08, Florence Fletcher. Baritone Solo, Selection from "Wm. Tell" J. Drew Marshall. Parody, Alice Ericson. Quartette, Marshall, Healy, Toupin and Brunelle. Recitation, "The Ride of Jennie McNeil" Freda Ittner. Recitation, "The Incorrigible" Clara Rue.

Don't forget that it will be the best program given by either Athenians or Spartans.

Drew Marshall, captain of the track team has resigned because he has too much outside work to do. Harry Garceau was elected captain.

The Seniors were told that they had more privileges than the other classes, the other day, provided they didn't get caught at anything.

Don't forget that the Athenians will give their last program tomorrow.

Spartans! Spartans! don't you cry.

WASHINGTON SCHOOL NOTES.

Patrick Normandeau and Peter Kilburg, reporters.

Our building is heaving and settling as the frost is leaving the ground. The front door will almost pass the jamb at present and many cracks are widening.

The fifth and sixth grades have at last received their March report cards.

The fifth grade history review has been very successful.

We are looking forward with great interest to the vacation which begins Friday night. We will all be glad of the rest and better able to work harder when we get back.

We have all received our report cards now and know by the red marks where we failed the past month. Let every one take their book home and study so as to erase it.

Tuesday morning the door of the Washington school was shut by the wind while Marcus Marshall was out and he had to come in through Miss Norby's window.

The editors made a mistake in setting type and forgot the name of the reporters of last week. They were Cornelius Schmidt and Bessie Nelson.

Leah Porter returned after several days of illness.

The "C" class of the second grade has caught up to the "B" class in reading.

Several changes have been made in the spelling classes of the second grade

We Offer $1,000

For a Disease Germ That Liquozone Can't Kill.

On every bottle of Liquozone we offer $1,000 for a disease germ that it cannot kill. We do this to assure you that Liquozone does kill germs.

And it is the only way known to kill germs in the body without killing the tissues, too. Any drug that kills germs is a poison, and it cannot be taken internally. Medicine is almost helpless in any germ disease. It is this fact which gives Liquozone its worth to humanity; a worth so great that, after testing the product for two years, through physicians and hospitals, we paid $100,000 for the American rights. And we have spent over one million dollars, in one year, to buy the first bottle and give it free to each sick one who would try it.

Acts Like Oxygen.

Liquozone is not made by compounding drugs, nor is there any alcohol in it. Its virtues are derived solely from gas—largely oxygen gas—by a process requiring immense apparatus and 14 days' time. This process has, for more than 20 years, been the constant subject of scientific and chemical research.

The result is a liquid that does what oxygen does. It is a nerve food and blood food—the most helpful thing in the world to you. Its effects are exhilarating, vitalizing, purifying. Yet it is an absolutely certain germicide. The reason is that germs are vegetables; and Liquozone—like an excess of oxygen—is deadly to vegetal matter.

Liquozone goes into the stomach, into the bowels and into the blood, to go wherever the blood goes. No germ can escape it and none can resist it. The results are inevitable, for a germ disease must end when the germs are killed. Then Liquozone, acting as a wonderful tonic, quickly restores a condition of perfect health. Diseases which have resisted medicine for years yield at once to Liquozone, and it cures diseases which medicine never cures. Half the people you meet—wherever you are—can tell you of cures that were made by it.

Germ Diseases.

These are the known germ diseases. All that medicine can do for these troubles is to help Nature overcome the germs, and such results are indirect and uncertain. Liquozone attacks the germs, wherever they are. And when the germs which cause a disease are destroyed, the disease must end, and forever. That is inevitable.

The Gazette scribe returned Tuesday from a week's visit in southern Minnesota and western Iowa points. The season in that section of the world is from two to four weeks further advanced than it is in the Red River valley, and at Sioux City, Iowa, the people are already wearing their summer clothes and partaking of the cooling drinks. The grain is all in the ground throughout the southern part of the state, and a prosperous and productive year is looked forward to all over that section. While the season is a trifle ahead of ours, the harvest does not come but a day or so sooner, and the long days of sunshine make the valley summers the grandest in the west.

Through the courtesy of State Librarian John E. King, the Gazette editor was shown through Minnesota's handsome new capitol building at St. Paul Monday afternoon, and to say that we were impressed with the magnificence and beauty of the structure would not come near to expressing it. The building is easily the greatest and grandest one of its kind in the west, and there are but few in the whole country that excel it. From the basement to the dome, and from end to end, the capitol is a model of architectural beauty, and a few hours spent in looking it over is time that will never be better enjoyed. To attempt to describe it would be to enter upon a life-time job with a gift for eloquence not possessed by many, and all we can say is that if any Gazette reader ever visits St. Paul and does not look over the new capitol thoroughly, he will have missed a rare treat, and one which does not come often. Librarian and Mrs. King were found comfortably settled in an elegant flat on one of the finest streets in the capitol city, and are all well and enjoying their life amid the new surroundings immensely.

POSTPONED FOR A WEEK.

Trial of Nan Patterson Goes Over on Request.

New York, April 10.—The trial of Nan Patterson on the charge of killing "Caesar" Young, which was to have begun before Recorder Goff in the court of general sessions during the day, was postponed for one week upon request of the prosecution.

The postponement was granted on account of the fight against extradition being made by J. Morgan Smith and his wife, who are now under arrest in Cincinnati charged with conspiracy with Nan Patterson in connection with the Young case. The Smiths are wanted here particularly to be witnesses at the murder trial.

The motion for a delay was strongly opposed by Abraham Levy, chief counsel for the defendant. In granting the postponement Recorder Goff said he did not think that the interests of the defendant or of public justice would be interfered with because of a week's delay.

Cincinnati, April 10.—J. Morgan Smith and wife will start for New York at once, having agreed to drop all opposition to the extradition proceedings under the agreement that they are to answer only to the conspiracy charges.

The bill was opposed by the opposition under the leadership of former Minister of Finance Morine, but a division sustained the premier by 19 to 6.

Wine of Cardui Cured Her.

213 South Pryor Street,
Atlanta, Ga., March 21, 1903.

I suffered for four months with extreme nervousness and lassitude. I had a sinking feeling in my stomach which no medicine seemed to relieve, and losing my appetite I became weak and lost my vitality. In three weeks I lost fourteen pounds of flesh and felt that I must find speedy relief to regain my health. Having heard Wine of Cardui praised by several of my friends, I sent for a bottle and was certainly very pleased with the results. Within three days my appetite returned and my stomach troubled me no more. I could digest my food without difficulty and the nervousness gradually diminished. Nature performed her functions without difficulty and I am once more a happy and well woman.

My Breath.

Shortness of Breath Is One of the Commonest Signs of Heart Disease.

Notwithstanding what many physicians say, heart disease can be cured. Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure has permanently restored to health many thousands who had found no relief in the medicines (allopathic or homoeopathic) of regular practicing physicians. It has proved itself unique in the history of medicine, by being so uniformly successful in curing those diseases.

Nearly always, one of the first signs of trouble is shortness of breath. Whether it comes as a result of walking or running up stairs, or of other exercises, if the heart is unable to meet this extra demand upon its pumping powers—there is something wrong with it.

The very best thing you can do, is to take Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure. It will go to the foundation of the trouble, and make a permanent cure by strengthening and renewing the nerves.

"I know that Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure is a great remedy. For a number of years I suffered from shortness of breath, smothering spells, and pains in my left side. For months at a time I would be unable to lie on my left side, and if I lay flat on my back would nearly smother. A friend advised using Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, which I did with good results. I began to improve at once, and after taking several bottles of the Heart Cure the pains in my side and other symptoms vanished. I am now entirely well. All those dreadful smothering spells are a thing of the past."—F. P. DRAKE, Middletown, O.

POSTPONED FOR A WEEK.

Trial of Nan Patterson Goes Over on Request.

New York, April 10.—The trial of Nan Patterson on the charge of killing "Cæsar" Young, which was to have begun before Recorder Goff in the court of general sessions during the day, was postponed for one week upon request of the prosecution.

The postponement was granted on account of the fight against extradition being made by J. Morgan Smith and his wife, who are now under arrest in Cincinnati, charged with conspiracy with Nan Patterson in connection with the Young case. The Smiths are wanted here particularly to be witnesses at the murder trial.

The motion for a delay was strongly opposed by Abraham Levy, chief counsel for the defendant. In granting the postponement Recorder Goff said he did not think that the interests of the defendant or of public justice would be interfered with because of a week's delay.

Cincinnati, April 10.—J. Morgan Smith and wife will start for New York at once, having agreed to drop all opposition to the extradition proceedings under the agreement that they are to answer only to the conspiracy charges.

The bill was opposed by the opposition under the leadership of former Minister of Finance Morine, but a division sustained the premier by 19 to 6.

Wine of Cardui Cured Her.

213 South Prior Street,
ATLANTA, GA., March 21, 1903.

I suffered for four months with extreme nervousness and lassitude. I had a sinking feeling in my stomach which no medicine seemed to relieve, and losing my appetite I became weak and lost my vitality. In three weeks I lost fourteen pounds of flesh and felt that I must find speedy relief to regain my health. Having heard Wine of Cardui praised by several of my friends, I sent for a bottle and was certainly very pleased with the results. Within three days my appetite returned and my stomach troubled me no more. I could digest my food without difficulty and the nervousness gradually diminished. Nature performed her functions without difficulty and I am once more a happy and well woman.

My Breath.

Shortness of Breath Is One of the Commonest Signs of Heart Disease.

Notwithstanding what many physicians say, heart disease can be cured.

Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure has permanently restored to health many thousands who had found no relief in the medicines (allopathic or homoeopathic) of regular practicing physicians.

It has proved itself unique in the history of medicine, by being so uniformly successful in curing those diseases.

Nearly always, one of the first signs of trouble is shortness of breath. Whether it comes as a result of walking or running up stairs, or of other exercises, if the heart is unable to meet this extra demand upon its pumping powers—there is something wrong with it.

The very best thing you can do, is to take Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure. It will go to the foundation of the trouble, and make a permanent cure by strengthening and renewing the nerves.

"I know that Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure is a great remedy. For a number of years I suffered from shortness of breath, smothering spells, and pains in my left side. For months at a time I would be unable to lie on my left side, and if I lay flat on my back would nearly smother. A friend advised using Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, which I did with good results. I began to improve at once, and after taking several bottles of the Heart Cure the pains in my side and other symptoms vanished. I am now entirely well. All those dreadful smothering spells are a thing of the past."—F. P. DRAKE, Middletown, O.

TO DINE ON HORSE.

QUEER MEAL IS PLANNED FOR FRENCH MINISTER.

Cabinet Officer Will Be Guest of Honor at "Hippophage" Fete Which Takes Place in Paris—Equine Food Becomes Popular.

Paris.—Some of the tasks of the French ministere are hard indeed. They can scarcely ever refuse to preside over any fete connected with an industry or trade from which e certain recognized section of the French people gain their livelihood. For example, M. Trouillot, the minister of commerce, has hed to accept an invitation to be present at the "hippophage" fete.

The eaters of horse flesh are to be present in full number; hut particularly the horse meat butchers and ths class of middlemen who find, sell, or kill the poor animals in question.

The speechmaking, in which the minister of agricultnre will slso perticipete, will be followed by a "grand hanquet," at which horse meat and various preparations from it are to have the place of honor on the menu; and after the hanquet a greweome demonstration is to be made, after the fashion of the Chicago stock yards, of the tims it takes to transform a living equine into a succulent (?) succession of "beef" steaks.

Ths final tidbit on the programme of the day is the unveiling of a statue to the veterinary doctor, Decroix, who was the determined propsgator of the horse meet doctrins in France, who claimed that it was scientifically hetter food than thet of other animels, and who was influential in getting ths consent of the French government to the establishment of horse meat hutcheries.

The consumption of this article of food has greetly grown in Paris during the past few years, for the price of other meat has steadily risen. During the last six months 5,000 horses, mules, or ssses have been thus slaughtered for the Paris market.

Kansas City, Kan.—The remains of more than 500 Wyandotte Indians ars to hs exhumed in Huron cemtery, ons of the oldest Indian burying grounds in this city. Thay are to be taken to various plecee in Kansas and the Indien territory for final burial.

The old burial ground contains two acres of land and is desired for business purposes. It is valued at more than $100,000. The sale of the cemetery was finally determined upon at e meeting of Wyandotte Indians. It has been held in trust by the United States government sinca 1853, and the cemetery lots will be sold under the direction of the secretary of tha interior.

Many roted Indian chiefs and leaders are buried there. More than 300 members of the tribe now in the Indian territory will attend the csremonies being arranged for the removal of the bodies. They will sgsin worship under the old oak end elm trees under which their fathers met more than half a century ago, and which still stand in tha heart of the business district of the city. Many of the bodies will be taken to another old Indian cemetery at Quindaro, Ken.

The people of Kansss City, Kan., have long been trying to persuade ths Indiens to remove their dead from the center of the business district. The graves have heen neglected, fences torn down, and paths made across the unmarked graves. This had much to do with inducing the Indians to remove their dead.

TREES CARRY MESSAGES.

Maj. Squier of the Signal Corps Makes Important Discovery in Wireless Telegraphy.

San Francisco.—Msj. George O. Squier, of the United States signal corps, has made an important discovery in wireless telegraphy. He has found that trees may serve the purpose of marconi's metallic feelers, or antennae, as they are called, and that tree trunks, while serving es masts or towers, also serve as wires to bring the electro-magnetic currents down to the earth.

The healthier the tree the better it serves as a conductor for the highly oscillating currents. The leaves of trees or of plants behave precisely as if they were made of metal, and they will transmit these oscillations from the ground surrounding them through their leaves.

At Fort Mason Mej. Squier attached his telegraphic apparatus to the trees and communicated with the wireless station on Alcatraz island, about two miles distant.

The major clelms great advantages for this system of tree telegraphy in army field operations over any high mast, tower, or balloon system. Maj. Squier found that vegetation was stimulated hy a moderate amount of electricity, and was killed hy heavy shocks, just like animals.

BEEKEEPER NOT A FARMER

Iowa Judge Reaches This Conclusion After Long Deliberation in Bankruptcy Case.

Sioux City.—Judge H. T. Reed, of the federal court for northern Iowa, has issued an order which amounts to a decision thet a keeper of bees is not a fermer and cannot escape the bankruptcy law. The decision is given on an order to declars Bert A. Aldrich, of Smithfield, a bankrupt.

Augustus Christia, of Rodnel, filed a petition to have Aldrich declared a bankrupt. He said that Aldrich owed him $500, and had committed an act of hankruptcy in transferring 160 colonies of hees to A. E. Aldrich on January 4, 1904.

In his answer Aldrich explained that the traosfer of the beea was mads to setisfy a note covered hy a chattel mortgage. He said further hy his attorneys tbet he was a farmer, and as such could not be dsclarsd an involuntary bankrupt.

In reply to this it was set forth that Aldrich was an apiarist and not a farmer. The attorneys declared that such an amount of bees as Aldrich kept would warrent ths decision that he did not ferm for a living, hut was a keeper of hees.

When the case came up before C. L. Roy, referee in hankruptcy, much of ths hearing was on hee culture. Aldrich said that hs owned about 185 stands of bees.

Judge Reed deliberated on the question of hees and hee cultura, and also the art of fsrming. In the end he decided that Aldrich could not hide behind ths allegation that bee culturs was fsrming. Aldrich was adjudged a bsnkrupt.

ALCOHOL FOR CONSUMPTION

Dr. Wilsy Says It Has Been Used to Great Advantags in Cases of Tuberculosis.

Philadelphia.—Diet as a factor in the prevention and cure of consumption, the negro race prohlem, child labor question in southern mills and a number of other themes of equal interest formed the basis of some of the many papers read before the American Association for the Advancement of Science in session here recently.

Dr. W. H. Wiley, chief chemist of tha department of agriculture, said thet among the food material which has justly attained a high position as nutriment for persons tronbled with tuberculosis is alcohol. Most commonly it is used in the form of beer, wine, whisky end brandy, he said. In many maladies, he said, whisky and brandy havs apparently heen nsed to great adventage and douhtless such is the case in tuberculosis.

Edward L. Blackshear, of the Prairie View state normal and industrial college, of Texas, discussed "Some Survivals of Primitive Racial Instincts in Amarican Negroes." As a solution for the race problem hs suggestad simply education, experience and the scattering of negroes over the country.

Prof. A. J. McKelvey, assistant secretary of the national child labor committee, read a paper on "Child Labor in Southern Mills." He said there were more children under 16 years of age working in the fectories of Pennsylvania than there were in all the southern states put together. It wes his opinion that child lahor was not a sectionel but a national evil.

A VILLA IN ITALY

IT WAS ths lsst dey of March. The signora, attended by her frisnds, was sitting in ths cosy library. As she glanced down the columns of the evening paper this short announcement caught hsr eye: "For sale. Tha villa of the Count Soragna."

She clasped her hands.

"Just what I have been wanting so long," she cried. "I will go to-morrow and look at the plece."

"It has heen for ssls for five or six yeers et least," observed one of her friends. "It must be frightfully spiderwebhy by this time."

"A few spider wehs ere easily hrushed away," replied the signora, who wss already busy finding directions as to how to reach the Soragna villa.

"Yes, but the real point of my remark was thet if no one has taken the house in that length of time it cannot he very desirable."

"I refuse to allow the point. I am sure that it is only jeelousy on your part becauss you did not find the advertisement yourself," and the signora smiled triumphantly.

Tha next morning among the rare travelers at tha north station at Milan was a lady, tall and distinguished looking. Shs was avidently ecoustomed to admiration, for she did not appear to notice the glances universally hsstowed upon her, and her whole attention seemed centered in the little guide book in her hand.

"Six months of country life, amid absolute solitude," the signora thought, as shs took her seat in the train.

The Villa Soragna was situated in the very midst of ths Alpine foothills. There ware no towns, scarcely even villeges, nothing but woods and fislds in the neighhorhood. The signora had found her ideal at last.

Not that the signora was an enemy of mankind. On the contrary, she loved her fellow creatures, sometimes in particular, but alwaya in the abstract, as bshooves all good Christians. But there were times when she felt an irresistihla need to see people from a distance in order to love them more.

The almost empty train ran swiftly on its way, and the signora amused herself when the swift glimpses of the villas dotted here and there upon the road.

"I am sure that mine will not he like any of those," she said with a shrug of her beautiful shoulders. "If they were built by a machine they could not be more alike."

When the train stopped and the signora had descended from her compartment she turned to one of the three hackmen who pressed around her and asked:

"Can you take me to the Villa Soragna?"

"The Villa Soragna!" repeated one of tha men, hesitating slightly, as if recalling something he had forgotten.

"Do you not know the way?" said the signora quickly.

"Yes, indeed, Excellency, it is not very far."

"Very well! Let us start," and the signora hastened to take her seat in the rough country coach awaiting her.

"This is certainly tha solitude for which I longed," she thought as the peasant drove slowly along the winding roed. "I think I could love my fellow creatures very dearly if I was allowed to gaze at them from this remote corner of the world."

At langth the wegon stopped before an iron gateway which opened upon a long avenue, leading to a long stone villa, surrounded by graceful trees.

"Is this the Villa Soragna?"

"The same," replied the driver, laconically.

As she spoke a man appeared at the gate.

"You wish to eee some one at the villa?" he inquired, raising his hat politely.

The signora smiled in quick appreciation.

"The villa itself, please," she said. "Is it not for sala?"

The man looked at her closely, scrutinizingly, until the signora felt almost abashed. Then slowly opening the door, he said:

"Enter."

The carriage drove lumheringly up the beantiful avenne, shaded by tall Lomhardy poplars, now faintly tinged with green. Seen closer, the villa was even more beautiful than from a distance, and the signora drew a long breath of pleasure as she murmured:

"How lovely it is here!"

As she stood on the threshold, the stranger who bad admitted her appeared again.

"If you will permit me, signora, I will serve as your guide," he said. "I am the steward."

The signora was conscious of a vague feeling of disappointment at the man's words. Surely, she thought, that air of birth and hreeding belonged to some one of a higher station. Ha made her think of Titian's famous "Portrait of a Gentleman," which she had long admired in the Pitti Gallery.

"The proprietor does not live here?" she asked.

"The count is absent," replied her compenion, opening the door and standing aside for her to enter.

As the signora went from one heautiful room to another she was more and mors delighted. Ths comhined elegance and simplicity of the whole charmed her.

"The people who lived here," she thought, "must he different from others. The very steward sheres the olden grace of manners that is so much a part of the building."

Shs enconreged him to talk, watching him with keen interest. No one of her acquaintances could speek with more charming wit or ease, and as they paused in the rectangular library he referred naturally and with intimate knowledge to the hooks upon the shelves.

Ths signora listened attentively. Then feeling as if she must awake somehow from the dream thet seemed to hold her she said:

"I am mors than satisfied with the villa. Will you please tell me whet the count's price is?"

The steward looked trouhled.

"The last one who looksd at it was told the price was $500,000. But he was a common, coerse sort of man who talked about putting in a steam heating arrangement and electric lights. The count would not have sold the plece to him under any consideration."

The signora looked amused.

"Your count is e proud gentleman," she said. "Somewhat originel, is he not?"

"Yes, I do not deny it," said the young man. "But people who are original are not always wrong. Born here on the estate, which the Soragnes have owned for centuries, ettached to every corner and stona of the house, each room and each bit of furniture is a part of his heart."

"But, excuse me, why then——"

"I know what you would say. Why does the count wish to sell his cheteau? Because he is very poor. He has a very modest income, which, with the sala of the villa, would suffice for all his needs. He has wavered between sentiment and material gains. He would sell his home to a fat old lady with innumerable cages of perrots? He must find some one who would be worthy of his beautiful home."

The signora, touched keenly by the pathetic voice, said warmly:

"Poor Count Soragna!" Then she added, perplexed: "I should never dare present myself before the count for approval. Old maids, like myself, are surely barred."

The steward looked at her in surprise. It was his turn to wonder at her words. Surely so distinguished a woman would not have remained unmarried. But he said, quietly:

"After a certain number of deceptions the count has discovered a plen which works very well. He himself acts as a guide for the visitors to the villa—"

The signora did not wait for him to answer. Turning with questioning eyes she cried:

"Then you are——"

"The Count Soragna, at your service."

If it was not a dream it was certainly like one. The signora, whose chief sin was not timidity, found herself for the first time in her life perhaps distinctly embarrassed. She must have shown it, for the count hastened to say:

"I beg your pardon, a thousand of them; but there was no other method of determining the character of the aspirants to my villa. I love it so truly that I could not give it to anyone who would not love it as I did."

"So you committed the perfidy of springing an examination upon me unprepared?" said the signora, dryly. "And do you think you know me now?" She smiled ironically.

"Not at all," said the count, bending gallantly to pick up a glove she had let fall. "To know a women is always difficult; to affirm that you know her is imprudent. In my case, I merely bow in admiration."

"Bravo, Count Soregna!" and the signora held out her hand, smiling the smile of a woman who has found her master.

"May I take down the sign 'For Sale'?" asked the count as the lady made her way to the door.

The signora pretended to be husy fastening her glove and did not answer.

"May I take down the sign?" He repeated the question humbly.

"What are the conditions?" hut the signora did not lift her eyes from the refractory glove.

There was a moment's silence. Then the count said softly:

"Only one, it is that the future owner of the villa will consent to become the Countess Soragna."

Whatever the signora may have expected, she certainly was not prepared for this. Consequently, being quite unable to decide in a few minutes to take both a villa and a husband, she continued to button and unbutton the glove. Just then the carriage drove heavily up to the door.

"I will come myself for the answer," cried the count, seizing her hand.

For a moment they looked happily into each other's eyes.

"Au revoir," said the signora, gently.—From the Italian, in N. Y. Sun.

BEEKEEPER NOT A FARMER

Iowa Judge Reaches This Conclusion After Long Deliberation in Bankruptcy Case.

Sioux City.—Judge H. T. Reed, of the federal court for northern Iowa, has issued an order which amounts to a decision that a keeper of bees is not a farmer and cannot escape the bankruptcy law. The decision is given on an order to declare Bert A. Aldrich, of Smithfield, a bankrupt.

Augustus Christie, of Rodnel, filed a petition to have Aldrich declared a bankrupt. He said that Aldrich owed him $500, and had committed an act of bankruptcy in transferring 160 colonies of bees to A. E. Aldrich on January 4, 1904.

In his answer Aldrich explained that the transfer of the bees was made to satisfy a note covered by a chattel mortgage. He said further by his attorneys that he was a farmer, and as such could not be declared an involuntary bankrupt.

In reply to this it was set forth that Aldrich was an apiarist and not a farmer. The attorneys declared that such an amount of bees as Aldrich kept would warrant the decision that he did not farm for a living, but was a keeper of bees.

When the case came up before C. L. Roy, referee in bankruptcy, much of the hearing was on bee culture. Aldrich said that he owned about 185 stands of bees.

Judge Reed deliberated on the question of bees and bee culture, and also the art of farming. In the end he decided that Aldrich could not hide behind the allegation that bee culture was farming. Aldrich was adjudged a bankrupt.

He said there were more children under 16 years of age working in the factories of Pennsylvania than there were in all the southern states put together. It was his opinion that child labor was not a sectional but a national evil.

MANUEL LISA'S ROMANCE.

Once Noted St. Louis Fur Trader's Indian Marriage Recalled by His Daughter's Death.

Trenton, Ill.—Mrs. Rosalie Ely, aged over 90 years, is dead at her home here. She was the oldest daughter of Manuel Lisa, who was prominently connected with the early history of St. Louis from 1812 to 1815. Her mother was an Indian woman of the Omaha tribe.

Lisa's life was a romantic one. He was born of Spanish parents in New Orleans in 1772. He became a great fur trader, with headquarters at St. Louis, about 1807, and made long trips up the Missouri river.

A pathetic romance is connected with Lisa's Indian marriage. His wife was a beautiful woman of the Omaha tribe, and bore him two children—a girl, Rosalie, who later became Mrs. Ely, and a boy named Raymond—the latter born in 1816. When Lisa was removing to St. Louis from up the Missouri in 1817 he brought Rosalie with him, to the great grief of her Indian mother. Subsequently he also took the boy from her to be educated in St. Louis. Lisa gave valuable presents to his Indian wife, but refused to allow her to come with him and her children to St. Louis, though she was inconsolable over the separation.

In 1818 Lisa married Mrs. Mary Hempstead Keeney, widow of Joseph Keeney, and daughter of Stephen Hempstead. He lived happily with her until his death, and she survived him nearly 50 years. She died at Galena, Ill., in 1879.

"A few spider webs are easily brushed away," replied the signora, who was already busy finding directions as to how to reach the Soragna villa.

"Yes, but the real point of my remark was that if no one has taken the house in that length of time it cannot be very desirable."

"I refuse to allow the point. I am sure that it is only jealousy on your part because you did not find the advertisement yourself," and the signora smiled triumphantly.

The next morning among the rare travelers at the north station at Milan was a lady, tall and distinguished looking. She was evidently accustomed to admiration, for she did not appear to notice the glances universally bestowed upon her, and her whole attention seemed centered in the little guide book in her hand.

"Six months of country life, amid absolute solitude," the signora thought, as she took her seat in the train.

The Villa Soragna was situated in the very midst of the Alpine foothills. There were no towns, scarcely even villages, nothing but woods and fields in the neighborhood. The signora had found her ideal at last.

Not that the signora was an enemy of mankind. On the contrary, she loved her fellow creatures, sometimes in particular, but always in the abstract, as behooves all good Christians. But there were times when she felt an irresistible need to see people from a distance in order to love them more.

The almost empty train ran swiftly on its way, and the signora amused herself when the swift glimpses of the villas dotted here and there upon the road.

"I am sure that mine will not be like any of those," she said with a shrug of her beautiful shoulders. "If they were built by a machine they could not be more alike."

When the train stopped and the signora had descended from her compartment she turned to one of the three hackmen who pressed around her and asked:

"Can you take me to the Villa Soragna?"

"The Villa Soragna!" repeated one of the men, hesitating slightly, as if recalling something he had forgotten.

"Do you not know the way?" said the signora quickly.

"Yes, indeed, Excellency, it is not very far."

"Very well! Let us start," and the signora hastened to take her seat in the rough country coach awaiting her.

"This is certainly the solitude for which I longed," she thought as the peasant drove slowly along the winding road. "I think I could love my fellow creatures very dearly if I was allowed to gaze at them from this remote corner of the world."

At length the wagon stopped before an iron gateway which opened upon a long avenue, leading to a long stone villa, surrounded by graceful trees.

"Is this the Villa Soragna?"

"The same," replied the driver, laconically.

As she spoke a man appeared at the gate.

"You wish to see some one at the villa?" he inquired, raising his hat politely.

The signora smiled in quick appreciation.

"The villa itself, please," she said. "Is it not for sale?"

The man looked at her closely, scrutinizingly, until the signora felt almost abashed. Then slowly opening the door, he said:

"Enter."

The carriage drove lumberingly up the beautiful avenue, shaded by tall Lombardy poplars, now faintly tinged with green. Seen closer, the villa was even more beautiful than from a distance, and the signora drew a long breath of pleasure as she murmured:

"How lovely it is here!"

As she stood on the threshold the stranger who had admitted her appeared again.

"If you will permit me, signora, I will serve as your guide," he said. "I am the steward."

The signora was conscious of a vague feeling of disappointment at the man's words. Surely, she thought, that air of birth and breeding belonged to some one of a higher station. He made her think of Titian's famous "Portrait of a Gentleman," which she had long admired in the Pitti Gallery.

"The proprietor does not live here?" she asked.

"The count is absent," replied her companion, opening the door and standing aside for her to enter.

As the signora went from one beautiful room to another she was more and more delighted. The combined elegance and simplicity of the whole charmed her.

"The people who lived here," she thought, "must be different from others. The very steward shares the olden grace of manners that is so much a part of the building."

She encouraged him to talk, watching him with keen interest. No one of her acquaintances could speak with more charming wit or ease, and as they paused in the rectangular library he referred naturally and with intimate knowledge to the books upon the shelves.

The signora listened attentively. Then feeling as if she must awake somehow from the dream that seemed to hold her she said:

"I am more than satisfied with the villa. Will you please tell me what the count's price is?"

The steward looked troubled.

"The last one who looked at it was told the price was $500,000. But he was a common, coarse sort of man who talked about putting in a steam heating arrangement and electric lights. The count would not have sold the place to him under any consideration."

The signora looked amused.

"Your count is a proud gentleman," she said. "Somewhat original, is he not?"

"Yes, I do not deny it," said the young man. "But people who are original are not always wrong. Born here on the estate, which the Soragnas have owned for centuries, attached to every corner and stone of the house, each room and each bit of furniture is a part of his heart."

"But, excuse me, why then——"

"I know what you would say. Why does the count wish to sell his chateau? Because he is very poor. He has a very modest income, which, with the sale of the villa, would suffice for all his needs. He has wavered between sentiment and material gains. How could he sell his home to a fat old lady with innumerable cages of parrots? He must find some one who would be worthy of his beautiful home."

The signora, touched keenly by the pathetic voice, said warmly:

"Poor Count Soragna!" Then she added, perplexed: "I should never dare present myself before the count for approval. Old maids, like myself, are surely barred."

The steward looked at her in surprise. It was his turn to wonder at her words. Surely so distinguished a woman would not have remained unmarried. But he said, quietly:

"After a certain number of deceptions the count has discovered a plan which works very well. He himself acts as a guide for the visitors to the villa——"

The signora did not wait for him to answer. Turning with questioning eyes she cried:

"Then you are——"

"The Count Soragna, at your service."

If it was not a dream it was certainly like one. The signora, whose chief sin was not timidity, found herself for the first time in her life perhaps distinctly embarrassed. She must have shown it, for the count hastened to say:

"I beg your pardon, a thousand of them; but there was no other method of determining the character of the aspirants to my villa. I love it so truly that I could not give it to anyone who would not love it as I did."

"So you committed the perfidy of springing an examination upon me unprepared?" said the signora, dryly. "And do you think you know me now?" She smiled ironically.

"Not at all," said the count, bending gallantly to pick up a glove she had let fall. "To know a woman is always difficult; to affirm that you know her is imprudent. In my case, I merely bow in admiration."

"Bravo, Count Soragna!" and the signora held out her hand, smiling this time with the smile of a woman who has found her master.

"May I take down the sign 'For Sale'?" asked the count as the lady made her way to the door.

The signora pretended to be busy fastening her glove and did not answer.

"May I take down the sign?" He repeated the question humbly.

"What are the conditions?" but the signora did not lift her eyes from the refractory glove.

There was a moment's silence. Then the count said softly:

"Only one. It is that the future owner of the villa will consent to become the Countess Soragna."

Whatever the signora may have expected, she certainly was not prepared for this. Consequently, being quite unable to decide in five minutes to take both a villa and a husband, she continued to button and unbutton the glove. Just then the carriage drove heavily up to the door.

"I will come myself for the answer," cried the count, seizing her hand.

For a moment they looked happily into each other's eyes.

"Au revoir," said the signora, gently.

Mrs. George Brunelle and son, Maurice, returned Friday morning from Backduck where they had spent the last two months at the home of Joe Bray. Mrs. Bray, whose illness was the cause of the visit has entirely recovered.

"[illegible]" Brunelle this week purchased a brand new "York" Eb bass, to be used by him in the Red Lake Falls band. The horn is an exact duplicate of the one now being used in the organization, and the two will make a formidable bass section.

J. G. Mills, of St. Paul, general representative of the Equitable Life Insurance company of New York, was a visitor here yesterday and left the agency for this part of the state with John Grady, of this city. Mr. Grady is a hustler, and in securing him the Equitable have scored a strong point.

Mrs. A. P. Toupin went to Park River, North Dakota, Tuesday, in response to a telephone message announcing the illness of her daughter, Mrs. H. N. Johnson. Mrs. Johnson was taken with a very severe attack of grippe and her mother thought it best to be at her side while the attack lasted.

Ed. L. Healy went over to Crookston Friday and attended the meeting for formulating plans for advertising the Red River valley, and was honored by being appointed the member from this county on the executive committee. From Crookston Mr. Healy went to St. Paul where he transacted business for a couple of days.

A cement sidewalk contractor was a caller here the first of the week, interviewing our people with a view to ascertain how much cement work he could secure here this year. He met with good success, and it is given out on good authority that our Main street will be graced with cement walks for several blocks before fall. This is a move in the right direction and the property owners will never regret putting in this best of all sidewalks.

Lee Froths at the Mouth.

In an article in the Thief River News last week, H. W. Lee curses the Court, Grand Jury that indicted him, the people who didn't indict him, and all the inhabitants of earth, air and sea.

The article is shamefully abusive of the Court and Grand Jury and Mr. Lee may deem himself lucky if he escapes a fine for contempt of court.

Judge Watts is one of the most fair-minded, able, patient, impartial and all-enduring judges in the state.

The Grand Jury which indicted Lee was composed of twenty of the most honest, intelligent, fair-minded men in Red Lake county, and Lee's charges are a grave insult to them which should not be borne with. They come from every corner of the county, from nineteen different towns.

Here is the list of men whom Lee abuses for indicting him, with the place of residence of each. Sam Sabourin, Terrebonne; Joseph Guirard, Poplar River; Henry Lemieux, Garnes; Erick Iverson, Emardville: O. W. Brink, St. Hilaire; Joseph Laurent. Gervais; Eusbe Normandeau, Red Lake Falls; E. K. Gjirnes, Garnes; C. A. Nelson, Bray; Gustav Lubitz, Polk Centre; D. Haugen, Wyandotte; Peter Roerig, Lambert; August Swanson, River Falls: Eric Hoard, Sanders; Joseph Helm, Red Lake Falls; Chas. Huot, Louisville; Albert Feragnu, Norden; X. Sauve, Terrebonne; E. E. Fletcher, Red Lake Falls; Thomas Dougherty, Black River; W. B. Fuller, Thief River Falls.

And it is whispered that the Grand Jury voted 19 to 1, to indict Mr. Lee. It was a Thief River Falls man who made the charge against him and not a man of Red Lake Falls except the Grand Jury knew there was any charge against him until the indictment was brought into court.

In the face of these facts Lee's claims that a picked Grand Jury was called by the court specially to indict him, and that Red Lake Falls people brought about his indictment, sound like the ravings of a madman.

We do not know whether he is guilty of the offense charged in the indictment or not. We hope he is not and believe he should have and will have every chance to prove his innocence. He had such a chance at the recent term of Court. The petit jury was not discharged at the time he was brought into Court and the Clerk so informed him. He could have had an immediate trial.

Red Lake Falls people have no grudge against Mr. Lee. We do not take him seriously down here. He and his injunction antics are looked at in the light of a huge joke. We think he is perfectly harmless and needs no muzzle. But two of the most prominent citizens of his own town when told of his indictment remarked, "It's good enough for him. He ought to be indicted."

If Mr. Lee wishes to know their names he has but to inquire.

IT'S NAME IS SMILEY.

Settlers Living in Town 153, Range 42, Honor Former County Surveyor.

The settlers living in town 153, range 42, have decided to name their town Smiley, in honor of W. C. Smiley, a former resident of Thief River Falls and ex-county surveyor of Red Lake county, who did much to secure the opening of this land to settlement.

When the town was first organized, about two months ago, the name of Big Bend was selected, but it was found that there was another town by that name in the state and the State Auditor desired that another name be chosen.

WILL GET SETTLERS

Red River Valley Immigration Society Starts Out With Exceptionally Large Membership.

The meeting in Crookston last Friday of representatives from Norman, Polk, Marshall, Kittson, Roseau and Red Lake counties for the purpose of fostering immigration to the Minnesota side of the Red River Valley, promises to result in great benefits to the territory affected. The men present were representative business and professional men, and all displayed the energy and interest that is necessary to success in any undertaking.

Chairman Sjoberg, of Roseau, spoke at some length on the necessity for the people of the Red River Valley to take immediate steps to secure immigration from the states where the farmers are constantly leaving for points where cheaper land can be secured and where rents are not prohibitive. He advanced some excellent ideas. Hon. Halvor Steenerson also made an excellent address in which he pointed out the many advantages of the valley to be placed before the homeseekers, which combined could not be duplicated in any other section of the United States or Canada, especially when the comparatively low price of lands in the Red River Valley are taken into consideration. J. W. Wheeler of Crookston, Dan Shaw of Thief River Falls, Geo. A. Ralph of Crookston, and others also spoke regarding the necessity for the business men of the valley to be up and doing to secure immigration.

The convention got down to business by instructing Chairman Sjoberg to appoint an executive committee of seven, one from each of the six counties and one at large, and the committee, consisting of Messrs. Geo. A. Ralph, Martin Evanson and John Lundberg, after a brief session reported the following names for committee and the report was adopted: L. Lamberson, Marshall; Israel Sjoberg, Roseau; J. W. Wheeler, Polk; P. J. Konzen, Kittson; J. E. C. Volland, Norman; Ed. L. Healy, Red Lake; and Dan Shaw of Thief River Falls as a member at large.

The executive committee is to perfect plans for a permanent organization, submit a constitution and by-laws, investigate various plans of advertising and the cost of same, and when this work is completed call another convention to ratify the work of the committee and push the work in hand forward. The member of the executive committee from each county is also to appoint a committee of five from his county to prosecute the work in the county, such as the raising of funds, etc.

All present felt enthusiastic over what can be accomplished along the line suggested and with the co-operation of the press which will be given, the Minnesota Red River Valley Immigration Association, whatever the society finally adopts, will without doubt do a splendid work.

SEEDING HAS COMMENCED.

Farmers of This Section Have Begun Putting in Their Grain.

Seeding in the Red River Valley is on in full blast this week. The fields of the entire Minnesota valley have dried up remarkably during the recent warm weather and farmers are putting immense quantities of seed into the ground these days.

Old time farmers here are of the opinion that the greater portion of the wheat seeding will be completed before the end of the month, an almost unprecedented record for the valley from an early seeding standpoint and the general opinion prevails that the result of the year's work on the farms will be extremely satisfactory. The ground is in excellent condition, better than for years past, the greater portion of the fields being plowed.

The deep frost resulting from last winter's lack of snow is one of the best possible indications of a good crop. Deep frosts keep the ground in a moist condition during the early growing season when rains are scarce and are the best thing possible for the crop of wheat and other grains, vegetables and grasses.

AN ELABORATE DISPLAY

Work of the Grades of the Red Lake Falls Public Schools Being Shown at Lafayette Building.

Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday of this week have been designated as visitors' days at the Lafayette school in this city, and in two rooms in that building a display of the work of the grades has been made that certainly reflects great credit upon the scholars and instructors of the Red Lake Falls schools.

The displays consist of everything in kindergarten, first, second, third and fourth grade work, and comprise a comprehensive exhibit of everything that has been done by the school during the present term. In it are included the colored paper work and weaving by the youngest pupils of the lower grade, to the examination papers and map work of the older pupils, and the many excellent, features included make it a novel and instructive study to the parent who desires to see what is being accomplished.

The samples on exhibition are all taken from the regular every day work of the pupils, and are in no sense ones prepared especially for this occasion, which makes them doubly interesting. Nearly all of them contain the original markings by the instructors, so that parents may compare the work of their children with that of others and govern themselves accordingly.

Without question Red Lake Falls has a most competent set of instructors, who are using their utmost efforts to steadily advance the standard of our schools, but without the hearty co-operation of the parents their task is nearly a hopeless one. No better encouragement can be given than by the parents and others visiting the school this week and carefully examining the work in its various stages, that they may become better acquainted with their duty towards their children and the school.

Through the courtesy of Prof. Chamberlain, The Gazette scribe was shown these displays in detail, and while we confess our inability to describe the excellence of the exhibit, we can heartily commend it to every resident of the city, and assure them that a visit to the school building Saturday will be a decidedly interesting revelation.

SOO IS GRADING.

Work Started On New Line From Thief River To Kenmare.

The work of grading on the Soo road was begun the first of the week by Contractor Treadway a short distance west on the Spaulding farm in Marshall county. A big force of men and teams is at work there. Gottfried Erickson has established his camp at Lower Snake and has begun work there with a good sized force. Wm. Tripp has established his camp east of Warren, on the old Wood & Walker farm in McCrea, and expected to start work this morning with thirteen teams and about twenty-five men, which force will be increased later on. Mr. Tripp has a contract to construct three miles of grade.

Another contractor has located a camp on the line between Comstock and McCrea and has started work at that point. Other camps will be located at different points and soon the dirt will fly along the entire line from Thief River Falls to Kenmare. An immense quantity of bridge timber has been unloaded at the Great Northern track and is being hauled by teams to places where it is to be used.

BIG MINSTREL COMING

Frank Mahara and Company of Colored Artists To Appear at the Metropolitan Next Thursday.

It is hardly necessary to introduce the famous Frank Mahara to the theatre going public as he has always been high in their estimation as a first class purveyor of minstrelsy and rag time opera for a number of years past. This year with a new palace car, thirty colored artists, a magnificent complement of scenery and costumes, striking electrical effects and a combination of specialty artists, dancers, eccentric comedians, novelty artists and sweet voiced singers, Frank Mahara seems to be able to substantiate his claim that he has reached the acme of minstrelsy. Mahara's Minstrels will hold forth at the opera house next Thursday evening, April 28, giving their splendid street parade immediately upon the arrival of the train.

Suicide at St. Hilaire.

N. Shannon aged 50, watchman for the Crookston lumber company at St. Hilaire was found yesterday morning in his barn at that place hanging from a rafter with a self made noose about his neck and life extinct. Shannon has been employed by the mill company at St. Hilaire as watchman for several years past and recently lost his position through inattention to duty. He became despondent, brooded over the matter from one end of the day to the other and it is believed was at the end of his rope from a financial standpoint when he committed his rash act. He leaves a wife and thirteen children in straightened circumstances, and the county will likely have to go to their assistance.

TEAM IS WORKING.

Fire Department Preparing To Participate In Tournament.

A running team picked from the members of the Red Lake Falls fire department, is being organized this week, and active practice will at once commence in order to fit themselves for participation in the firemen's tournament at Blackduck in June.

The Reichel building next door to the postoffice has been rented by the department and will be used as training quarters, where the members of the team will be put through the paces and strengthened in wind and other necessary qualifications that are needed for a successful organization. Ralph E. Wyer, F. A. Grady and Harry Healy will have the training in hand, and the boys all start out with a determination to go after the honors.

The tournament at Blackduck in June will be one of the largest ever held in the Valley, and indications are that nearly every city in the Valley will have a team in the contests. Large prizes will be offered, and altogether the tournament will be made as successful as work and money can make it.

Our department has some fast men on their list, and will undoubtedly make a creditable accounting of themselves when the time comes.

STATESMEN—AND CONVICTS.

Gary Graphic: Thief River Falls is laying in ammunition for the county seat fight. The saloon license there was reduced from $1000 to $500 with the understanding that each saloon would donate $500 to the campaign fund. Thief River has some good material for future statesmen.

MEAT SHOP MERGER

F. X. Caillier Closes His Meat Market and Sells His Stock To Groshong & Blake, Leaving But One Market.

Monday evening, F. X. Caillier, who has conducted a meat market here for a couple of years past, closed up his business, owing to other affairs demanding his attention, and the stock, etc., contained in his shop was sold to Groshong & Blake, of the Falls market.

This leaves Red Lake Falls with but one meat market, but as the present firm are known for their public spiritedness and enterprise, the people of the city have no fears but what they will get a continuation of the good service given in the past.

Messrs. Groshong & Blake intend to make improvements in their place of business, and will have one of the finest appointed shops in the west when they get through. May success reward their efforts.

NOT MUCH CAUSE FOR FEAR.

Two young lady evangelists have secured fifty converts at Red Lake Falls in a couple of weeks and now they will tackle Thief River Falls. What if they should get Wiley Tindolph, Henry W. Lee and John Eastman?—St. Hilaire Spectator.

Guess there's no danger, Harry. It has long since been known that friend Tindolph was a follower of the righteous and narrow path, but as far as hoping that the two last named may be made to see error of their way, there seems to be no chance of such a thing happening. "Treat thy neighbor as thyself" is a motto unknown to these valiant defenders of the blind pig cause, and some persuation other than evangelistic work will have to be resorted to before they can be brought into the lime-light.

CONCERT AND BALL

Last Indoor Musical Event By Red Lake Falls Band To Be Given Next Monday Evening.

The last indoor concert by the Red Lake Falls band for the season will be given at the Metropolitan opera house next Monday evening, and arrangements are being made to give the public one of the best times of the season.

The concert will consist of several excellent band selections and specialties, and will be bound to please the most exacting critic, after which will follow a grand Easter ball—and as the forty day of rest period is over the day preceeding, the ball promises to be a delightful society event.

The prices have been made as follows for the event: Holders of season tickets and their immediate families, free; concert tickets, 25c; concert and dance, $1.00 per couple, for all not on the regular list.

The music for the dance will be furnished by the band orchestra, and from indications one of the largest crowds in the history of the city will attend.

Do not fail to secure your seats early, as you will miss a rare treat if you don't attend.

Prof. Onstad will come here on Thursday of each week instead of Monday as heretofore. The boys are working hard to make a success of their band. They now have twenty-four members and they meet promptly three times a week.

The saw mill started up last Monday morning and the night crew commenced the same evening and everything is running with its old time smoothness.

It is reported that the Thief River Falls saw mill is short of logs and will be compelled to shut down for a few days. They have plenty in the river but they are coming in slow on account of the low water in the river.

Prof Onsted speaks very highly of the band boys. He says that they have plenty of musical talent and if they continue to work as hard as they do now, they cannot help but make a satisfactory showing in a short time.

There has not been a meeting as yet of the village council to consider the Hanny-Thompson tax dodging cases, but we understand that the question has been considered informally. It is probable that Mr. Hanney will be served with a notice soon after the next meeting to remove that portion of the porch of Hotel Markham which is now in the street. Of course the tax payers will unite with the Spectator in considering it very reprehensible of the council in taking any action that would compel a man to pay his just and honest taxes.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury,

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles never be used except on prescription from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Chenney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio by F. J. Chenney & Company, Testimonials free. Sold by Druggists. Price 75c. per bottle.

Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Notice To Clean Up.

Notice is hereby given that all manure, refuse and everything in that nature must be removed from the yards and alleys of the property owners at once, and such alleys and yards kept free and clean. All manure, etc., can be hauled to the rear of L. A. Kaufer's lot in the western part of town, but all dead animals must be buried in the burying spot near the old saw mill. Steps will be taken to strictly enforce sanitary conditions this year, and the public is warned against leaving the dirt untouched—By order of the Board of Health, J. C. Wilkinson, health officer.

Climatic Cures.

The influence of climate conditions in the cure of consumption is very much overdrawn. The poor patient, and the rich patient, too, can do much better at home by proper attention to food digestion, and a regular use of German Syrup. Free expectoration in the morning is made certain by German Syrup, so is a good night's rest and the absence of that weakening cough and debilitating night sweat. Restless nights and the exhaustion due to coughing, the greatest danger and dread of the consumptive, can be prevented or stopped by taking German Syrup liberally and regularly. Should you be able to go to a warmer clime, you will find that of the thousands of consumptives there, the few who are benefited and regain strength are those who use German Syrup. PLANTS HAVE HYSTERIA.

Certain Species Have Nerves That Are as Sensitive as Those of Human Beings.

Science claims to have discovered that plants have nerves, and that some species are irritable and nervous to a marked degree. The peculiar phenomena are not new, for the poets have sung of the sensitive plant's plaintive actions when played upon by the rough wind and of the mimosa's fright when crushed or broken by some strange foot; but these were supposed to be merely figures of speech, and no one believed that the song makers had such insight as to discover that plant organisms were gifted with nerve centers and brain cells. Science has worked out the fact, however, says the New York Times, that the poets were nearer the truth than we gave them credit for, and that certain species of our common woodland growths possess nerves that can be played upon by the east wind as readily as those which afflict mankind. The sensitive plant leads all others in this respect. But what we considered innate modesty at being handled is nothing more than irritable nerves. The genus Mimosa comprises about 200 species, and most of these exhibit peculiarly irritable natures if touched or handled in the wrong way. The Mimosa pudica, the botanical name for the sensitive plant, is so highly organized that it is kept in a state of neurasthenia most of the time. A puff of wind, the tramping of heavy feet near it, or the rude touch of the hand, will cause this plant to go off into nervous hysterics. The exciting noise or commotion strikes the nerves of the plant and causes it to close up or droop its leaves. Hundreds of sensitive plants have been diagnosed in the modern biological laboratories, and the observers of the plants have traced the nerve centers to their foundation.

In some of the plants the ends of the nerves have been located. Thus if Mimosa pudica is touched with ever so fine a point at the base of a pinna or along its axis, the most remote pair of leaves will shiver and begin to close. Finally, when all the leaves have closed, the pinna which has been touched will droop. The shock has been so great that the whole nervous system has been temporarily disarranged. However, like all nervous, irritable people, there is a point beyond which fright reacts and a control of the system begins to manifest itself. If the sensitive plant is shaken for some time it gets over its attack of neurasthenia and some of the leaves will begin to open again.

The most sensitive place of the plant is at the base of the secondary leaf stalks, where an immense number of nervous corpuscles or delicate tissues are located.

WHEN PEACE COMES IN ASIA

Neither Russia Nor Japan May Be Allowed to Dictate What Terms Shall Be.

"There is little doubt that the present struggle, if other nations do not interfere, will be a bitter one," says Gen. Francis Vinton Greene in the war number of the World's Work, "but should Russia gain a really decisive victory, as she did over Turkey in 1878, she would seek to make Japan a mere Russian province, filled with splendid harbors and forming a magnificent outpost for the coast of the orient. Should Japan gain such a victory over Russia, she would wish to drive Russia entirely away from the Pacific coast, establish herself on the mainland and put herself at the head of the far eastern races.

"Neither will be allowed to do what it wishes. Wars are not ended in that way in these days, but in such a way as the great nations think proper. In her last war Russia had Turkey at her mercy, but she was obliged to tear up the treaty she had made at San Stefano and to submit to such terms as the noncombatant nations saw fit to allow at Berlin. And in her last war Japan inflicted a signal defeat upon China and dictated the terms of peace in the treaty of Shimonoseki, which was ratified on May 8, 1895. But only two days later, at the dictation of Russia, Germany and France, the Japanese emperor signed a document in which he renounced and gave up the chief advantages he had gained by that treaty. Similarly now, it is quite certain that Japan will not become a Russian province, nor will there be any 'yellow peril' under the leadership of Japan, for, no matter which side wins, the treaty of peace will be made, not by the two combatants, but by a congress of all the great powers, including ourselves—so far have unforeseen events carried us away from the traditions of Washington. The terms of that treaty will be such as the great nations think best for the interests of the whole world, and not alone of the two nations who carried on the war."

PREPARE FOR BATTLE

RUSSIAN SQUADRON ANCHORED IN KAMRANH BAY COALING AND REVICTUALING.

Rojestvensky Making Final Arrangements on Coast of Cochin-China Before Embarking on the Final Stage of His Journey—Only Eight Deaths Occur on Board the Vessels Since Their Departure From Europe.

St. Petersburg, April 17.—The news that vessels of the Russian squadron have put into Kamranh bay, north of Cape Padaran, north of the east coast of Cochin-China, bears out statements contained in these dispatches a week ago to the effect that Admiral Rojestvensky probably would seek shelter off that part of the Cochin-China coast and there coal and make his final preparations before embarking on the final stage of his journey. No definite information is obtainable as to the length of the squadron's stay at Kamranh bay or whether the warships have already sailed, the admiralty, even if it knows, being naturally silent on this point.

"You may be sure," said an officer, "that every precaution will be taken against a torpedo attack. Rojestvensky can be relied upon to protect his ships."

Among naval men the idea that Admiral Rojestvensky has divided his squadron is not entertained.

HEALTH EXCELLENT

ONLY EIGHT DEATHS ON RUSSIAN WARSHIPS SINCE LEAVING EUROPE.

Saigon, April 17.—The Japanese recently captured a large number of colliers off the coast of Cochin-China.

Six men, supposed to be Japanese, landed some days ago at Cape St. James, near here, from an Annamese junk and after a brief stay re-embarked.

A number of Russian warships are anchored in Kamranh bay, where they are revictualing.

The steamer Iridan, which was purchased by a local French firm, sailed Sunday evening with a full cargo of provisions for the squadron.

The health of the Russians is remarkably good. Only eight deaths from disease have occurred since their departure from Europe out of an effective force totalling 18,000 men.

A Russian officer suffering from beriberi is in the hospital here. The other sick men who were brought here by the Russian hospital ship Orel include Prince Cantacusene, but the reports that the Orel had wounded men on board are unfounded, as there had been no fighting up to the time of her arrival.

LITTLE DOING IN MANCHURIA.

Frequent Collisions of Cavalry Forces Reported.

Tokio, April 17.—The following official report was issued during the day from the headquarters of the Japanese armies in Manchuria:

"On the night of April 15 five squadrons of the enemy's cavalry entered Sanyenching, on the Fakoman-Fenghua road. Our force made a night attack and repulsed the enemy northward. The enemy was panic stricken and left eight men dead on the field. Our losses were two men killed.

"Frequent collisions between cavalry are occurring at various places. Otherwise there has been no material change in the situation."

AWAITING JUDICIAL OPINION.

Second Trial of Nan Patterson Again Postponed.

New York, April 17.—The trial of Nan Patterson for the murder of Caesar Young, which was postponed from Monday of last week, was again postponed during the day when the case was called in the court of general sessions.

The delay this time, however, probably will be only for twenty-four hours, since the only thing awaited is the final ruling by Justice Gaynor on a motion asking that District Attorney Jerome be ordered to surrender the papers confiscated when J. Morgan Smith and his wife were arrested at Cincinnati. The motion for a postponement, which was made by Assistant District Attorney Gans, was strenuously opposed by counsel for the prisoner.

MORE WAGES THE OBJECT.

General Strike on Sugar Plantations at Ponce, Porto Rico.

San Juan, P. R., April 17.—A general strike for more wages has broken out on the largest sugar plantations in the Ponce district. Meetings of the laborers are being organized. The American Federation of Labor is taking an active part in the movement.

Socialist Colony in Cuba.

Red Lodge, Mont., April 17.—Several hundred Finnish miners and farmers of this vicinity, all ardent socialists, are planning the establishment of a colony near Havana, Cuba, in which socialistic doctrines will be carried out to the letter.

MANDATE IN SECURITIES CASE.

Decree Issued by United States Supreme Court.

Washington, April 18.—In accordance with the previous announcement by Chief Justice Fuller the mandate of the supreme court of the United States in the Northern Securities case was issued during the day. It was directed to W. P. Clough, chief counsel for the Securities company, and the essential part of it is as follows:

"Whereas, in the present term the case came on to be heard before the supreme court and was argued by counsel, it is now and here ordered, adjudged and decreed by this court that the decree of the United States circuit court of appeals in this cause be and the same is hereby affirmed with costs; and that the said appellant, the Northern Securities company, recover against the said appellees $20 for its costs herein expended and have execution therefor; and it is further ordered that this cause be and the same is hereby remanded to the circuit court of the United States for the district of New Jersey."

MOTHER AND SON SHOT

DOUBLE TRAGEDY AT ST. PAUL APPARENTLY THE DEED OF A DEGENERATE.

St. Paul, April 13.—John Keller, aged sixteen, was murdered and his mother, Mrs. Frederick S. Keller, was fatally wounded at their home, 1 Reids court, at midnight. William Williams, who shot them, is under arrest at the Central station. He gave himself up to the police immediately after the shooting.

No reasonable cause has been assigned for the shooting beyond the statement of Williams that he wanted the boy to go away with him and that the mother refused her permission. It is believed that Williams is a degenerate and that in a moment of frenzy over the refusal of his request he fired the fatal shots.

Immediately after the shooting the wounded boy and his mother were removed to the city hospital. The boy died at 3 o'clock, never regaining consciousness after being shot. There is little hope for the mother's recovery.

The police say that Williams is a degenerate and a sexual pervert and give this as the motive for the crime.

SIX HUNDRED MORE MEN OUT.

Striking Finnish Miners Close Down Three More Mines.

Duluth, April 18.—Finnish miners who went on strike a week ago at the Hull-Rust and Sellers mines, and who have since forced nearly 1,500 men to abandon their work at Chisholm, Hibbing and Buhl mines, succeeded in closing the Mahoning, Agnew and Albany mines during the afternoon, adding nearly 600 more men to those on enforced vacation.

Superintendent West of the Hull-Rust mine has been served with notice by the strikers that if he did not have his pumps up by 10 a. m. they will use force.

The strikers have been so much encouraged by their temporary successes in frightening their fellow countrymen into abandoning the mines that they have become so emboldened as to dictate to the owners of the mines. The business men of Hibbing, Chisholm and Duluth will hold a meeting during the day to discuss the matter of calling upon Governor Johnson to send troops to guard the properties.

BY DIPLOMATIC MEANS.

Amicable Settlement of Moroccan Dispute Likely.

Paris, April 15.—Although the details are carefully guarded there is the best of reason to believe that conversations have actually begun between the representatives of France and Germany with the view to removing the misunderstandings relative to Morocco. This is not yet announced here and the officials do not wish to give too optimistic an aspect to the situation when the overtures are at most in a preliminary stage. However, it is certain that diplomatic means have been found to bring about a mutual exchange of views instead of the mutual recriminations which heretofore have been going on. This favorable turn of affairs appears to be the direct result of the more moderate attitude Germany has shown after communicating with Washington, London, Rome, Madrid, St. Petersburg and Vienna.

HOPE NOT ABANDONED.

Condition of Joseph Jefferson Reported Unchanged.

Atlanta, Ga., April 15.—The latest advices as to the condition of Joseph Jefferson, who is reported seriously ill at his winter home, West Palm Beach, Fla., are that his condition is unchanged. His family and friends are hopeful and his physicians say the reports of his illness have somewhat exaggerated the seriousness of the case.

APPROVES PROPOSED DIVISION.

Congregation of the Propaganda Favors Dividing Archdiocese.

Rome, April 18.—The congregation of the propaganda, after a full discussion of the subject, during the day approved of the proposed division of the archdiocese of Milwaukee. No action was taken on the appointment of any of the candidates for bishop whose names have been proposed.

NEWSBOYS IN A PANIC

FALSE ALARM OF FIRE CAUSES WILD STAMPEDE IN INDIANAPOLIS THEATER.

Several Hundred Excited Youngsters Struggle to Escape by Narrow Stairway, Crushing the Life Out of Four and Injuring Many Others, Several Fatally—Some of the Unfortunates Blamed for Causing the Disaster.

Indianapolis, April 18.—Frenzied by a false alarm of fire several hundred eager newsboys, struggling to obtain their share of free tickets to a local theater, stampeded in a narrow stairway in the Masonic Temple at night, crushing the life out of four boys, and it is believed fatally injuring several others.

The tickets were being distributed by a representative of a patent medicine company. Long before the time appointed for the distribution the stairs of the Masonic Temple at the southwest corner of Washington street and Capitol avenue were crowded with a pushing yelling crowd of newsboys, each anxious to be first to receive his pass. When the distribution began the excitement became more intense and the efforts of several policemen who had been detailed to prevent trouble were unavailing.

It is stated by a witness that some of the boys anxious to get ahead of those who were ahead, shouted "fire." Instantly those at top, facing about, with almost superhuman strength, began to force their way to the bottom of the stairs. Shrieks and personal encounters followed for a few seconds, when those at the head of the stairs fell headlong on the struggling mass at the bottom of the stairs.

The Work of Rescue Begun.

Instantly policemen from the central station, who responded to a riot call, began the work of rescue. Four boys were dead when extricated from their position at the bottom of the stairs. Others believed to have been fatally crushed were taken out as fast as they could be disentangled from their frenzied companions, who fought and clung to each other in desperation. The immense crowd of people from the business district attracted by wild rumors jostled about the bottom of the stairs and hampered the work of the police and ambulance corps.

The dead were hurriedly placed in ambulances and sent to the morgue for identification. The fatally injured were sent to the city hospital and the city dispensary, while many who received only slight injuries were made comfortable in carriages and sent to their homes.

HEINZE IN ACCIDENT.

Mining Magnate Injured in Collision of Automobiles.

Butte, Mont., April 15.—Seven persons were injured in a collision between a motor car belonging to F. Augustus Heinze, the mining magnate of this city, and the runabout containing Thomas Roe, a liveryman, and Miss Lillia Lacombe. In the motor were F. Augustus Heinze, A. L. Frank, a mining engineer, and T. C. Bach and M. L. Gunn of Helena, Mont., and A. E. Hook, the chauffeur. All of the persons were painfully injured, but none will die.

While going about thirty miles an hour the automobile crashed into the vehicle driven by Roe, hurling the occupants a distance of nearly twenty feet. The motor car turned completely over, but fortunately the persons riding in the car were thrown clear of the wreck. Heinze and other members of the party escaped with slight bruises and scalp wounds.

LAW DECLARED INVALID.

New York Ten-Hour Day Statute Is Knocked Out.

Washington, April 18.—In an opinion by Justice Peckham the supreme court of the United States held to be unconstitutional the New York state law making ten hours a day's work and sixty hours a week's work in bakeries in that state. Justices Harlan, White, Day and Holmes dissented and Justice Harlan declared that no more important decision had been rendered in the last century.

The opinion was handed down in the case of Lockner vs. the state of New York and was based on the ground that the law interferes with the free exercise of the rights of contract between individuals. The court of appeals of the state upheld the law and affirmed the judgment of the trial court holding Lockner guilty.

The county seat question is a "dead issue" for a time at least, and the up-river papers will have a breathing spell which will undoubtedly be appreciated by their readers.

The Plummer Pioneer settles the question for all time by stating that Red Lake Falls was afraid to have the county seat question come to a vote. Charley ought to know—he gets good pay for his ideas.

The editor of the Rochester, Ind., Sentinel says he has been at the head of that paper for nine years and in all that time he has never taken a "dead-head" ride on the railroad or a ticket of admission to any entertainment that has not been paid for fourfold in advertising. There is nothing startling about that statement. Most of the so-called "courtisies" extended to newspapers are paid for from four to a thousand fold says the Crookston Times.

A petition signed by people living in North Dakota and containing the names of all of the dead Indians Joe DuChamp dug up on the reservation last summer, may be the Thief River idea of an "honorable fight," but the people at large won't believe for a minute that the gang up the stream didn't use every underhand method known to man to obtain signatures—the fact of their legal right to sign never entering into the transaction. And still they holler "graft."

The present session of both branches of the Minnesota legislature came to an end Tuesday. While considerable complaint has been made in regard to the inactivity of the members of both houses, nevertheless a summing up of their work shows that many good laws have been enacted during the past season. The new code was signed by Speaker Clague Tuesday, and this work alone was enough to reflect credit on the legislative body, even had they done nothing else.

We frequently hear about the "slavery of farm life." True farming if properly attended to often means hard work, and on some days long hours; but if rightly and successfully managed it cannot be otherwise than a labor of love, requiring the use of brains, of thought and study. The right kind of farmer masters the soil with his head more than with his hands says the Grand Forks Press. The city merchant, the store clerk, the city laborer generally—and this includes physicians, teachers, professionals, and often millionaires—all have far greater reason to talk about the "slavery of the city life" than the modern farmer who has no boss, s not kept imprisoned for ten or twelve hours a day in a dingy room, and whose life is a most satisfactory combination of congenial work both of brain and hand, with perfection, independence and the purest of life's pleasures and blessings, has no reason to talk about the "slavery of farm life." Let us appreciate our opportunities, rather than indulge in such slurs on our occupation as that which is expressed in an absurd phrase "slavery of farm life."

Crookston comes in for a large state appropriation for an agricultural school at the hands of the legislature. This will be a great thing for the valley, and Senator Stephens and Representative Bennett deserve credit for their good work in behalf of this section.

The criticism of Auditor Ford's official work by the up-river sheets will not by any means carry weight with the people of the county who have taken time to look into the affairs of the auditor's office during Mr. Ford's career as auditor. There is absolutely no more capable official in the state, nor one who is more thoroughly versed in the laws governing his office, and we are absolutely fearless of contradiction when we say that in every official action down to the present moment, James E. Ford has governed himself in strict accordance with the law and to the best interests of his constituents, the Thief River mud batteries to the contrery notwithstanding.

The Nolan reciprocal demurrage bill, which has attracted wide spread attention during the present session of the legislature, met an untimely death in the senate Monday, after having been amended so as to be unrecognizable. Mr. Nolan's bill provided for reciprocity between the railroad and the shipper, but the powerful influence of the railroads was shown when it came up in the senate Monday. It seems to be the general opinion that several familiar figures of the Minnesota state senate will be retired permanently at the next election on account of their attitude in regard to this bill, and it would look to a man up a tree like a house-cleaning might help some.

Deputy Public Examiner Johnson, of St. Paul, told the writer in the presence of a number of others last fall, that there was not an auditor in the state of Minnesota whose office was conducted with more ability and care than the office of James E. Ford, of Red Lake county. Whose words would you rather take for it, reader, the public examiner's, whose official cloak puts him in close touch with every auditor in the state, or those of the up-river newspapers, who know absolutely nothing in regard to the office or the laws governing it, and who are prejudiced because of a large sized axe to grind? Is there any question in your minds in regard to who is the competent judge? We think not.

Judges Watts and Grindeland will hereafter receive $4200, per annum in place of $3500, the bill providing for an increase in the salaries of district judges in the state, except in the three largest counties, having passed both houses, says the Roseau Region. The raise is a fair one, and at its present figure was too low. The judiciary should be well paid, the office of district judge is a most important one, calls for special aptitude and careful work, and besides is an office wherein the salary should comport somewhat with the dignity that should always surround a "judge upon his throne". $4,200 a year is none too much for the judges of the fourteenth judicial district, they are among the hardest worked judges in the state.

Citizens of Red Lake county, didn't it ever occur to you, when reading all these charges of the up-river mud-slingers about "graft," etc., that the grand old state of Minnesota employs at large salaries, a competent set of officials to examine carefully every transaction made by the men in charge of the county's business, with a view of ascertaining whether or not the officials were doing their work in accordance with the law? Doesn't it look to you as there would have been an accounting asked long ago by these men who have carefully gone over the records several times each year, was there the slightest truth in the charges of the up-river aspirants for the earth? Acknowledging that there would have been trouble had everything not been in the best of order, isn't it logical that the proven inconsistency of the charges of the up-river bunch in this instance, clearly demonstrates that they are merely creating a big holler to try and better their own condition at the hands of the tax payer? Consider these things, reader, and ask yourself why you should help them.

STIRRED THINGS UP.

Anthony Quesnelle, Formerly of Lake Pleasant, In Trouble at Crookston.

Crookston Times: Bareheaded, in his bare feet and with blood spouting from a wound on his face, inflicted by a drunken son-in-law during a furious family quarrel, Ephraim Sainpere of 336 Spendley street last evening burst into the police station to secure the assistance of the department in quelling a family riot which started at his home through the inebriated condition of his son-in-law, Anthony Quesnelle of Red Lake Falls.

Chief Eck hurried immediately to the scene of the trouble and succeeded in capturing the home disturber and landing him in jail, where he remained during the night and this afternoon was arraigned for assault in the second degree upon a warrant sworn out by Mr. Sainpere.

Quesnelle, it seems, has but recently sold his farm near Red Lake Falls and is feeling his oats somewhat as the result of a fat bank account. Recently he arrived in this city with his wife to spend several days with Mrs. Quesnelle's parents before leaving for the far west, where they intend to locate. Last evening he came home in an infuriated condition as a result of a too liberal indulgence in the flowing bowl and proceeded to smash up the furniture with a chair. Mr. Sainpere, who is quite elderly, some 70 years old, stood the racket until the brute started to hit his mother-in-law, and then he interferred. Quesnelle turned upon him with the upraised chair and delivered as foul a blow as was ever struck, and the old gentleman bleeding from his injuries got out of the house and up town as fast as he possibly could to get the police. This morning Mr. Sainpere swore out a warrant and the matter is likely to go hard with his undutiful son-in-law.

BEEKEEPER NOT A FARMER

Iowa Judge Reaches This Conclusion After Long Deliberation in Bankruptcy Case.

Sioux City.—Judge H. T. Reed, of the federal court for northern Iowa, has issued an order which amounts to a decision that a keeper of bees is not a farmer and cannot escape the bankruptcy law. The decision is given on an order to declare Bert A. Aldrich, of Smithfield, a bankrupt.

Augustus Christie, of Rodnel, filed a petition to have Aldrich declared a bankrupt. He said that Aldrich owed him $500, and had committed an act of bankruptcy in transferring 160 colonies of bees to A. E. Aldrich on January 4, 1904.

In his answer Aldrich explained that the transfer of the bees was made to satisfy a note covered by a chattel mortgage. He said further by his attorneys that he was a farmer, and as such could not be declared an involuntary bankrupt.

In reply to this it was set forth that Aldrich was an apiarist and not a farmer. The attorneys declared that such an amount of bees as Aldrich kept would warrant the decision that he did not farm for a living, but was a keeper of bees.

When the case came up before C. L. Roy, referee in bankruptcy, much of the hearing was on bee culture. Aldrich said that he owned about 185 stands of bees.

Judge Reed deliberated on the question of bees and bee culture, and also the art of farming. In the end he decided that Aldrich could not hide behind the allegation that bee culture was farming. Aldrich was adjudged a bankrupt.

ALCOHOL FOR CONSUMPTION

Dr. Wiley Says It Has Been Used to Great Advantage in Cases of Tuberculosis.

Philadelphia.—Diet as a factor in the prevention and cure of consumption, the negro race problem, child labor question in southern mills and a number of other themes of equal interest formed the basis of some of the many papers read before the American Association for the Advancement of Science in session here recently.

Dr. W. H. Wiley, chief chemist of the department of agriculture, said that among the food material which has justly attained a high position as nutriment for persons troubled with tuberculosis is alcohol. Most commonly it is used in the form of beer, wine, whisky and brandy, he said. In many maladies, he said, whisky and brandy have apparently been used to great advantage and doubtless such is the case in tuberculosis.

Edward L. Blackshear, of the Prairie View state normal and industrial college, of Texas, discussed "Some Survivals of Primitive Racial Instincts in American Negroes." As a solution for the race problem he suggested simply education, experience and the scattering of negroes over the country.

Prof. A. J. McKelvey, assistant secretary of the national child labor committee, read a paper on "Child Labor in Southern Mills." He said there were more children under 16 years of age working in the factories of Pennsylvania than there were in all the southern states put together. It was his opinion that child labor was not a sectional but a national evil.

MISS JULIA MARLOWE.

In a recent letter to The Peruna Medicine Co., Miss Julia Marlowe of New York City, has the following to say of Peruna:

"I am glad to write my endorsement of the great remedy, Peruna, as a nerve tonic. I do so most heartily."—Julia Marlowe.

Nervousness is very common among women. This condition is due to anemic nerve centers. The nerve centers are the reservoirs of nervous vitality. These centers become bloodless for want of proper nutrition. This is especially true in the spring season. Every spring a host of invalids are produced as the direct result of weak nerves.

This could be easily obviated by the use of Peruna. Peruna strikes at the root of the difficulty by correcting the digestion. Digestion furnishes nutrition for the nerve centers. Properly digested food furnishes these reservoirs of life with vitality which leads to strong, steady nerves, and thus nourishes life.

Peruna is in great favor among women, especially those who have vocations that are trying to the nervous system. Peruna furnishes the lasting invigoration for the nerves that such people so much need. Thousands of testimonials from women in all parts of the United States are being received every year. Such unsolicited evidence surely proves that Peruna is without an equal as a nerve tonic and a vital invigorator.

Buy a bottle of Peruna today. If you do not receive all the benefits from Peruna that you expected, write to Dr. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio.

$10,000 forfeit if we cannot produce the original letter and signature of above testimonial which will demonstrates its full genuineness.

Climatic Cures.

The influence of climate conditions in the cure of consumption is very much overdrawn. The poor patient, and the rich patient, too, can do much better at home by proper attention to food digestion, and a regular use of German Syrup. Free expectoration in the morning is made certain by German Syrup, so is a good night's rest and the absence of that weakening cough and debilitating night sweat. Restless nights and the exhaustion due to coughing, the greatest danger and dread of the consumptive, can be prevented or stopped by taking German Syrup liberally and regularly. Should you be able to go to a warmer clime, you will find that of the thousands of consumptives there, the few who are benefited and regain strength are those who use German Syrup. Nine Nations

Now Use Liquozone. Won't You Try It—Free?

Millions of people, of nine different nations, are constant users of Liquozone. Some are using it to get well; some to keep well. Some to cure germ diseases; some as a tonic. No medicine was ever so widely employed. These users are everywhere; your neighbors and friends are among them. And half the people you meet—wherever you are—know some-one whom Liquozone has cured.

If you need help, please ask some of these users what Liquozone does. Don't blindly take medicine for what medicine cannot do. Drugs never kill germs. For your own sake, ask about Liquozone; then let us buy you a full-size bottle to try.

We Paid $100,000

For the American rights to Liquozone. We did this after testing the product for two years, through physicians and hospitals, after proving, in thousands of different cases, that Liquozone destroys the cause of any germ disease.

Liquozone has, for more than 20 years, been the constant subject of scientific and chemical research. It is not made by compounding drugs, nor with alcohol. Its virtues are derived solely from gas—largely oxygen gas—by a process requiring immense apparatus and 14 days' time. The result is a liquid that does what oxygen does. It is a nerve food and blood food—the most helpful thing in the world to you. Its effects are exhilarating, vitalizing, purifying. Yet it is a germicide so certain that we publish on every bottle an offer of $1,000 for a disease germ that it cannot kill. The reason is that germs are vegetables; and Liquozone—like an excess of oxygen—is deadly to vegetal matter.

There lies the great value of Liquozone. It is the only way known to kill germs in the body without killing the tissue, too. Any drug that kills germs is a poison, and it cannot be taken internally. Every physician knows that medicine is almost helpless in any germ disease.

Germ Diseases.

These are the known germ diseases. All that medicine can do for these troubles is to help Nature overcome the germs, and such results are indirect and uncertain. Liquozone attacks the germs, wherever they are. And when the germs which cause a disease are destroyed, the disease must end, and forever. That is inevitable.

Grand Forks Courier: Pat Sullivan river boss for the Grand Forks Lumber company, left Monday morning with a crew of river "rats" as they are popularly known along the river, enroute to the head waters of Red Lake river to start the spring drive down river. Mr. Sullivan says the first drive of the season will be a small one but that driving will be hard because of the extremely low stage of water now in the stream. During his twenty years of river work Pat says he has never seen the Red Lake river at this time of the year so low. The drive ordinarily should take about forty days to bring into this city but it is probable that the present low water will make the trip of much longer duration. Later on in the summer additional drives will be brought down from time to time in order to keep the mill supplied.

Crompe, in this city, with a decidedly severe attack of paralysis of the brain, with which she was taken Monday afternoon, and while for a day or two no hopes were entertained as to her recovery she is resting easier at present and unless complications set in will recover rapidly. Mr. and Mrs. Surprenault drove in from Terrebonne Sunday evening and spent the night in the city. Monday they did their shopping in the forenoon and were starting for home about three o'clock in the afternoon, having just reached the outskirts of the town when Mrs. Surprenault was suddenly stricken with the paralyetic stroke. Mr. Surprenault immediately drove back to Mr. Crompe's and medical aid was summoned. everything being done that was possible to relieve the sufferer, and at present she is resting easier with hopes for a speedy recovery. Millionaire's Poor Stomach.

The worn-out stomach of the over-fed millionaire is often paraded in the public prints as a horrible example of the evils attendant on the possession of great wealth. But millionaires are not the only ones who are afflicted with bad stomachs. The proportion is far greater among the toilers. Dyspepsia and indigestion are rampant among these people, and they suffer far worse tortures than the millionaire unless they avail themselves of a standard medicine like Green's August Flower, which has been a favorite household remedy for all stomach troubles for over thirty-five years. August Flower rouses the torpid liver, thus creating appetite and insuring perfect digestion. It tones and vitalizes the entire system and makes life worth living, no matter what your station. ALL NEGOTIATIONS OFF.

Efforts to Settle Chicago Strike Apparently Futile.

Chicago, April 15.—Infuriated teamsters attacked a caravan of Montgomery Ward & Co. wagons near the Northwestern freighthouse at Kinzie and West Water streets, dragging John Cox, a nonunion driver, from his wagon. The attack was made so quickly that the police were taken by surprise and it was only after a desperate fight that Cox was rescued.

A peace conference at the office of Mayor Dunne was apparently futile. When the strike leaders emerged after a brief session President Cornelius P. Shea of the Teamsters' union said:

"Negotiations are all off as far as I am concerned. We will not come back again unless the mayor sends for us."

Mayor Dunne, while admitting the failure of the conference, gave as his opinion that the trouble could yet be settled with justice to both sides. "I shall not admit that a settlement is impossible until I have exhausted every possible resource—and myself," said the mayor.

Denver, Colo., April 17.—A special to the News from Newcastle says that a fierce blizzard raged at Camp Roosevelt, twenty-five miles south of there, Sunday. So violent was the storm that no one ventured out of doors. The greater part of the day was spent by the president and party around the campfires telling hunting stories.

The News also has a dispatch saying that the mail carrier who covers the territory adjacent to Huntsman hills, reached Newcastle during the day and verified the report that the president killed a large bear with the first shot he fired Saturday afternoon. It required several hours' chase to bring the animal to bay.

The clothing on the body was torn to shreds, showing that the victim had fallen along the jagged cliff from the top of the bluff, where, it is believed, he had swallowed a quantity of laudanum.

Wakeful?

Sleeplessness Is a Sign of Nerve Trouble and Should Be Looked To.

There are three different manifestations of sleeplessness.

First, hardly to sleep a wink all night, second, to lie awake a long time before falling asleep; third, to fall asleep soon, waking up after several hours and then find it hard to sleep again.

They mean that somewhere in the nerve fibres, somewhere in the brain cells, somewhere in the blood vessels that carry blood to the brain, something is radically wrong, and must be righted, or the end may be worse than death.

To right it, take Dr. Miles' Nervine.

Some other symptoms of nerve trouble are: Dizziness, Headache, Backache, Worry, Fretfulness, Irritability, Melancholy, Lack of Ambition.

They indicate diseases which may lead to Epilepsy, Fits, St. Vitus' Dance, Nervous Prostration, Paralysis, Insanity.

Nothing will give such quick and lasting relief as Dr. Miles' Nervine.

"My husband had been sick for weeks, could not sit up to have his bed made. With all the medical help we could get he continued to grow worse. He could neither sleep or eat. Our baby girl was sent away, and all callers barred, because he could not stand a bit of talking. I read of a case of nervous prostration cured by Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. We began giving it to him, and in a few days he was able to be dressed. From that time he steadily improved. Nervine saved his life."—MRS. A. G. HASKIN, Freeville, N. Y.

TOWN TO RUN PAPER

WEBSTER CITY, IOWA, TO PUBLISH A DAILY.

Fight Over Gas Franchise the Cause of the New Departure in Municipal Ownership—Alderman to Edit Sheet.

Webster City's (Ia.) penchant for municipal ownership is to take a new form—that of a city-owned daily newspaper. This departure in municipal enterprise probably has not a counterpart in the United States. The paper is to be known as the Daily Graphic-Herald, and will be issned from the present office of the Weekly Graphic-Herald, the only democratic peper in Hamilton county.

Webster City hegan her career as a municipal ownership city many years ago. She first acquired possession of her waterworks. Next came the electric light and power plant. Then came the city heating plant, and now this latest venture. With the single exception of her heeting plant, all the municipal ventures of the city have proved to be paying investments, and have materially lowered taxes. The aim, however, always has heen to furnish the product of a plant to the consumer as near cost as could be done, and leave a fair reserve margin.

The venture of the city into the field of journalism has heen on the hottest kind of a red-hot gas campaign. M. E. Springer, representing the Practical Gas and Construction company, of Chicago, is asking that the people vote him a franchise to erect and maintain a gas plant in the city. Mr. Springer last year asked the same thing. He was beaten because a company of local capitaliste handed together and offered the city $4,000 and a certain per cent. of the gross receipts of the plant for the franchise. The latter company received the franchise, although at the same time the citizens also expressed themselves as in favor of a municipal gas plant to compete with the private corporation. Mayor F. A. Edwards was a member of the private company, and the attorney general of the state declared the franchise to be illegal for the reason that no contract or franchise can be granted a city official under the Iowa statutes.

This decision having knocked out the local private company, Mr. Springer has returned to the city again to ask the citizens to vote him a franchise. There are now two dailies there, hut neither is strenuous enough in its promulgation of the municipal ownership idea, so the council proposes to launch a strictly municipal ownership daily. Alderman J. D. Riste, of the First ward, the "father of the council," is slated to be the editor-in-chief, and will have several assistant editors in the person of other councilmen.

The decision of the council to launch a daily ceme as a general surprise, as no one there dreamed thet the city would enter the journalistic field. The memhers of the council, however, evidently believe that if they can run electric light and power works, heating plants and water plants, they can likewise run a daily newspaper.

BOY PLEADS OPHTHALMIA.

Ninetesn-Year-Old Boy Seeks Divorce from His Bride—Over Three Times His Age.

Fred H. Brenner, of Cleveland, who was 19 when he married Marguerite Brenner, 62, has filed an amended divorce petition. In her answer and cross petition Mrs. Brenner alleged that her hoy hushand had deserted her, taking with him all her money.

In his latest pleading Brenner seys: "During the years of his infancy he was not accorded the privilege of a college of matrimony, and unfortunately his tutelage in that branch of speculation under the parental roof was sadly neglected. And when defendant crossed his peth he was an infant under the ege of 21 years and susceptible to the foilles of inexperienced youth, and when at said time she poured into his ears the impassioned protestations of love and affection, conned from the purchasable stereotyped stories of love that guarantee complete directions for success in the hymeneal art, he was stricken with opthelmia and Cupid's arrow hed penetrated the seat of his affections."

After two weeks his eyes were opened and he left.

Naval Inspectors Declare Speed of Torpedo Boats Will Be Sacrificed for Heavier Construction.

The result of the recent thorough examination of the naval torpedo-boats is unsatisfactory, only one of the little craft having a record of escaping breakdowns.

The faulte developed pertain mostly to the machinery, and, while not serious, collectively they are understood to have influenced the naval inspection board to recommend a heavier inspection of machinery, even at the cost of a loss of speed.

The experts have decided that it is better to have a 25-knot boat which can be depended upon to make that speed at all times and in all weather than a 30-knot boat liable to breakdowns at any time, and so weak that she cannot keep the sea in bad weather.

Called Down.

Some time ago in an old-fashioned negro revival which was held on the outskirts of the city of Atlanta the colored divine who was in charge of the meeting called upon the brethren for voluntary prayers. One old colored brother who felt moved by the spirit began to wax exceedingly warm in calling down the favor of heaven upon the assemblage, when another brother in the audience, whose curiosity got the better of his reverence, cried out in loud tones which completely drowned the prayer:

"Who dat prayin' ober dar?"

"Dat's Brudder Mose," some one responded.

"Hold on, Brudder Mose," shouted the interrupter. "You'se sed enuff. Let Brudder Jones pray. He's better 'queinted wid de Lord dan you is!"—Philadelphia Press.

Women on the Golf Links.

Golf is a grand old game, of course, hnt its widespread popularity in this conntry, its marvelous growth here in the last few years, is largely dne to the interest that is taken in it by young women. If it were not for their presence in goodly numhers on the links no such puhlic favor as golf has met with would have been recorded. It is a repetition of the old story of the opera season; the presence of pretty women in the boxes makes us all pretend to love music and crowds the Metropolitan. Tha young American girl who plays golf not only fills in the picture prettily, hut plays a rattling good game—as is evidenced in the scores made in the women's metropolitan championship games on the Apawamis grounds, which were concluded in fine the other day.—N. Egg Experiments.

Agricultural experiment stations in several states have been trying to discover whether the flavor and color of eggs can be affected hy the food given to the hens. Among the foods used were smoked herrings, oil of celery, oil of sassafras and onions. Nothing hut the onions affected the taste of the eggs. White corn, however, produces eggs with light yolks, whereas yellow corn makes tha yolks dark. The experimenters have decided thet the color of the yolk depends on the coloring matter in the food, and has nothing to do with tha richness of the eggs.

A LITTLE DECEPTION

IT WAS only after the death of her mother that Hermance Desriguy thought it well to consider in earnest tha possibility of marriage and vowed not to die a spinster. She was now 29, possessed in her own right of a modest competence, and had a heart full of warm and generous impulses, but she was deformed—in short, a humphack.

Seated alone in her quiet home at Chatillon with pleasant surroundings about her, she considered her lonely future with a shudder. But where to seek for a husband? Whom might she address?

She knew she did not possess the physical attractions of a young and more perfect beauty; she must confess that one shoulder was higher than the other, and from some words she overheard, she knew herself considered a little angular. But what of this in so loyal a heart?

One evening in her daily paper she found this advertisement, which immediately engrossed her attention.

The Matrimonial Institute of France, founded hy Madame de Saint Elme. This institnte has for its ohject the promotion of honorable marrieges, between members of families best fitted hoth in a physiological and social point of view.

Dowries from 2,000 to 2000,000 fraces.

Office hours, one to five p. m. Correspondence solicited.

And the address followed.

Hermance considered this matter that day and again the following day. Finally she said to herself:

"I will write to that woman."

And she wrote at once.

By return post she received a magnificently printed prospectus, beautifully lithographed on rose colored paper, which in a great many words explained, magnified and praised "the moral purpose of the Matrimonial Institute of France."

In conclusion Mme. de St. Elme invited her correspondent to send her the modest sum of two dollars as subscription to the Nuptial Veil, in which would ba found a large list of candidates for matrimony, all guaranteed of good social rank, regularly registered and submitted to the choice of readers of both sexes. To be thus registered or to make choice of any name in these lists the further sum of five dollars must be remitted in advance.

Hermance sent, in conformity with tha ahova conditions, tha double fee, adding also, as advised in the prospectus, one of her photographs, a little portrait taken the year before, in which there appeared her fine head and neck, full of expression and grace, but showing her only as far as the shoulders.

As sha glanced at the long list of possible husbands named in the Nuptial Veil she was embarrassed, thera were so many. Marking out 20, these she reduced to 15, and then to 10, and 8. She paused, and then tired of the attempt, she finished hy placing her pencil whera it would fall, which happened to be No. 12,818, reading thus:

Employment, public; salary 3,500 fracs, with advancement assured; aged 38 years, good health; simple tastes; desires to marry young lady of age and fortune, excellent habits and character.

"Simple tastes," of course it was impossible to tell what these words might mean, hut trusting to the maternal character of the lady at the head of the institute, and forwarding a new check for the additional $10 required, she received a photograph of No. 12,818, with a note giving the name, residence, etc., of the candidate.

His name was Adrien Bastide, and he was a public officer in the little town of Kernoveu, in Brittany. In the picture, which represented him at full length, he appeared a man full of good humor and good will, with a full, open countenance, and a long heard, flowing down his breast. But how tall he was! You might have taken him for a drum major. What a contrast to poor little humphack Mermance!

"Ah, hut he is a very good man for me," whispered she to herself.

At tha same time that the photograph was sent to Hermance, Mme. de Saint Elme, always attentive to the interests of her cliente, advised No. 12,818 of the distinction which had hefallen him, and for a consideration, forwarded the note and portrait of Mlle. Desriguy, who straightway received the following letter:

Mademoiselle: While not having the honor of being personally known to you, yet I cannot resist the deep emotion which only one look at your photograph has aroused in me, and to tell you hy what all powerful, almost providential, sympathy I am turned to you.

Yes, it seems as if I hear a voice from heaven guiding and leading me to you. It is impossihle to look upon a countenance so pure, so open, so frank, on eyes so full of spirit and impossihla to deceit, and not to know you have a generous, loving heart.

And the writer of tha letters prayed for the opening of a correspondence between them preparatory, if mutually agreeable, to a meeting at some future time.

An exchange of letters now ensued. Each day becoming more and more intimate, they confided to one another the stories of their youth, their hopes for the futura and how and why they had had recourse to Mme. de Saint Elme.

The interview between tha two could no longer be delayed. Adrien Bastide announced his intention to visit Chatillon in a fortnight, and the affair was readily and easily arranged.

Mlle. Desriguy would advise with some old friends of the family who would be glad to assist her. There would be nothing risked in acquainting them how matters were a few days in advance of the coming of her fiance. Her fiance! Ah, how sweet that word was to pronounce; how deliciously it made her heart throb.

Finally the great day came and Hermance was notified that M. Bastide would present himself at her house at two o'clock.

Everything in and around the house had been put in perfect order, and all was ready. Hermance kept repeating to her servant:

"I hear some one coming, Ionette."

"Mademoiselle has said that very often."

"Well, don't go to sleep in the porch, and be sure to bring him in—that person—to the parlor."

"Surely, mademoiselle. Don't you fear. I will hide myself in the corridor and run at the first sound of the bell."

The bell rang. The visitor, the tall drum major with the long beard, appeared, but limping with one foot, and walking with a cane.

"Mademoiselle Desriguy?" said he.

"It is I, Monsieur Bastide," tremblingly answered the little humpback, dropping the book in which she seemed to have been reading.

"You! But! Mademoiselle Hermance Desriguy who wrote to me?"

"Yes."

And both stood thunderstruck, facing each other, stupidly gazing without a word.

"But, mademoiselle, you have never—you ought to have told me." And Hermance replied, her cheeks now grown scarlet:

"Yes I know, I ought to perhaps, but you, you also, monsieur. I was born so—me—no—oh, no. Adieu, monsieur."

And our poor little heroine, wholly confused, her eyes filled with tears, fled away, leaving the room to her visitor, her exfiance.

The great giant stood still some minutes. What was there to do? Finally he opened a door into tha hall and shuffled back to his hotel. There he seated himself on one of the soft banks of grass, and with eyes mechanically fixed upon the windings of the valley, tried to meditate over the occurrences of the afternoon, and gave himself up to the stranga thoughts to which they gava rise.

Humpbacked! She was a humpback, and she had said nothing about it. This was the game, a shallow trick, and that maternal directress of the Matrimonial Institute of France, whose only object was to enable her children to make a hetter acquaintance and to shield them in marriage—charlatan, cheat.

But how about himself? What had he said about his infirmity?

He had been very careful in not speaking of that. He he tried to trick her? No, truly, that was not his object. He had not wished to hurry.

And she—oh, without douht, it was her timidity; perhaps in her case also she felt ashamed. He had no reason to be proud.

Adrien Bastide had heen tenderly brought up hy a mother who idolized him. Jealous of every woman who approached him, yet she had had an intention certainly of seeing him married, and she truly meant not to disappoint him. But years passed on and she discovered no one worthy of him, and finally she died without placing her hand upon the fina pearl sought for.

Adrien at the age of 22, on account of a fall from a horse, had lost the free use of his right leg. After his mother's death he said to himself that now was the time to replace her. But how?

Providentially, as he then thought, he saw the advertisement of the marriaga institute and paying his subscription and enrollment fee he received a photograph and communication in which Hermance, No. 19724, was described:

Orphan, 29 years, musician, dowry 40,000 francs, living in a neat cottage with garden and running stream of water, would espouse man of honor, in preference official.

This exactly suited him; perhaps aven the 40,000 francs no less than tha garden and stream full of fish attracted him.

Alas, some pointe had heen omitted in the advertisement in the Nuptial Veil and also in the letters from Mme. de St. Elme—yet how full of sweetness and spirituality her letters had heen.

Well, he was not coming 200 miles for nothing; he would go and explain himself at least.

Hermance during this time was reflecting on the situation. It was not so easy to find a husband at 29, she well knew.

He was a cripple, yet, but she was—well a little peaked.

"Nothing," she thought, "will make M. Bastide return to the house. There are three trains to Paris, two in the morning and one in the afternoon at 4:30.

"He will do nothing until train time. I might at least try to meet him, as it were by accident, at the station."

So with hat and mantle she quickly set out. But two steps from her house she ran into the good giant.

"Monsieur Adrien, must you leave town at once?" she asked.

And she had a look so contrite, and eyes so ready to fill with tears that the giant bent over her and took her hand respectfully.

"I ask your pardon," he said, "for all I did. You were much excited; so was I. But I do not wish to return without seeing you again. Permit me to enter with you. Now we know each other, and we can speak more quietly."

There were two happy persons in that little house and they are now happy, those two who had not told the truth.—From the French in N. Y. Sun.

Character and Laws.

How ridiculous it would seem, writes Annie Payson Call, in Leslie's Monthly Magazine, if a man tried to make water run up hill without providing that it should do so by reaching its own level, and then got indignant because he did not succeed, and wondered if there was not some "cure" by means of which his object might be accomplished. And yet it is no more strange for a man to disobey habitually the laws of character and then to suffer for his disobedience, and wonder why he suffers.

Louis Rondeanne and John Plehe, two prominent business men from Blackduck, arrived in the city last evening and spent the day here, interviewing our people in behalf of the firemen's tournament to be held at their pretty little city the third week in June. The principal object of Mayor Rondemme's visit to the towns in this part of the valley was to secure a band to handle the music end of the tournament, and while here the boys got together and gave him an idea as to what they were able to do. At the conclusion of the practice, Mr. Rondemme expressed himself as highly pleased with the work of the organization, and stated that while he had not heard the other bands bidding for the job, he was perfectly satisfied to go no further, and Thursday arrangements were completed whereby the Red Lake Falls twenty-five piece band is to furnish the music at the tournament. This action on the part of Mr. Rondemme was highly appreciated by the boys, and speaks glowingly for the ability of the organization. He is one of the ablest cornetists and band men in the Northwest, and for twenty years followed the band business as a means of livelihood, which makes his opinion a valued one, and pleased the people here immensely. It is likely that a large number of the citizens will follow the band and running team to the Blackduck show, and it is a foregone conclusion that they will be royally entertained when they get there.

Notice To Clean Up.

Notice is hereby given that all manure, refuse and everything in that nature must be removed from the yards and alleys of the property owners at once, and such alleys and yards kept free and clean. All manure, etc., can be hauled to the rear of L. A. Kaufer's lot in the western part of town, but all dead animals must be buried in the burying spot near the old saw mill. Steps will be taken to strictly enforce sanitary conditions this year, and the public is warned against leaving the dirt untouched—By order of the Board of Health, J. C. Wilkinson, health officer.

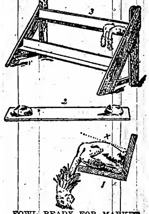
POULTRY AND BEES

FOWLS FOR MARKET.

The Plan Which Is Most in Favor with Those Who Ship Hundreds.

While the main consideration to the consumer is that the fowl should be reasonably plump and properly picked, the large city merchants demand certain things in the way of packing which the poultry raiser must carry out if he would be successful in such markets. One of the things is that the fowls be "shaped" before they are packed, and while this process makes a form that is not particularly pleasing, it is, perhaps, better than the misshapen fowls which would result if they were placed in boxes or barrels without any sign of packing. To make a shaper, first build a frame and then in this frame construct two troughs, each ten feet long. These troughs are constructed by nailing together two boards, seven-eighths of an inch thick and six inches wide, at right angles.



FOWL READY FOR MARKET.

After plucking the fowls, says the Indianapolis News, lay the carcasses in the trough with the heads hanging down, the legs alongside the breast and the breast downward. By gentle pressure force the carcass down into the angle of the trough. Cover each carcass with oiled paper; then have an inch board six inches wide to lay on the carcasses and weight this board down with a brick or heavy stone at either end. As the carcass of the bird is slipped under the board, move the lower brick or stone to obtain the weight. The carcasses should be kept in this position for six or seven hours, and they will then be shaped and ready for packing in crates. The illustration shows the construction of this shaper in detail, and, as will be seen, any handy man can construct it readily.

Keeping Bees Through the Winter.

One summer had been a poor one for making honey and we found our bees didn't have enough honey to keep them over. So we took small sauce dishes, half filled them with granulated sugar syrup and whenever a day came warm enough for the bees to fly out, one of these dishes was placed on the ground directly in front of each hive. The winter was a severe one. A few heavy snows would have smothered them if we had not been watchful and carefully cleared away the snow early in the morning after a night's storm, and opened a breathing space at the entrance. We also covered the hives with some old quilts and pieces of carpet as a protection from the winds.—Orange Judd Farmer.

Feeding Bees in Winter.

The proper time to feed for winter is before winter has set in. If, however, from some unavoidable cause you have bees in a starving condition, feed with no regard to the temperature. Frames filled with honey are the thing to give colonies lacking in stores at a time when the snow is flying. It is not a bad plan to warm these up somewhat before giving them to the bees. If frames of honey cannot be given, candy made from pure, white sugar will answer first-rate, says Farm and Home. Break this up in chunks and lay on top of the frames. During warm days, sugar sirup may be fed, and is much more easily prepared. Make this half sugar and half water.

Separate the Sexes.

It is the height of foolishness to allow the male birds to run with the hens during the fall and winter months unless eggs are wanted for hatching. It should be remembered that an unfertilized egg is dead matter, while a fertilized one contains a life-germ that is ready to take on animal existence as soon as the proper conditions are furnished. Even at a low temperature of 60 degrees a fertilized egg will begin to decay long before an unfertilized one would show the least change. Keep the males and females separate.—Commercial Poultry.

Raspberry for Honey.

If there is any one plant that will pay to raise for honey alone, it is raspberry, especially the red kind. The quantity of honey yielded by it is great, and for quality it is at least equal to any ever tasted. It stands in a rank all by itself. But when we add to these desirable characteristics the great abundance of refreshing fruit it produces, and on almost any soil, we may say it certainly deserves all the attention it gets. This seems to be the opinion on the other side of the ocean, too.—Gleanings in Bee Culture.

DRUGS LIKELY TO ADVANCE

Many Plants That Once Grew Wild Are Disappearing with March of Civilization.

Dealers in American drugs are much alarmed at the scarcity and high price of most of the vegetable drugs indigenous to this country which have developed during the present year. Many of the drugs in chief demand have advanced from 100 to 300 per cent. in price and the suply of all is said to be small. Some of the drugs most affected by these conditions are golden seal seenga root ginseng wild cherry bark, white pine bark, elder flowers, sarsaparilla root, sassafras and at least a dozen others of less importance. Golden seal in particular has advanced since January from 74 cents to $1.50 and senega root from 82½ cents to $1.15. In 1899 senega root was selling at 24 cents. White pine bark has gone up in two years from 2½ to 4½ cents. The plants from which these drugs are gathered grow wild and are said to be gradually disappearing with the march of civilization and the settlement of the country. No steps have been taken to safeguard the supply and the plants are gradually being exterminated. It is feared that this country will soon be in the same position as Germany and other countries of Europe as producers of vegetable drugs. Formerly Germany was a great producer of herbs and barks, but now these drugs are gathered chiefly in the wilds of Hungary. Drug dealers say the result will be a heavy advance in the prices of many of the commoner and more popular medicines.

TO MEET SATURDAY

Shareholders of the Red Lake Falls Creamery Association Asked to Convene at City Hall.

Secretary John Grady, of the Red Lake Falls Creamery association, has this week sent out notices to the stockholders of the association, calling a meeting at the city hall for 8 o'clock Saturday evening of this week, and it is desired by those interested in the work of the creamery that all the members that can possibly do so, will attend. It is the intention of the officers to start the operation of the creamery Monday next, and H. A. Blaisdell, a young man from Janesville, will have active charge of the plant. The farmers in this vicinity have pledged their hearty support to the plant this year, and with the favorable season promised the creamery will undoubtedly have a successful run.

President Demarais and Secretary Grady are putting in some hard licks for the association these days, and under their guidance the work cannot help but produce results.

The Gazette Was Misinformed.

The Gazette, in chronicaling the suicide of N. Shumoa, the night watchman, at St. Hilaire, stated that his family was in a bad way financially and would have to call on the county for aid. This was an error, as we since learned that there are boys in the family old enough to provide for the mother in a substantial manner, and we hasten to make the correction.

NEXT MEETING HERE

Adams Presbytery Will Hold Semi-Annual Convention In This City During October of This Year.

The semi-annual meeting of the Adams Presbytery will be held at this city during the mouth of October of the present year.

This was decided on at the meeting of the Presbytery held at Warren last week, and which was attended by a large number of divines of this section.

These meetings generally last a couple of days, and excellent programs of speaking, music, etc., are always arranged, so that the people here can look forward with pleasure to the coming meeting in this city.

The Adams Presbytery comprise all of the Presbyterian congregation in the northwest part of the state, and a large crowd of brainy men will assemble here in October, exchange ideas and attend to other matters looking to the advancement of their cause.

The people here should plan early on entertaining her distinguished visitors in royal style.

DADS WILL MEET.

County Board To Hold Special Session Next Week.

The honorable Board of County Commissioners will meet at Auditor Ford's office Monday, to spend several days grinding out business for the county.

Nothing of special importance is scheduled for this session but considerable business of interest to the county as a whole will be taken up and disposed of.

The meeting will likely last several days.

ASSESSORS IN SESSION

Listers of Red Lake County Property Get Together For Mutual Benefit at the Auditor's Office Today.

The regular annual meeting of the assessors of Red Lake county occured at Auditor Ford's office in this city today, in accordance with the statutes made and provided, and as a result the force at the auditor's office have been busy this week getting the books and blanks wrapped up and in shape to be handled by the assessors in their annual rounds of checking up the property of each indivdual.

There are twenty-nine assessors in the county, and at the meeting today they discussed the valuation basis, schedules, etc., by which they will be governed in their work this summer.

Except in the newly organized townships and village the assessors will list nothing but personal property this year, which will make their labors comparatively short. In the new towns the real estate will also be listed.

The work of assessment starts next Monday, and the reports must be turned in to the auditor before the first of July. After the reports are in an abstract is made of the work, when the county board of equalization goes after it in July and raises or lowers the figures according to their judgment. In September the state board of equalization meets to consider the matter of equalization throughout the state, so that the fate of the tax-payer bangs in the balance for several months to come.

SCHOOL DAYS SHORT

Class of Bright Young Men and Ladies Will Graduate From Red Lake Falls High School In June.

Within a few short weeks, a class of ten young men and women of Red Lake Falls, will finish their school labors, to seek further knowledge at the greater educational institutions or to take up their regular place in the ranks of humanity struggling for place and power.

The class this year is composed of young people from Red Lake Falls' best families, and while in the past the Red Lake Falls high school has turned out some excellent classes of graduates, the class of '05 will without doubt acquit themselves in a manner that will reflect still greater credit upon the institution of which every citizen should be proud.

The members of the class are as follows: Blanch Berthiaume, Iza Tibbetts, Rose Suttor, Lillian Nauman, Clara Marchaud, Margaret Kaus, Mayme Linnihan, Drew Marshall, Michael Connoughty and Ralph Healy. The commencement exercises will be held on Wednesday, June 7, in all probability, and the class members are already working on their program for that event. The program will comprise several orations, essays, etc., and will undoubtedly be entertaining to the public.

The honors of the class will be handled by Miss Blanche Berthiaume, salutatorion and Ralph L. Healy, valedictorian. Iza Tibbetts is class prophet; Rose Sutor, historian; Lillian Nauman, poet; Clara Marchand will write the class will; the Misses Kaus and Linnihan and Messrs. Marshall and Connaughty will be the orators. The class colors are green and red, their motto, "More Beyond."

Several events of note are being arranged for the final school week, and from now until that time the various classes of the school will be kept busy attending to their respective work in connection with the commencement exercises and class week events.

The Gazette will publish the programs and complete details of these doings as soon as they are announced.

BIGAMIST IS LANDED.

Thief River Muchly Married Man In the Law's Net.

Martin P. Gulbrandson, for whom a warrant was sworn out some six weeks ago at Thief River Falls on the charge of bigamy, was arrested Tuesday afternoon at St. Vincent by Deputy Sheriff Jarman. It is charged that Gulbrandson married Oleano Jacobson at Grand Forks, N. D., in 1895, and after living with her for four years, he deserted her and went to Thief River Falls, where he shortly afterwards, married Caroline Iverson, with whom he has since resided. His first wife, on a visit to Thief River lately, recognized him, and when she discovered he had been married again, had a warrant issued, but Gulbrandson, suspecting trouble, left the city before he could be apprehended. Sheriff Linnihan and Deputy Jarman have kept close watch for the fellow, and his capture the first of the week was the result of some smooth detective work on their part.

It Is Well To Remember.

That the payment of at least half of your real estate taxes must be made before June 1, in order to avoid the ten per cent penalty that is attached on that day. If you don't care to pay all your real estate taxes this spring, by paying half before June 1, you are given until October 31 to pay the remainder, without any penalty attaching. County Treasurer Hanson urges that the people call in early in the month to make their payments, as at the close of the month the rush is so great that it is hard to accommodate all.

NO LINE TO ROSEAU

Rosean Times States Positively That President Hill Has Refused To Build Extension From Greenbush.

Notwithstanding newspaper reports and the positive assurances of Great Northern officials, the road will not be extended from Greenbush to Roseau says the Roseau Times. A prominent man identified with business interests in Roseau and a stockholder in the Northern Securities Co., was told by Col. Wilkinson that the promised road will not be built. "That is all we want to know," said the gentleman "we will look elsewhere." He advised Col. Wilkinson that it would be better for the Great Northern to build of its own motion rather than be forced to do so, as by the former course the good will of the people would be retained.

There is no use of longer waiting, Mr. Hill has for the past ten years proclaimed publicly and in private that he would build no more roads in Minnesota. It is a matter of sentiment and not a matter of business with Mr. Hill and the farmers of Roseau county will have to leave Mr. Hill with his sentiment and no longer "hug the delusive phantom of hope" but act as the exigency demands. The writer knows that Col Wilkinson, who is in charge of this matter, acted in good faith but when Mr. Hill says "no" the stuff is off. Col. Wilkinson assured us the road would be extended to Roseau, he meant it. He wants the credit of developing the country but it appears that his hands are tied. Mr. Hill has his grievances, because of the continual war waged against him by the law making powers. We do not blame him. It is sufficient for the business men and farmers of Roseau to know that his railroad interests stop at Greenbush so far as Rosean county is concerned.

Tax Sale May 8.

The annual tax sale will occur May 8, at which time Auditor Ford will dispose of considerable property on which taxes have been allowed to become delinquent and judgment entered against. These annual sales usually attract considerable attention, from the fact that a good many desirable pieces of land are offered each year.

HEARING PUT OVER

At Request of Thief River Counsel Judge Watts Extends Injunction Hearing To May 3.

The hearing of the temporary injunction issued by Judge Watts, restraining Auditor Ford from filing the county seat removal petition presented by Thief River Falls, was set for trial at Crookston last Saturday morning. The counsel for Thief River Falls appeared at the appointed hour and asked that a continuation of several days be granted in order that his side of the case could prepare sufficient answer to the complaint. The attorneys for Red Lake Falls consented, and Judge Watts set Wednesday, May 3, as the day for the hearing.

The fact that Thief River supporters asked for a continuance clearly demonstrates that they are not so positive that the claims of irregularities in their petition are all talk, and they have been pulling the strings in all directions in order to avoid a possibility of a permanent injunction being granted.

Their newspapers and supporters put up a great holler about how easily they could prove wherein they were right if given an opportunity, but the opportunity came and they were anxious for a postponment.

Comment is unnecessary. The people of the county should be dead next to the grafters up stream by this time and judge them accordingly in this instance.

HOLDS FIRST MEETING

Officers and Members of Red River Valley Immigration Society Get Together At Crookston.

The executive committee of the Red River Valley Immigration association met at the City Hall at Crookston, Minnesota at the call of the chairman on Tuesday evening, April 18, at 8 o'clock.

On motion of J. W. Wheeler, duly seconded, Isreal Sjoberg was elected chairman and P. H. Konzen secretary.

The main question for consideration was stated to be the best plan or method for the advertisement of the agricultural and industrial resources of the counties embraced in the organization, the best method for raising funds for such advertisement and the plans for the distribution of such matter as may be decided upon.

Max Bass, Immigration agent for the Great Northern railroad was present and at the request of the committee outlined the different methods employed in this class of advertising, and especially of the pamphlet system which he stated was in his opinion the cheapest and most economical from every point of view.

J. F. Morrow, of St. Paul, the general advertising agent of the Great Northern railway company was then called upon and made a detailed address in which he fully concurred with Mr. Bass in his statement of the plan referred to. Both the speakers then promised on the part of the Great Northern railway company to attend to the distribution of any advertising matter decided upon by the committee free of charge.

Mr. Sjoberg then stated that in a conversation with the state auditor a few days ago he promised such aid as he could give in the distribution of any advertising matter according to a law passed at this session of the legislature.

The pamphlet plan was then adopted and it was decided to issue 150000 copies of a suitable pamphlet and that the necessary funds be raised by subscription as may be deemed hat by the several counties.

The plan of making exhibits of the products of the Red River Valley at the State Fair of this and adjacent states was taken up and in such efforts it was assured of the hearty co-operation of the Great Northern and all other railroads in the matter of free transportation. Wheeler, Morrow, Kelsy, Konzon and others then were called upon and addressed the meeting briefly upon the various phases of the question before it.

Upon motion of Wheeler, seconded by Konzon, the amount of money to be raised was fixed at $3450 to be aportioned among the several counties as follows; Polk, $750; Marshall, $600; Norman, $500; Kitson, $500; Roseau, $500 and Red Lake $600.

Upon motion meeting adjourned subject to the cill of Chairman Sjoberg.

OUTDOOR CONCERTS.

Band Arranges To Give Two Each Month.

Arrangements have been made whereby the local band organization will appear in open air concert every alternate Friday evening during the summer months, commencing Friday evening of next week if the weather remains favorable. These concerts will be on the order of the ones last year, and will be held at different points on the street during the warm months. The fact of the dates of the entertainments being fixed will give the public an opportunity to prepare in advance to turn out, and will no doubt be appreciated by the music lovers. The band has lately received a shipment of the latest popular music, comprising the best marches, songs and comic opera selections, and the people of Red Lake Falls are assured of hearing the latest music during the next few months.

You've All Heard About Paul's Reputation As a Story Teller. Heres His Latest Yarn.

Once there was a temperance woman of the Mrs. C. Nation order who followed an intoxicated man into a saloon, and addressing the "disburser of conviviality," she said:

"You ought to be ashamed of yourself, instead of selling whiskey you ought to encourage men to drink water."

"I do," said the troubled mixer, "I put more water in my whiskey than any other man in town."

When you find a man doing more than his share of human work there is a reason behind it all—a why and wherefore which, if known, would possibly dissipate his good intent.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

THE HOME MERCHANT.

Interesting Article In Regard To Catalogue Houses.

The Harvard Independent published the following article recently. It is so pertinent and straight to the point that we reproduce it entire:

Local newspaper and home merchants have much to say about effects of trade caused by big department stores. People are advised not to patronize the catalogue houses.

There is no doubt those hustling mail order merchants do get a big share of trade tributary to our home dealers. This cannot be denied; but how can it be helped so long as the merchants will not make an effort to retain trade that should naturally come to them? The catalogue houses can fill the city papers with advertisements and reach out in every direction and obtain trade. We have received a score of propositions from Chicago houses to advertise their business. Some have offered to pay us our advertising rates in cash and have even sent us electrotyped advertisements nicely gotten up so we would be saved all expense of composition. They were too sure we would be glad to accept their profitable terms. We have declined all such advertisements in the past and have always advised the Herald readers to patronize home merchants. But the people keep on buying from the department stores because every mail brings the city papers filled with advertisements and attractive offers from mail order houses while many of our home dealers do little or no advertising, and some never even have their names in the local papers. So we can not blame the neighboring farmers who are misled by the "Cheap John" catalogues, because the local merchants' advertisement do not appear in the local papers.

The local merchant who will take up those catalogue offers and advertise to duplicate prices, freight added will make money and hold trade.

If local business men would advertise as extensive as every enterprising merchant does it would not only attract trade but it would boom the city more effectually than resting passively on their dignified posteriors and expecting the trade to come to them.

An observant business man seeking the names of commercial houses in this city might look through the advertising columns of the local papers and conclude there were not twenty-five business men here. They don't advertise at all season and some don't advertise at all.

So the newspapers as a result make a poor showing for local enterprise and receive meagar home support. The wonder is how publishers of local papers manage to make and maintain the really creditable journals they do. The fact is they could not if they had to rely on local support to do business.

It often happens that outsiders seeking business locations send for copies of the local papers and seeing the line of business they want to engage in is not represented in the advertising columns they conclude this is the location sought and come here and compete with those already in the field. The outsider finds men in business here who do not seem to know the value of publicity, so he comes and gives them a little more competition. This is not an imaginary supposition; it actually happened and the cause comes up plainly when we hear of a non-advertising business man complaining that trade is decreasing. The remedy is right at hand, within reach of every merchant. We have suggested the only practical means of getting back trade from department stores.

Locusts Due This Year.

1905 will mark the reappearance of the seventeen year locust. This is the prediction at least. The seventeen year locust is an insect that makes its appearance once every seventeen years. They were here here in 1854, again in 1871, then in 1888 and are looked for again this season. The locust is a large insect and when a number of them are lodged among the leaves of a tree the send forth a chorus of chirps that fills the air with a deafening noise. The locusts are not particularly injurious to the vegetation nor are they poisonous as some have supposed. The advent will be looked for with interest.

DAIRY NOTES.

From the Ada Index.

Poor cream always makes poor butter and brings a poor price.

The only way to get rid of poor butter is to quit making it.

A good successful farmer generally keeps a good herd of dairy cows.

It is a great mistake to treat milk as a luxury. At the price it is ordinarily sold for, it is an economical and helpful food.

Good stock must have good care and the old dairy cow looks for good feed and she certainly must have it if good results are expected.

When butter is packed too soft you cannot get it in as solid as if in good firm condition and your tubs are apt to shrink more when they reach their destination if packed in too soft a condition.

It always pays to stop and consider before you speak whether it shall be a good word not a bad one for your own creamery for it is your own benefit and which is the most valuable, do you to praise it or run it down?

Heifers for the best results should be bred so as to freshen when about two years old. It is all important that the heifer acquires the habit of being a persistent milker.

In securing a cow for milk and butter do not attach too much importance to breed. These are good and right within themselves, but coupled with it we must have inividuality and merit. A pure bred dairy cow without performance at the pail is disappointing.

It is imperative that a dairy cow's udder be entirely freed from milk morning and night at a stated hour. If milk is left in the udder the secretions will be checked and the cow becomes an unprofitable milker. The cow is often pronounced a failure, when if she could talk she would place the responsibility where it belongs—on the milker.

When skim milk is fed to the pigs in conjuntion with other food, they will gain more rapidly in weight than when grain is fed alone. The pigs will return you, other conditions being favorable, at least 20 cents per hundred pounds for your skim milk. Six pounds of skim milk fed to a pig equals one pound of shorts. Combine the two for best results.

This is a problem that confronts every farmer and its importance cannot be overestimated. We are told that the way the twig is bent the tree will grow, so as the calf is inclined the cow will in a great measure, be,

Dr. Withycombe in an address before the Oregon State Dairy association, said in relation to the proper rearing of the calf, "The development of the dairy cow begins with the feeding of the young calf. Great care should be exercised not to derange the digestive organ of the young calf. The calf should be weaned from its dam within twelve hours from its birth and feed its dam's milk three or four times a day for the first week. This milk ought to be fed at its normal temperature. After ten or twelve days begin to substitute skim milk for the new until the calf is three weeks old at which time it can be placed on a skim milk diet. About this time a calf that is well nourished should exhibit a desire for other food. Nothing is better than a few shelled oats for several reasons; they are nutritious and are comparatively rich in fat; their mastication stimulates the secretion of saliva and develops the masseter muscles. They also materially assist in the development of the rumen.

Climatic Cures.

The influence of climate conditions in the cure of consumption is very much overdrawn. The poor patient, and the rich patient, too, can do much better at home by proper attention to food digestion, and a regular use of German Syrup. Free expectoration in the morning is made certain by German Syrup, so is a good night's rest and the absence of that weakening cough and debilitating night sweat. Restless nights and the exhaustion due to coughing, the greatest danger and dread of the consumptive, can be prevented or stopped by taking German Syrup liberally and regularly. Should you be able to go to a warmer clime, you will find that of the thousands of consumptives there, the few who are benefited and regain strength are those who use German Syrup. Dr. G. C. Hoff arrived here Wednesday from Zumbrota to look over this place with a view to locating here. He is a graduate of the Northwestern University of Chicago and has until quite recently been practicing at the Tabitha hospital in that city. He left Thursday for McIntosh to visit his brother who is a druggist there, but before leaving he informed the Pioneer that unless something unforeseen occurred he would return in a few days and locate here permanently.

Hon. L. C. Simons and J. A. Duffy were two prominent business visitors from Red Lake Falls.

Adam Zeh came over from Red Lake Falls last evening to look after his real estate interests in this vicinity.

PUT OUT OF ACTION

RUSSIAN CRUISER REPORTED TO HAVE BEEN DISABLED BY JAPANESE VESSELS.

Fight Said to Have Occurred in Kamranh Bay Saturday, Three of the Mikado's Warships Returning the Fire of Rojestvensky's Fleet—Latter Leaves French Waters for Some Unknown Destination Northward.

Tokio, April 25.—Two Japanese torpedo boats, accompanied by a cruiser scout, were fired upon by Rojestvensky's ships Saturday off Kamranh bay. The fire was returned, and one Russian vessel, believed to have been a cruiser, was disabled. The Japanese vessels then retired.

The governor of Hainan island has wired the Chinese government that the Baltic fleet, consisting of twenty-eight vessels, is taking coal off the coast of Hainan. It is stated at Hong-kong that the third Russian (Nebogatoff's) squadron will join the Baltic fleet about Friday and that the Russians will make a prolonged stay at Hainan island.

Japan is vigorously protesting against the preparations for flight from Shanghai of the Russian protected cruiser Askold. There are now fifty-three ships altogether in the two Russian squadrons, and it is believed Admiral Rojestvensky will avoid battle until a combination is made and the vessels all victualed.

Admiral Togo has instruction to 'move on the enemy without delay,' however, and it is hoped here that he will bring about a battle within the next forty-eight hours.

FLEET SAILS NORTH

ROJESTVENSKY QUITS KAMRANH BAY FOR AN UNKNOWN DESTINATION.

Kamranh Bay, Indo-China, April 22, via Saigon, April 24.—The Russian squadron, consisting of fifty-two ships, including transports, left Kamranh bay at noon and the main portion soon disappeared in a northerly direction. Sixteen vessels—the Russian cruiser Svietlata, the Russian hospital ship Orel, four German transports, seven Danish transports and three Russian transports—remained in the offing.

Fishermen and others assert that they heard heavy cannonading off Kamranh bay during the evening of April 22.

Those who saw Admiral Rojestvensky prior to his departure say he is suffering from dysentery, accompanied by severe pains. All the officers and crews of the Russian ships appeared to be full of confidence.

It is believed here that it is Admiral Rojestvensky's intention to do everything possible to have Admiral Nebogatoff join him before undertaking a decisive battle. A torpedo boat destroyer is patrolling the coast.

NO FIGHTING IN MANCHURIA.

Marshal Oyama Awaiting Result of Naval Battle.

St. Petersburg, April 24.—The news from Manchuria indicates that Field Marshal Oyama's plans await the result of the naval battle, it being too risky for the Japanese army to undertake serious operations while the outcome of the sea fight is in the balance. Should Admiral Rojestvensky reach Vladivostok and Admiral Togo still be able to protect the Japanese lines of communications the general belief at the war office is that the Japanese will forthwith attempt to cut off and invest Vladivostok and make of the place another Port Arthur.

DROP IN MAY WHEAT

ANOTHER HEAVY DECLINE IN PRICES ON THE CHICAGO BOARD OF TRADE.

Chicago, April 25.—Remnants of the famous Gates line of May wheat were thrown upon an unsupported market on the board of trade here Monday, adding a further decline of 1½c to the sensational 11¼c break of Saturday. This recession from the dollar mark, the last price of the previous session, was rapid and spectacular and was accompanied by demonstrations in the pit almost equal to those of Saturday. When the final bell closed the day's operations, May wheat was being offered at 93c, a net loss of 7c on the day's trading.

FOUR MEN ASPHYXIATED.

Break in Gas Main Cause of Accident at Pittsburg.

Pittsburg, April 22.—Four men were asphyxiated and three others are in a dangerous condition as the result of the breaking of a gas main at the Edgar Thomson steel works. The three men still living were trying to rescue the four who were killed.

KOCH JURY COMPLETED.

State Outlines Its Case Against New Ulm Dentist.

Mankato, Minn., April 25.—The state disclosed its hand during the day in the Koch case, and it was a stronger one than it had at New Ulm on the first trial of this celebrated case. As General Childs outlined the matter, the state has strengthened its case at three important points.

A witness has been found who claims she saw Koch enter his office between 9 and 9:30 the night of the murder, go to the corner of the room where he kept a hammer that tallies exactly with the one found at the scene of the murder, strike a light, apparently take the hammer down and put it in his pocket and then put the light out. It is then presumed he went across to the barber shop, waited till the way was clear and went up to Gebhard's office.

This hammer is to be identified by the scrubwoman who cleaned Koch's office shortly before the murder.

The third point newly developed by the state involves the route taken by the murderer after leaving the Gebhard premises. Mrs. Dahm will testify that some party a few moments before 10 ran through her yard toward the Koch residence, using the private gate and path often used by the Koch family, as the Dahms are tenants of the Kochs. Fresh blood was found on the gatepost in the morning where none had been before.

NOTED ACTOR IS DEAD

JOSEPH JEFFERSON DIES AT HIS HOME AT PALM BEACH, FLA., AFTER LONG ILLNESS.

West Palm Beach, Fla., April 24.—Death has ended the career of Joseph Jefferson. The final hours of the noted actor were spent in unconsciousness.

The end was not a surprise to his family. Ever since his last sinking spell, which came after a rally on Thursday morning and which was followed by an apparent improvement until Friday, the family has been waiting for the end.

The sickness of Mr. Jefferson which ended in his death was contracted, it is believed, while on a visit to his son, Charles B. Jefferson, at Hobe sound, a few miles above Palm Beach, where he went to meet his friend, former President Cleveland. It is believed that from a slight indiscretion in his eating there he suffered an attack of indigestion.

Joseph Jefferson was born in Philadelphia Feb. 20, 1829, and was looked upon as the dean of the dramatic profession in this country. He first appeared on the stage as a child and during his career had played in a number of foreign countries. His great reputation was made in "Rip Van Winkle," which he played in almost every city in the United States.

TORNADO IN QUAKER CITY.

One Woman Fatally Injured In Terrific Wind Storm.

Philadelphia, April 22.—A wind storm of terrific velocity swept over Philadelphia and vicinity, doing considerable damage in many parts of the city and suburbs.

One woman was fatally injured and probably a score of other persons hurt. The wind was accompanied by a heavy rain. In all parts of the city roofs of houses were blown off and walls blown down.

CONGRESSMAN KILLED

JOHN M. PINCKNEY, HIS BROTHER AND ANOTHER MAN SLAIN AT HEMPSTEAD, TEX.

Hempstead, Tex., April 25.—Bitter feeling over the prohibition question, which has been felt for several years throughout the county, ended in bloodshed at night. At a mass meeting called for the purpose of petitioning the governor to send rangers to enforce the local option law, J. N. Brown, a leading lawyer and a staunch anti-Prohibitionist, began shooting. In an instant the shooting became general. Three men were killed, one man was fatally injured and two others seriously wounded. The dead are:

J. N. Brown, Congressman John M. Pinckney, and Tom Pinckney, brother of the congressman.

John Mills, a leading Prohibitionist, it is feared, cannot survive the night.

Armed men parade the street. Excitement is at fever heat. The governor has been notified and rangers are now on the way.

The night's affray may be traced chiefly to the recent election in which the anti-Prohibitionists suffered defeat. Since this election the county has been divided into factions.

WILL SUSPEND PUBLICATION.

St. Paul Globe to Retire From Business After Long Career.

St. Paul, April 20.—The St. Paul Globe, the largest Democratic daily in the Northwest, formally announces this morning that on the first of May the paper will suspend publication after being in business nearly thirty years. Lack of advertising patronage is given as the reason of the proposed suspension.

STEALS IMMENSE SUM

PRESIDENT OF FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF MILWAUKEE EMBEZZLES $1,500,000.

Money Taken by Head of Institution Lost in Speculation on the Wheat Market—Directors Deposit Amount Believed to Be Sufficient to Meet Demands of Depositors and Put the Bank on a Solid Foundation.

Milwaukee, April 24.—Frank G. Bigelow, president of the First National bank of this city and former president of the American Bankers' association, has defaulted the bank's funds to the extent of $1,500,000. The directors of the bank have deposited in the bank a sum sufficient to make the institution perfectly solid. Mr. Bigelow has been placed under arrest.

The capital of the First National bank is $1,500,000 and the surplus is $1,200,000. Mr. Bigelow has signed over property to the bank amounting to $300,000, making his net defalcation about $1,200,000.

Aside from the surplus, which will meet the amount of the defalcation, the sum of $1,535,000 has been subscribed by directors to meet any demands which may be made on the bank. The comptroller of the currency has been notified and has been asked to make an immediate examination of the bank.

Mr. Bigelow's defalcation became known to the directors of the bank on Saturday night. He admitted that the amount had been lost in speculation and that he had falsified the books to cover up the defalcation.

Assistant Cashier Implicated.

Henry G. Goll, assistant cashier of the bank, has been removed, charged with having been a party to the falsification of the figures in the bank's books. The announcement of the defalcation was made by George P. Miller, one of the directors of the bank.

An intimate friend of President Bigelow, discussing the case, said:

"Wheat speculation has cost the Bigelows their name and the bank a large sum of money. It is a family tragedy as well as a tremendous shock to the financial circles of the city. The father, Frank G. Bigelow, had Chicago speculative connections with the firm of Tracy & Co., in which his son, Gordon Bigelow, was a member."

"In the late Armour-Gates wheat battle and the sharp fluctuations of the market which have come during the last few days Bigelow senior and the Bigelow junior were caught, and caught for all that the bank directors now report taken."

At 2 p. m., an hour before closing the bank, the crowd of depositors seeking to withdraw their deposits had swelled to about 500, extending out over the sidewalk into the street.

FOURTEEN LIVES LOST

CONVENT BUILDING AT ST. GENEVIEVE, QUE., COMPLETELY DESTROYED BY FIRE.

Montreal, April 21.—A disastrous fire broke out at an early hour and reduced to ashes the convent in the little village of St. Genevieve. One nun, nine young ladies ranging in age from eleven to eighteen years and four old women lost their lives.

As soon as the fire was discovered the villagers hastened to the scene. Bucket brigades were hurriedly formed and every possible effort was made to save the building, but the fire had gained such headway that it was soon apparent that there was no chance to save it from destruction. The occupants, aroused by the smoke, attempted to grope their way out of the building. Sister Marie Adjuteur, in heroic efforts to save the lives of the children in her charge, succumbed to the smoke and flames. The pupils who perished were in a portion of the building where the fire had obtained too much headway before the alarm was given to enable those who responded to effect their rescue.

JUDGE A. M. THAYER DEAD.

Gained National Reputation by Writing Opinion in Securities Case.

St. Louis, April 25.—Amos Madden Thayer, United States circuit judge of the Eighth judicial circuit, who gained a national reputation by writing the opinion of the United States circuit court of appeals in the Northern Securities case, died at his residence here at night after an illness of four months. Judge Thayer was born in Mina, N. Y., in 1841. He was educated at Hamilton college.

Judge Thayer was appointed United States district judge for the Eastern district of Missouri by President Cleveland in 1887 and in 1894 he was appointed by President Cleveland to the United States circuit bench.

Representative Simons did well for his district by getting $1,200 for Red Lake, $1,500 for Beltrami and $600 for Clearwater county from the state road and bridge fund says the St. Hilaire Spectator.

Says the Hawley Herald: "Neighboring towns and newspapers are doing a good deal of worrying over the trade which the mail order houses is gobbling up. The only cure for that evil is to do like the Hawley merchants—advertise and quote right prices."

W. G. Hunt, editor of the Gully Sunbeam, will start a new publication at Steenerson postoffice, near Highlanding, in this county, early in June, which will make seven newspapers in Red Lake county. Editor Hunt is considerable of a character in the newspaper line, and his Red Lake county paper will be awaited for with pleasure by the boys.

The state board of control prices on binding twine this year will save the farmers of Minnesota $300,000. The binding twine trust has announced its Minnesota prices on all grades to dealers at 1¾ cents a pound higher than the prison twine and 2¼ cents higher on the price dealers will sell to consumers. The state will this year make nearly 12,000,000 pounds.

County Auditor Ford and County Attorney Germo are not at present favorites with Jack Eastman, of the Thief River News. John has already got them laid on the shelf, politically, and swears he will clean out the rest of the officers in the court house at the same time. John's political prestige is amazing—especially in an off year—and if he really wants to beat the boys he will have to advocate their election for at least two years in advance.

The remains of the body of Paul Jones, the famous Revolutionary admiral, have been found in a state of excellent preservation in the cemetery at Paris, France where they were interred says the Roseau Region. The identification is complete and is the result of persistent efforts on the part of Ambassador Porter. The interment took place over 100 years ago, but the body was found to be well preserved. The internal organs were also well preserved that an autopsy make, showed distinct proofs of the disease from which the admiral is known to have died. The remains of America's noted sailor and fighter will be brought to this country and be interred in the national cemetery at Arlington with appropriate honors.

FAVORS RECIPROCITY AND REVISION.

There is steady argumentation of the accumation of proofs that President Roosevelt not only favors tariff revision but also favors reciprocity with Canada, says the Luverne Herald.

It will he remembered that the claim has been stoutly made that the president stands with the stand-patters, not only for the maintenance of present tariff schedules but likewise for prohibitive restriction on trade with Canada, including tariff on lumber.

But the stand-patters have been compelled at last to abandon this claim, and not only that but to own that the claim never had any foundation and was made in flat contradiction and defiance of the facts in the case. That admission, in effect, was made recently without reserve by the American Protectionist, the official organ and mouthpiece of stand-patism, with an accompany-bitter chastisement of the president for the position he has taken.

And now comes the Right Honorable Joseph Chamberlain, with the declaration that President Roosevelt is in favor of reciprocity with Canada. It may be safely assumed that Mr. Chamberlain knows what he is talking about, and this is what he says: "At the present moment the president of the United States is one of the ablest, the strongest and one of the most courageous men who ever sat in the presidential chair. He is a patriot and he has openly declared that one of his greatest desires is to connect the United States more closely with our Dominion of Canada by reciprocity. I do not know what success he may have with his countrymen, but certainly they are in a position to offer favorable terms to the Dominion. If we reject the idea of considering a similar proposition made to us, is it too much to expect that Canada may turn in another direction?"

The Thief River Press last week calls Mayor Duffy a perjurer because he alleges several things distasteful to Thief River Falls, in his prayer asking for an injunction restraining the Auditor from filing the petition. The thing that the Press takes the greatest exception to is the statement that the saloon licenses at the up-river city were reduced to $500, with the strict understanding that the remaining $500 from each license was to go to the county seat committee. This has been so generally known throughout the county, that it is amusing to see the Press attempt to deny it. It was freely bragged of by residents of Thief River Falls, and looked upon as a shrewd trick, so the Press is getting in deep water when it attempts to dispute something that is so well known. They have reason to be ashamed of it, however, as a city that would require sixteen saloon keepers to present them with $8000 to fight the rights of the people at large, is certainly on its last legs morally. Mr. Duffy did not make an affidavit of anything that wasn't true—the only objection that could possibly be raised would be the fact that he didn't make charge enough, as there was a gist of bold-up schemes used to get the great petition in shape for filing.

Thief River Falls doesn't care how soon the county seat question comes to a vote. Oh, no! And yet they have held up the saloon keepers up stream for $8000 to help make the people see the light. When a town will spend from ten to twenty thousand dollars in an attempt to secure a county seat of a county the size of Red Lake, doesn't it look as though they had a pretty strong "object" in wanting to get control of the county affairs. They figure, however, that they can get all this money back by bleeding the county if they can only get the chance. And still they holler "graft."

If the 1904 crops were equally divided every man, woman and child in the United States would receive one barrel of flour, 200 eggs, 140 quarts of milk, more than half of which goes into butter; one bushel of apples and two and one-half bushels of other fruits and berries; three bushels potatoes, two bushels of carrots, parsnips and turnips; eleven head of cabbage and half as much lettuce, cucumbers and cauliflower; twenty-eight bushels of corn, usually in the shape of beef, pork and poultry; besides seventy pounds of cotton, six pounds of wool for clothes and enough leather for two pair of shoes. Did you get your share?

Thief River's "factions" have dropped their recently inaugurated school fight, and the dove of peace is said to be seriously contemplating the advisability of perching on the house tops there once more. In the recent controversy, Banker Prichard drove Editor Eastman so far in the hole that he hasn't peeked out since, but in justice to John it can be said that he was "called off" by the powers that be, and advised to hold fire with his batteries until the county seat war comes to a head. John's career has been a strenuous one, but this is the first time he was ever known to admit that he was second best in a newspaper scrap. We're ashamed of you, John.

All eyes are now turned on the scrap at St. Hilaire, Banker J. K. Hannay and Editor Harry Ives being the participants in a battle, which at this stage gives promise of being spectacular in the extreme. Several weeks ago Brother Ives went after Mr. Hannay for attempting to evade the payment of taxes on certain property at St. Hilaire, and last week Mr. Hannay bumps Harry in the Thief River News, not in answer to the arguments, but along personal lines. Harry comes back good and strong, and the people are now decidedly interested spectators. What the outcome will be is not yet known, but Mr. Ives' stand is certainly in the interest of his home town and he should be given the support of the people there who desire to see their city hold its own with the rest of the world.

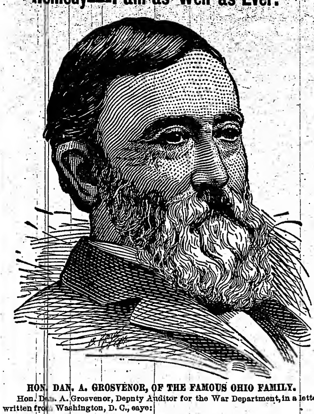
DAN GROSVENOR SAYS:

"Pe-ru-na is an Excellent Spring Catarrh Remedy—I am as Well as Ever."



HON. DAN. A. GROSVENOR, OF THE FAMOUS OHIO FAMILY.

Hon. Dan. A. Grosvenor, Deputy Auditor for the War Department, in a letter written from Washington, D. C., says:

"Allow me to express my gratitude to you for the benefit derived from one bottle of Peruna. One week has brought wonderful changes and I am now as well as ever. Besides being one of the very best spring tonics it is an excellent catarrh remedy."—
DAN. A. GROSVENOR.

In a recent letter he says:

"I consider Peruna really more meritorious than I did when I wrote you last. I receive numerous letters from acquaintances all over the country asking me if my certificate is genuine. I invariably answer, yes."—Dan. A. Grosvenor.

A County Commissioner's Letter.

Hon. John Williams, County Commissioner, of 517 West Second street, Duluth, Minn., says the following in regard to Peruna:

"As a remedy for catarrh I can cheerfully recommend Peruna. I know what it is to suffer from that terrible disease and I feel that it is my duty to speak a good word for the tonic that brought me immediate relief. Peruna cured me of a bad case of catarrh and I know it will cure any other sufferer from that disease."—John Williams.

A Congressman's Letter.

Hon. H. W. Ogden, Congressman from Louisiana, in a letter written at Washington, D. C., says the following of Peruna, the national catarrh remedy:

"I can conscientiously recommend your Peruna as a fine tonic and all around good medicine to those who are in need of a catarrh remedy. It has been commended to me by people who have used it, as a remedy particularly effective in the cure of catarrh. For those who need a good catarrh medicine I know of nothing better."

W. E. Griffith, Concan, Texas, writes:

"I suffered with chronic catarrh for many years. I took Peruna and it completely cured me. I think Peruna is the best medicine in the world for catarrh. My general health is much improved by its use, as I am much stronger than I have been for years."—W. E. Griffith.

A Congressman's Letter.

Congressman H. Bowen, Ruskin, Tazewell county, Va., writes:

"I can cheerfully recommend your valuable remedy, Peruna, to any one who is suffering with catarrh, and who is in need of a permanent and effective cure."—H. Bowen.

Mr. Fred. D. Scott, Larue, Ohio, Right Guard of Hiram Foot Ball Team, writes:

"As a specific for lung trouble I place Peruna at the head. I have used it myself for colds and catarrh of the bowels and it is a splendid remedy. It restores vitality, increases bodily strength and makes a sick person well in a short time. I give Peruna my hearty indorsement."—Fred. D. Scott.

Gen. Ira C. Abbott, 906 M street, N. W., Washington, D. C., writes:

"I am fully convinced that your remedy is an excellent tonic. Many of my friends have used it with the most beneficial results for coughs, colds and catarrhal trouble."—Ira C. Abbott.

Mrs. Elmer Fleming, orator of Reservoir Council No. 168, Northwestern Legion of Honor, of Minneapolis, Minn., writes from 2585 Polk street, NE.:

"I have been troubled all my life with catarrh in my head. I took Peruna for about three months, and now think I am permanently cured. I believe that for catarrh in all its forms Peruna is the medicine of the age. It cures when all other remedies fail. I can heartily recommend Peruna as a catarrh remedy."—Mrs. Elmer Fleming

Mrs. Elmer Fleming, Minneapolis, Minn.

Treat Catarrh in Spring.

The spring is the time to treat catarrh. Cold, wet winter weather often retards a cure of catarrh. If a course of Peruna is taken during the early spring months the cure will be prompt and permanent. There can be no failures if Peruna is taken intelligently during the favorable weather of spring.

As a systemic catarrh remedy Peruna eradicates catarrh from the system wherever it may be located. It cures catarrh of the stomach or bowels with the same certainty as catarrh of the head.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, O.

We Paid $100,000

For Liquozone, Yet We Give You a 50c. Bottle Free.

We paid $100,000 for the American rights to Liquozone; the highest price ever paid for similar rights on any scientific discovery. We did this after testing the product for two years, through physicians and hospitals, in this country and others. We cured all kinds of germ diseases with it—thousands of the most difficult cases obtainable. We proved that in germ troubles it always accomplishes what medicine cannot do. Now we ask you to try it—try it at our expense. Test it as we did; see what it does. Then you will use it always, as we do, and as millions of others do. You will use it, not only to get well, but to keep well. And it will save nearly all of your sickness.

Kills Inside Germs.

Liquozone is not made by compounding drugs, nor is there alcohol in it. Its virtues are derived solely from gas—largely oxygen gas—by a process requiring immense apparatus and 14 days' time. This process has, for more than 20 years, been the constant subject of scientific and chemical research.

The result is a liquid that does what oxygen does. It is a nerve food and blood food—the most helpful thing in the world to you. Its effects are exhilarating, vitalizing, purifying. Yet it is a germicide so certain that we publish on every bottle an offer of $1,000 for a disease germ that it cannot kill. The reason is that germs are vegetables; and Liquozone—like an excess of oxygen—is deadly to vegetal matter.

There lies the great value of Liquozone. It is the only way known to kill germs in the body without killing the tissues, too. Any drug that kills germs is a poison, and it cannot be taken internally. Medicine is almost helpless in any germ disease. It is this fact that gives Liquozone its worth to humanity. And that worth is so great that we have spent over one million dollars to supply the first bottle free to each sick one we learned of.

Germ Diseases.

These are the known germ diseases. All that medicine can do for these troubles is to help Nature overcome the germs, and such results are indirect and uncertain. Liquozone attacks the germs, wherever they are. And when the germs which cause a disease are destroyed, the disease must end, and forever. That is inevitable.

Cement sidewalk building promises to be quite extensive in Red Lake Falls this summer and the outlook now is that the brick row at least will be beautified by the addition of a handsome cement walk. With the work once started here there is no question but what the people will all take to the idea, and we may expect to see a great deal of this handsome and substantial walk laid during the next few months. Cement walks are an improvement that all cities should have and their usefulness can only be appreciated after they are once installed.

A dance followed the concert and the crowd tripped the light fantastic until midnight to the strains of the capable band orchestra. The trip home consumed eight or nine hours but Happy seemed to think that it was all right, anyway.

The last week has been all that could be desired in the weather line, and by Saturday night it is estimated that eighty-five per cent of the grain will be in the ground in this section of the Valley. The grass is jumping along in fine shape, the lawns about the city having donned their mantel of green, and everything points to a delightful spring season. With some fine rains during the next few weeks and the long and warm days of sunshine sure to follow, the famous Red River Valley will get a start sufficient to bring her under the wire at harvest a full length ahead of everything else in the world in the matter of wheat and small grain production. It is easily surmised wherein a condition of this sort will be gladly welcomed by the people of this part of the world.

MAY FREE OLDEST PRISONER

John Warren, for 43 Years in a Connecticut Penitentiary, Sues for a Pardon.

Wethersfield, Conn.—John Warren, who has been in prison longer than any man in this country, having been at the state's prison here for 43 years, may be released the coming summer by the board of pardons.

At the meeting of the board he presented a petition to be allowed to spend his remaining days with his brothers, who promised to care for him the rest of his life. The petition was continued until the June session.

Warren came to Wethersfield in December, 1859, and he is now 66 years old. According to the testimony at his trial, he was married to Julia E. Turner when he was but 17 and she but 15. They quarreled continually, and one day in the early spring he persuaded his wife to take a walk with him in the woods. They sat down on the bank of a dried-up stream, in which there were little pools of water, and while his wife's back was turned Warren grabbed her by the throat and held her nose and mouth under the water until she was drowned. Then he dragged the body into a clump of woods three miles away. It was said that another woman whom he wished to marry witnessed the crime.

KANSAS' BIG OIL YIELD.

State's Product for 1904 Is 5,600,000 Barrels—Beats the Pennsylvania Output.

Chanute, Kan.—For 1904 the total production in the Kansas oil field was approximately 5,500,000 barrels. In 1903 the production was 1,118,000 barrels. The increase is a fraction more than 500 per cent.

Since the discovery of oil in 1856 nothing like this record has been made. Kansas has made more progress in oil industry in 12 months than was accomplished in Pennsylvania in 17 years.

During the year just closed there has been invested in the oil business, leases, drilling, pipe lines, pumping plants, and the like, about $50,000,000. The wells themselves have cost $5,000,000 more. Tankage has cost $15,000,000 more and pipe lines of all sizes, pumping plants, and other improvements bring the total to $50,000,000, an average monthly investment of $4,156,000. Taking the average price of oil for the year, there has been paid out more than $4,000,000 to the producer and more than that to labor.

More than 3,000 miles of oil and gas pipe lines have been laid.

DEATH OF SENATOR PLATT.

Connecticut Statesman Passes Away After Long Illness.

Washington, Conn., April 22.—United States Senator Orville Hitchcock Platt of Connecticut died at his summer home here during the evening from pneumonia. The end came almost unexpectedly, the immediate cause being the breaking of the abscess which had formed in the right lung and which produced strangulation. Senator Platt's illness dates back two months, when he contracted a severe cold, which later developed into pneumonia. He was seventy-eight years of age.

During his service of twenty-six years Senator Platt took an active part in the proceedings of the upper branch of congress, filled many important committee assignments and demonstrated his capacity in handling questions of national interest. He was chairman of the judiciary committee and a member of the committees on Cuban relations, finance and revolutionary claims. Senator Platt was frequently called to the chair to preside temporarily over the senate and during the Swayne impeachment trial sat throughout as presiding officer.

Wakeful?

Sleeplessness Is a Sign of Nerve Trouble and Should Be Looked To.

There are three different manifestations of sleeplessness.

First, hardly to sleep a wink all night, second, to lie awake a long time before falling asleep; third, to fall asleep soon, waking up after several hours and then find it hard to sleep again.

They mean that somewhere in the nerve fibres, somewhere in the brain cells, somewhere in the blood vessels that carry blood to the brain, something is radically wrong, and must be righted, or the end may be worse than death.

To right it, take Dr. Miles' Nervine.

Some other symptoms of nerve trouble are: Dizziness, Headache, Backache, Worry, Fretfulness, Irritability, Melancholy, Lack of Ambition.

They indicate diseases which may lead to Epilepsy, Fits, St. Vitus' Dance, Nervous Prostration, Paralysis, Insanity.

Nothing will give such quick and lasting relief as Dr. Miles' Nervine.

"My husband had been sick for weeks, could not sit up to have his bed made. With all the medical help we could get he continued to grow worse. He could neither sleep or eat. Our baby girl was sent away, and all callers barred, because he could not stand a bit of talking. I read of a case of nervous prostration cured by Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. We began giving it to him, and in a few days he was able to be dressed. From that time he steadily improved. Nervine saved his life."—MRS. A. G. HASKIN, Freeville, N. Y.

HIS STEAK WAS ALL READY

Sarcasm of the Wife Not Wasted on the Delinquent and Imbibing Husband.

Sarcasm loses nothing by awaiting the psychological moment for its utterance, remarks the New York Tribune. Also it oftentimes is most fraught with the sharpness of a two-edged sword when it is contained in a simple statement of fact. A husband given to periodical looks upon the cocktail when it contains a cherry, his glance at such times dwelling thereon for two or three successive days without interruption arose one morning recently with a head out of all proportion to his hat measure and a throat that felt like a limekiln. No explanation was needed when he told his wife he was going out for a moment to get rid of the olive green taste in his mouth; he would be back right away. All she said was: "Bring a steak home with you for breakfast." He went to a cocktail dispensary and got his brace. As he was going out he met a friend, who told him he would feel better if he had another. He did feel better, so much better that he was prevailed on further to improve the state of his physical and mental being by a third diving after a cherry. He did not see his home for two days. Again, one morning he awoke with iron bands pressing into his head and his tongue cleaving to the roof of his mouth. His wife heard him stirring and went to the door. "Your steak is ready," she said.

ALL WOMEN MARKET THERE

Average Housekeeper of Paris Does Her Own Buying, Declares French Writer.

Almost every woman in France does her own marketing and ladies take their maid or cook along to carry home their purchases, writes Jeanne Coustentin, in Good Housekeeping. I am speaking of the average household; rich or very chic people leave the marketing to the cook, who deals in stores which have regular deliveries; while in very wealthy households, that all-important personage, the chef, would not hear of anyone interfering with his prerogative of selecting and ordering everything, and this able creator of sauces, of things savory, steaming or jellied, may even have his own coupe to take him to the Hallee, the huge market that each day provides the provisions for all of Paris and its suburbs. Servants love to go to market, for it is a custom with almost every storekeeper to give them one cent on every franc spent, so you will find it next to an impossibility to make your cook deal where she does not receive her sou de franc, and in engaging a servant many will ask you: "Does madame do her own marketing?"

ORIGIN OF THE MUSTACHE.

Chicago Antiquary Unearths Manuscript Telling the History of the Fad.

A Chicago antiquary found in an old Spanish manuscript the other day the story of the mustache's origin. "We owe the mustache to the Spaniards," he said afterward, to a Baltimore Herald man. "The Spaniards adopted it to distinguish themselves from the Moors. After the Moorish invasion, you see, Moors and Spaniards were so inextricably mixed up that it was impossible to tell them apart. But the Spaniards were Christians, and therefore they decided to wear a cross upon their faces—a mustache and a chin tuft, or goatee. This hair cross became the fashion all over Spain, and gradually it spread to other lands. Before that time men had either gone clean-shaven or fully bearded. Now they adopted first the mustache and chin tuft, and finally the mustache alone. When you stroke the thatch on your upper lip, remember that you are stroking a part of the true cross, and when you see a man with both mustache and chin tuft, point out to him that he should live up to the declaration of faith that his face makes."

SNAKE HEARS IN TONGUE.

So Declares Student of Reptiles and He Says They Have No Ears.

Allen S. Williams, who has spent his summer in the mountains of New York, studying snakes, according to the Detroit News-Tribune, says: "It is true that snakes have no ears, but I have discovered that they can hear through their tongues. A snake can live for two years without feeding. I have known cases where snakes have come to life after they had been frozen as stiff as a walking stick. Last January two of my blacksnakes were frozen so hard that I could have broken them to pieces. My wife put them on hot water bags, and in an hour they began to show signs of life. When about four inches of their bodies were thawed out she began feeding them hot milk, and it was not long until they were wriggling about the parlor floor as good as new." Mr. Williams said that recently one of his snakes was suffering from indigestion. He found that he had swallowed a large hen's egg, and in order to cure him he hit him on the back and crushed the egg, after which the reptile recovered.

Names of the Sultan.

The sultan of Turkey, who has gained for himself among European countries so many uncomplimentary titles, is addressed by the Turkish journals as "The Pearl of the Nations," "The Nombril of the World," "The Gate of Justice," "The Prince of Camels," "The Master of Masters" and "The Shadow of God." On the other hand, the Macedonians, the Armenians and the young Turkish or native revolutionary party stigmatize him as "Abdul Hamid, the Red Beast."

STUDENTS IN HOMES.

THE SERVANT GIRL PROBLEM SOLVED IN NEBRASKA.

Young Men Do Housework of All Kinds to Pay Their Way Through College—Boys Cook, Bake and Scrub.

Lincoln, Neb.—A labor union decree and the necessities of some students at the University of Nebraska, have resulted in the partial solving of the servant girl question in Lincoln. Fully a dozen young men who have been taking a course in domestic science are now holding down positions as men of all work in as many families in this city.

Of the 3,000 students at the university a number are compelled to work their way through college. These have found jobs in local stores, offices and newspapers, where their spare time is spent. Previous to the first part of the year some worked in restaurants as waiters.

Then the waiters' union served notice upon the restaurant keepers that hereafter none but union men should be employed. The result of this was that most of the students were compelled to give up their employment.

In casting about for something to do the suggestion was made that the boys might be able to supply a part at least of the demand for household help. None of them was qualified, however, for such work. Nothing daunted, they applied to Miss Bouten, head of the domestic science department of the university, for entrance into her classes. As the rules of the institution made no distinction between sex in any course the young men were admitted.

For a number of months they worked diligently learning how to cook and bake, how to sweep and care for rooms, and when the present semester opened a dozen of the young men applied to advertising housekeepers for places. When they succeeded in convincing the housekeepers that it was not a college prank, but that they were in earnest, they were tried. All of them are still in service, and they are giving satisfaction.

The care of the furnace and the scrubbing of walks have always been tasks at which most domestics balked, but they have been cheerfully performed by the young men.

School duties take up only a few hours of a day, and by hustling the boys are able to hold their positions and keep up with their classes.

Early rising enables them to have the morning meal ready when the family gets up, and by nine o'clock their morning duties are ended and they are free to pass two hours in the classrooms. The afternoon gives them additional time for recitation, and the evenings, after the household work is finished, are spent in study.

Most of these young men are sons of farmers and have been accustomed to doing chores, and they find it possible to make more money, while being provided with warm quarters and plenty of food, than at their old precarious jobs. The course of study in the domestic science department is well adapted to fitting them for household tasks.

Some of the girls also eke out their slender resources by similar work.

LOVERS OUTWIT MAMMA.

Old Lady Stops First Ceremony, But Couples Get Away and the Knot Is Tied.

Larned, Kan.—At the hotel in Larned the other evening Mr. Thompson, of Harrington, and Lottie Parret, of Larned, were about to be married. A number of the guests at the hotel assembled in the parlor to witness the ceremony. But as an official was about to pronounce them man and wife, the mother of the bride swooped down on the assembly, captured the girl, and carried her to a room in the hotel. There she put the girl to bed, and, it is said, retired with her, that no chance could be had for escape. However that may be, "two shadowy figures might have been seen making their way from the hotel before daylight, and they went to the home of Judge Stockman, waked him up, and in a very short time the knot was securely tied."

Then the couple went to the depot and took the early train out of town.

What the mother said or did when she woke up and found the girl gone is not recorded.

MAKES HORSE COMPANION.

Master Eats Nearly Same Fare as the Animal with Which He Lives.

Alexandria, Ind.—Jules Sampiou, a Belgian glass blower during the palmy days of the gas belt, but for years known as the "Hermit of Orestes," three miles west of the city, has been declared insane and has been transferred to the Richmond insane asylum.

Sampiou lost his mind because he was jilted by his girl in Belgium, since which time he has shunned men and lived alone with a sorrel horse in a ten-foot square hovel, wholly devoid of furniture. When his insanity was first noticeable he was found one morning in his room, which was carpeted with uncashed wage checks footing over $700. He has plenty of money, but eats nearly the same fare as his horse. He used to come to this city once every two weeks for oats, corn, etc., which he carried home or pushed in a hand cart, the horse, a beautiful sorrel, walking meekly along behind. He allowed the horse to do no work.

Troubles of a Hero.

And now it is said that Stoessel must be tried by court-martial. That's what he gets for being a hero.

FARMERS NEED NO LICENSE

Missouri Supreme Court Decides He Can't Be Fined for Vending Own Produce in City.

St. Louis.—As a result of a decision of the supreme court of Missouri in the case of Henry Meyer, License Commissioner Clifford will be unable to collect the $50,000 per annum he expected from the farmers of St. Louis county. Mr. Meyer, who is president of the St. Louis County Farmers' club, was prosecuted by Mr. Clifford in the police court for violating a city ordinance in peddling farm products in St. Louis without a peddlers' license. He was fined $25.

He appealed to the court of criminal correction, which sustained the lower court. His attorneys, George W. Lubke, Jr., W. F. Broadhead, of Clayton, and William D. Jones, of St. Louis, thereupon appealed to the supreme court.

In a decision written by Judge Fox the supreme court reverses the judgment of the lower courts, remits the fine against Meyer, and discharges him.

The decision ends a long contest adversely to the city. Since coming into office Mr. Clifford has diligently endeavored to collect all possible licenses due the municipality. When an ordinance was passed demanding that every person who sold farm products from house to house should pay a peddlers' license of $20 per annum, Mr. Clifford undertook to enforce it against the farmers of St. Louis county. They resisted it, and Mr. Meyer agreed to submit to a test case.

The position taken by the farmers, and there are said to be 3,000 of them in St. Louis county who at times sell their products in the city, was that a state law exempted farmers who sold only their own farm products from paying a peddlers' license.

Their attorneys held that the ordinance passed by the municipal assembly subsequently was in contravention of this statute and therefore illegal. This contention, it appears, has been sustained in the opinion of Judge Fox.

CREW CAPTURES RARE BIRD

A Gannet, Native of Gulf of St. Lawrence, Caught by Sailors Off Boston.

Boston.—The fishing schooner Meteor, which arrived here the other day, brought a bird rarely seen in these waters. It was a gannet, a species of sea fowl that rarely leaves the waters of the gulf of St. Lawrence, and is seldom seen below the grand banks. The bird was a handsome specimen, with a spread of wings fully six feet. It was game, and full of fight, and was tied by one of its wings to a deck post.

The bird hovered over the schooner as she lay to about 70 miles southeast of Highland light, and one of the crew determined to catch it. He baited a hook with a piece of meat and threw it overboard. The gannet shot straight down from where it was flying, 70 or 80 feet above, and seized the hook. It was pulled on board, and after a hard fight the hook was taken from its mouth.

The bird was kept on deck, tied to the post, until the other morning, when it was shown to the old fishermen at the wharf as a curiosity in this neighborhood. After everyone had seen it, it was set free and put on the rail. It dived at once into the water and swam out from the vessel until about 200 feet away. It then tried to fly, but as its feathers were wet through it could not rise, and continued to swim down the harbor, trying at intervals to rise.

While it was aboard the Meteor, the crew took good care of the bird, and fed it several times a day. It had a voracious appetite and ate eight large herring each day. Before setting it free it was fed again, and consumed three large-sized herring.

MACARONI WHEAT BEST.

Colorado Farmers, After Tests, Find They Can Raise the Cereal Without Irrigation.

Denver.—Macaroni wheat for Colorado farmers. It needs no irrigation.

That is the slogan raised by the state agricultural college, which is now engaged in a campaign to show the wheat raisers of the state that this variety is not only a more hardy and a better grain than the ordinary sorts, but that it is also much more prolific under discouraging conditions.

Walter H. Olin, of the department of agronomy, and Prof. W. L. Carlyle, also of the college, are enthusiastic about it. Mr. Olin reports that within the last few months the college has made extensive tests of the macaroni, or durum wheat, and that it has been found to be better in all ways for practical use than the common spring or winter wheat now raised on the farms of Colorado. Individual tests were made of Colorado spring wheat, Kansas hard winter wheat, durum wheat and Pillsbury's best flour for baking purposes, lightness counting 20 points, tenderness 20, flavor 20, texture 10, color 10, and general appearance 20. The tests were exhaustive, the result being 91 points for durum wheat, 89 for Pillsbury's flour, 88 for Kansas winter wheat, and 83 for Colorado spring wheat. Laboratory tests also showed that the durum wheat contains a larger percentage of both sugar and gluten than do the common sorts, making it therefore more palatable and more digestible when eaten in bread.

Tests on various farms in Colorado have also shown that this wheat can be raised more advantageously than can any other variety known.

A Photographing Telescope.

The Bruce photographic telescope, the largest of its kind, is to be moved at once from Lake Geneva, Wis., to Mount Wilson, near Pasadena, Cala., where the atmospheric conditions are much superior.

JEWELED BIRD OF INDIA.

Hindoos Believe Its Possession Carries Royal Power—Now Owned by King Edward.

London.—While British troops and the recollection of British prowess are potent factors in the subjection of India, it is a strange fact—and one not generally known—that Hindoo fatalism and a jeweled bird have much to do with holding the millions of Indus.

The bird is one of the treasured treasures of Windsor castle, and there are many legends woven about it. The Hindoos call it "Uma," and they say that whoever owns the Uma must reign over India. It is supposed to have the gift of locomotion, and it alights, they say, upon the head of whomsoever it endows with royal power.

The truth is that the bird was taken from the canopy above the throne of Tippoo Sahib and presented by the directors of the East India company to George III. It is about 12 inches long, and is shaped like a pigeon, with an exaggerated tail. Rubies, brilliants, emeralds and pearls are sown about the quivering feathers of filigree golden work; it holds a priceless ruby in its beak and an emerald of great size and luster hangs from its breast.

The bird shares with the Koh-i-Noor the superstitious regard of the Hindoos. The fact that both the Uma and the great diamond are owned by King Edward makes it almost a matter of course for the native princes to acknowledge him as their liege lord. It may be a bitter and bewildering thing, this rule of an alien from the west, but the powers above have willed it so, and pious souls must bow in submission to the fiat of fate. While the Uma folds its wings in the castle by the Thames, and while the Koh-i-Noor blazes in the English crown, there is nothing else to do but to be as good subjects of Emperor Edward as may be.

NEW INDUSTRY FOR DENVER

Kilns for Making High-Grade Silica Brick to Be Set Up in Colorado City.

Denver, Col.—Denver will soon have the distinction of operating the first lime kiln in the United States constructed under foreign patents, which will make it the finest in operation. The kiln will be constructed at the industrial suburb of Silica, up Platte canyon, as a part of the process of combining lime and sand in the manufacture of silicated brick. It is known in Europe as the Copenhagen kiln, and is constructed more on the principle of a blast furnace, the feature of the kiln being its low consumption of coal in producing the lime.

In completing its plant the Silicated Brick company has provided a general store and houses for the goodly number of employes who will be required, and application has been made to the post office department at Washington for a post office. The company is already receiving a number of inquiries for its product, but it will take a month yet before brick can be turned out. It is claimed for the silicated brick that they are low in absorption, high in resistance to fire, and adapted for all building purposes, the chemical combination of lime and silica practically making stone.

Arrangements are being made for trackage connection with the plant, so that it will not be long until another industry will be added to the city. All the elements which enter into the manufacture are found close to the plant. While new to Colorado and to the remainder of the country as well, the use of silicated brick is rapidly being adopted for many purposes, the government alone using many millions in various projects.

WOMEN AGREE NOT TO KISS

Autiosculation League Formed in Mexico—Only Members of Female Sex Barred.

City of Mexico.—A little red button worn by some 300 women, old and young, married and indifferent, among the leading social sets of the City of Mexico, marks a new departure, or, rather, a new step, in progress. This little, round button signifies membership in what is known as the Anti-Kissing league. Members of the league take solemn pledges not to kiss each other, in public or private, but put it on the ground that kissing is contagious, or, rather, the means of conveying contagious diseases from one fair lip to another.

There is nothing visible to the naked eye in the constitution of this league against kissing others than members of the female persuasion, and, in fact, the practice, aside from the supposed danger of infection, is decidedly, to the male sense, not only deplorable, but unnecessary. When one woman takes two or three minutes of time in a street car to kiss three or four other women before alighting from the car, she certainly violates the golden rule by making all those passengers wait. How far this new league will conduct its offensive and defensive campaign remains to be see.

Still Unsettled.

The department of agriculture has set new standards for pure food, giving large attention to milk, cheese and wines. The experts, however, remarks the New York Telegram, have not yet advanced to the point where they can define the exact stage at which an egg passes, as it were, from the sublime to the ridiculous.

Both Treacherous and False.

The explosion of that Galesburg woman's false teeth marks the advent of a new terror. To their well-known falsity such teeth have begun to add treachery.

Crookston Times: Commissioner Ben Clements has tired of seeing the court drink from the old tin pitcher heretofore provided by the county for court uses and has presented Judge Watts with a handsome cut glass water pitcher and set of glasses to be used in the "inner circle" during court sessions. However, he threatens to keep the new set on his own desk for fear the bailiffs will break the glasses.

Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Toupin expect to leave the first week in June, for an extended trip through the west, and will spend a month or six weeks looking over that part of our great country. They will visit old-time friends at North Yakima, Washington, spend some little time taking in the sights of the Portland exposition, and visit all the large cities and points of interest in that section of the world. The trip promises to be highly enjoyable, and Mr. and Mrs. Toupin are looking forward to it with a great deal of pleasure.

The Gazette this week received a letter from B. Sivigny, who left several weeks ago for Washington. Mr. Sivigny reports himself and wife as enjoying themselves immensely, and says that they are both much in love with that country. They are now at Tacoma, where Mr. Sivigny is working at his trade, and expect to spend a greater part of the summer there. They have bought a neat little house and two lots in that city and while there will enjoy themselves. Mr. Sivigny sends his regards to the Red Lake Falls people.

Pat Sullivan, the well known lumberman, has spent several days of this week here. Mr. Sullivan has a log drive at Cook's Rapids, up the Red Lake river, which he is taking to Grand Forks for the mill there. The drive is a small one, and as soon as he gets it down to its destination he will take a big crew of drivers to the lake and start the big summer drive. Mr. Sullivan is having trouble in getting the logs to run this year on account of the low head of water in the Red Lake river, and says that unless the spring rains come to help out, that the big drive will be slow in reaching its destination.

According to the reports of Maple Lake enthusiasts, the ice has all gone out of the pretty stretch of water and from this time on rowboats and launches which have undergone a lengthy period of rest in their houses will be in commission. The leaving of the ice this year is earlier than for some time but is accounted for by the early spring rains. During the past week the sunshine has also had much to do with the matter. Maple Lake property owners are already making arrangements for the summer season, which promises to be a lively one and many cottages will be opened during the coming ten days.

They will return to Thief River for about six weeks, when they will leave for Syria where Mr. Nicol will take up the new work. Rev. Nicol is one of the ablest young divines in this part of the state, and has many friends both here and at Thief River who will wish him success in both the undertakings he contemplates.

MONTAGUE NAMED.

Congressman Steenerson Recommends Him For Register.

Last week the four years of the second term of Sylvester Peterson as register of the United States land office came to a close and, as a result, Congressman Steenerson has recommended that Judge R. J. Montague be named as his successor. The appointment will have to be made by President Roosevelt and it will probably not be done until he returns from the west. It may be managed before his return. In that event the judge will take his new office about May 15, not earlier, but it is probable that it will be two months.

Receiver A. F. George will probably be in the office for some months His term expires in June, but as yet Congressman Steenerson has received no application for the job. It is rumored that John Peterson, of McIntosh, will be the favored man.

NEW BRIDGE ORDERED.

Council Asks For Bids For Bridge Across Clearwater.

At a special meeting of the city council last week, it was decided to advertise for bids for the construction of a bridge over the Clearwater river on Bottineau avenue, to replace the old one carried away by the ice last year, and the notice asking for bids for the construction of the structure will be found in the council proceedings in today's Gazette.

The new bridge will be similar to the one formerly at that spot except that it will be higher and more substantially built. The people of that part of the city north of the Clearwater have been put to a great deal of inconvenience since the old bridge was carried away, and while a foot bridge was provided, teams were obliged to drive way around by the Main street bridge and through the north side to and fro from town. The new improvement will be appreciated by all, no doubt.

The present membership of the Society is composed of 3000 persons who were in the state on or before May 11, 1858. 208 new members have joined this year, and 125 paid assessment. It is expected a large number will attend this meeting and many new members will enroll. Irrigation in the Milk River Valley.

Montana is coming in for a big share of the general prosperity of the country, and it will only be a few short years when she will rank with any of the Northwestern states in agricultural greatness. The recent act of the Interior Department of the United States in setting aside $1,000,000 toward reclaiming three or four hundred thousand acres in the Milk River Valley is but a beginning of a much vaster development of this section as the needs grow apace. Already the agricultural worth of this to be famous valley has been adequately demonstrated in the results which have followed the irrigation works already established. It has been successfully proven that all kinds of agricultural products grow in great abundance wherever irrigation is used. The soil is naturally rich and needs only moisture to make it yield prolifically. The Great Northern Railway furnishes adequate transportation facilities, its main line practically cutting the valley in two. The fact that the Government has decided to begin immediate operations will prove a great incentive to the people of that section who have always believed in the future of their country and will open to settlement a vast area of rich land to the home-seeker and investor.

SPECIAL COURT TERM

Judge Watts And Stenographer Lohn To Be Here For Special Session On Tuesday, May 16.

Judge William Watts and Court Stenographer Lohn will be here a week from next Tuesday, the 16th inst., at which time a special term of the district court for Red Lake county will be held at the court house here.

At the recent regular session of court here there were a large number of court cases that were not ready for trial, and in order to accommodate the parties interested Judge Watts consented to hold a special term this month. There are some eight or ten cases to be tried at the special session and it is likely that the Judge will be here nearly a week.

From here he intends to go to Lambert to hold a brief court session for the trial of a case out there, the parties interested being unable to get in town for the special session.

Plan Big Celebration.

Crookston is planning on a big time at their celebration there Wednesday, May 17,—the Norwegian Fourth of July—and are flooding the country with advertising matter relative to the program prepared. Good music and speaking have been arranged for, and other attractions, among them being a ball game between the Grand Forks and Crookston Northern League teams, will be furnished. The railroads are making special rates, and it is likely that a big crowd will be in attendance.

CREAMERY IS RUNNING

Buttermaking Plant Of Red Lake Falls Creamery Association Commences Operations Monday.

The Red Lake Falls creamery started on its season's run Monday morning of this week, with H. A. Blaisdell in charge as manager and buttermaker, and from present indications the plant will have one of the most successful runs in its history.

The farmers in the neighborhood have promised their united support this year, and with it there can be no question as to the success of the undertaking.

Mr. Blaisdell comes recommended as one of the best buttermakers in the state, and under his management the creamery will without doubt prove a profitable establishment.

Fire Bug At Mentor.

Mentor, the little Polk county city which recently went dry at the spring election, has a firebug scare. It is alleged that certain residents of that place have become sore at certain other people in the village and have threatened to burn the town to get even.

Last Saturday night the church was discovered on fire by a couple of young people who were coming home from a dance and after the flames had been quenched by the fire department it was found that the fire was of incendiary origin. Hay had been strewn underneath the structure and lighted.

Watchmen have been stationed to guard the village during the dark hours and residents of Mentor state that there is a strong sentiment in favor of white cap methods with the miscreants if the evil work is continued. It is believed that the recent election results have something to do with the fires.

SUMMER SCHOOL HERE

Superintendent McAnulty Receives Notice That Summer Training School Will Be Held Here In July.

Superintendent of Schools H. T. McAnulty received word last Thursday that a session of summer school would be held in Red Lake Falls this year, commencing July 5 and continuing until August 2. Prof. C. S. Yeager, of Fosston, will be conductor and Adolph J. Olson and Mrs. W. A. McIntyre instructors.

The school board here has tendered the teachers the use of the Lafayette building and library, and superintendent McAnulty looks for a record breaking attendance. The school will be conducted along the usual lines, and as Mr. Yeager is considered one of the ablest conductors in the state there is no doubt but what it will result in much good to the teachers of the county. Following the summer school will come the state teachers' examinations, the dates being set for August 3, 4 and 5, and the teachers will have an opportunity of taking these examinations without an extra trip here.

While Red Lake county was not entitled to a summer school this year, Superintendent McAnulty prepared a petition signed by some eighty teachers and forwarded it to the State Superintendent, and also enlisted the aid of Representative Simons, and those interested feel highly gratified that their efforts have been rewarded.

Particulars in regard to the work will be printed later.

WILL GET NEW SUITS.

Fire Department Determined To Make Showing at Blackduck.

At a recent meeting of the fire department the boys decided to order new suits for the members to wear at the tournament, at Blackduck in June, and it is likely that they will at once negotiate with a leading uniform house for the purchase of the outfits. A large prize is offered by the tournament officers for the department making the best appearance in the parade, and the boys here intend to make an attempt at securing the honors.

The running team have received their running shoes and are putting in some hard practice every night, so that by the time the tournament comes off they will be in the best of shape, and will undoubtedly give a creditable accounting of themselves.

Red Lake Falls will send a large delegation to Blackduck in June, and the fire department and band promise to make an excellent advertisement for the best town in the valley.

TEACHERS MEET FRIDAY

Spelling Contest And Other Interesting Features Arranged For Meeting At St. Hilaire.

The regular meeting of the Red Lake County Teachers' Protective association will be held at St. Hilaire tomorrow and Saturday, and indications are that an unusually large number of people will attend

The program is decidedly interesting, and will prove instructive to both the teachers and public. Friday morning a business session of the association will be held from 10:30 to noon. In the afternoon a spelling contest open to the rural schools of the county will be held, and this feature is one that has been eagerly looked forward to by the pupils all over the county. Appropriate banners will be awarded the individual winner and the school represented, and these will be retained until wrested from them in future contests.

The leading feature of the meeting is booked for Friday evening, when President Weld, of the Moorhead Normal school, will deliver an address on "The Relation Our Rural Schools Bear To Higher Education." Mr. Weld is one of the brainiest educators in the Northwest, and people from all over the county should make it a point to listen to his talk.

Saturday morning's program comprises appropriate music and papers and a discussion on teachers' wages, rural school consolidation and ventilation. This will be participated in by the members of the association and officers of the various school boards of the county, and should prove very interesting and instructive.

The afternoon session will consist of recitations and a question box and round table talk, which will close the meeting.

School officers, teachers and the public in general are invited to turn out, and the meeting should prove a decided success from every standpoint.

POSTPONED ONCE MORE

Hearing In County Seat Removal Petition Case Put Off For Ten Days More To Allow Time.

The hearing on the temporary injunction restraining Auditor Ford from filing the Thief River Falls removal petition, was held at Crookston yesterday, and at the request of Attorney Grady, for Red Lake Falls, an adjournment was taken for ten days.

Thief River Falls filed her answer to the complaint only yesterday; and the attorneys asked for a short stay in order to get their reply in proper shape.

The case will be on again on the 13th inst.

THE SILENT DETECTIVE

Senior Class of Red Lake Falls High School To Put On Play Friday Evening of This Week.

The Senior Class of the Red Lake Falls high school will present that interesting drama, "The Silent Detective" at the Metropolitan opera house Friday evening of this week, and a large crowd of people should turn out to witness their efforts.

The "detective" of the play is not one of the dime novel deep and dark villains, who kills everybody in sight, but is a short poem written by Mrs. Susan Wilkins and appears in the Springtown, News.

The cast of characters is as follows:

Marcia Gray	Iza Tibbetts
Josephine Howells	Clara Marchand
Nellie Gray	Blanche Berthiaume
Mrs. Howells	Mayme Linnihan
Sarah Chapman	Rose Sattor
Susan Wilkins	Lillian Nauman
Chloe	Margaret Kaus
Mr. Gray Bert Hawley	Drow Marshall
Fred Howells	Ralph Healy
Dr. Alcott	Harry Garceau
Jerry Wilkins	Mike Connoughty

The play lasts nearly three hours, and is full of comedy and tradgedy. It requires a great deal of good acting on the part of the characters, and will be a rare treat. The prices are 15c, 25c and 35c, and as the proceeds go to help pay graduating expenses, which are heavy this year, the young folks should be given hearty support.

CASEY A BENEDICT.

Popular Lumberman Steals A March On His Friends.

The following local item from the Crookston Journal, refers to a former Red Lake Falls boy, J. A. Casey, and one who can count friends in every family in this city. Casey was always supposed to be immune from the attacks of Cupid, and his friends here will be agreeably surprised and pleased to learn of the all important step he has taken, and will join with the Gazette in wishing the happy couple unbounded success and happiness. The Journal says: "The many friends of J. A. Casey, the genial manager of the Robertson Lumber Co., were surprised in hearing of his marrirge a short time ago which has been kept a secret up to this time. He was married at Dubuque, Iowa, to Miss Louise Eberline of that city, arriving here after a short wedding trip on Wednesday last. They have taken apartments at the Commercial hotel. Since the affair leaked out Mr. Casey has been receiving numerous congratulations."

Purchase Legal

Judge Watts Hands Down His Decision in Case of Englestad vs. Board of County Commissioners.

Judge Watts yesterday handed in his decision in the case of Peter Englstad vs. the Board of County Commissioners of Red Lake county, which was tried at the recent term of court here, in which Englestad asked for a permanent injunction restraining the treasurer from paying the warrants for the purchase of the Buse property in this city.

In his decision Judge Watts denies the motion and declares that the purchase of the property was a legal transaction, and that as such the warrants issued are payable. This ends for all time the question of the court house property, and should be a strong point with the voters of the county why the county seat should not be moved. The county now owns their own court house and jail property here, and have them practically paid for so that there is absolutely no reason why the court house should be moved.

The Thief River gang who done so much talking about the illegality of the transaction, will now quietly crawl in their holes to repose peacefully until such time as they see a chance to graft the innocent public again.

The people are long since next to the skin game attempted by this unscrupulous bunch up stream and are paying no more attention to their squeals.

Objets of the Red River Valley Immigration Association..

From The Roseau Region

It may be thet some of our farmer friends and others do not quite realize the scope of the work undertaken by the recently organized Red River Valley Immigration Association. As we have pointed out in previous issue there has for years been a systematic effort made by North Dakota and other northwestern states to induce settlers to take up land, but Minnesota has been backward in this regard. The special advantages of northern Minnesota has not, until recently, been advertised. The six counties forming the northern part, viz: Roseau, Kittson, Marshall, Polk, Norman and Red Lake offer inducements such as cannot be found elsewhere in the state and as a place in which to build homes and enjoy life; no other state in the union can offer anything better. Roseau county is the peer of any of them in fect it is right here we believe the most desirable locations are to be found both from a business and agricultural viewpoint. As lands in the older counties is high priced, Roseau county can offer lands at much lower prices and so has a material advantage in this respect. Its soil is the equal of any in the northern part of the state both for stock raising and agriculture and will no doubt be able to secure its share of desirable settlers within its borders.

The Red River Valley Immigration Association will continue its labors to drawing settlers hitherward, There is to be a concerted effort to this end, and with an earnest body of men in each county acting as a general committee the work has already assumed large proportions. Advertising by pamphlet will be done on an immense scale, some 150 000 pamphlets of descriptive matter will be published and scattered broadcast thru Iowa, Wisconsin, Illinois, Michigan and other localities and real hard work is to be done along that line,

The association received cordial and generous support from the Great Northern and Soo roads. The county committees will furnish advertising matter and the state has offered to aid with funds from the state immigration bureau. The railroad company has offered to look after the distribution. This will involve an expenditure of some thousands of dollars. The G. N. has also agreed to furnish the association a car for the transportation of exhibits to the Minnesota state fair and to fairs in other states free of charge. Roseau county will furnish some of the best exhibits at fairs this summer ever produced from the northern part of the state. Arrangements will be made to have samples of everything grown here on exhibition, and right here is a splendid opportunity for our farmers to show what they can grow.

All this we are getting from the railroads and there is one other matter. The roads offer a reduced fare of one half to all bona fide land seekers along their lines on production of a certificate from the secretary of the Red River Valley Association. These certificates will be issued to any land or homeseeker from other parts and to all who take up land as well. The privilege is not confined to land men or any other class, all bona fide land or homeseekers may avail themselves of the reduced rate.

The formation of this association is something that permits every farmer to become a committee of one to advance the interests of the county. The same is true of business and professional men. It should be the pride of every citizen to help make his home the best home, his farm the best farm, his stock the fattest and sleekest and his county in general the most prosperous and therefore progressive.

We may all assist in the good work, we all should and it is a poor man indeed who has not a desire to help build up his community along right lines.

Advertise your county, advertise it every opportunity you have, and make opportunities.

Sivertson Tells of Crop Conditions.

"Two inches of snow over the entire valley at the present time, if accompanied by severely cold weather, would be one of the best things possible for the new crop of grain," said S. M. Sivertson, the Red Lake Falls the present time," he said, "and the arrival of a small snow storm would provide the moisture for germination and growth which is at the present time lacking. Barley and oats have not yet not been sown in any large quantities but there is still a great abundance of time in which to get both grains into the field. The spring this year I consider as one of the earliest and most satisfactory from all standpoints in a great many years."

Mr. Sivertson gets about the valley about as much as any other individual in the northern section of the state and is in a position to know what he is talking about. Having practically all of the spring wheat seeding done by the 29th of April is an unusual record for this section, however.

Chills or excessive heat may either one be responsible for the bowel trouble in chicks.

A liberal use of whitewash on walls and coal oil about roosts and nests will

When fowls get tired of large grain and will not work for it, try smaller seeds. A gill of millet seed scattered in litter will induce them to search a whole day. Give the sharp eyed biddies a chance at the barn floor rubbish, and so much clover and grass seed will not be wasted.

Goslings must not be hatched too early and should be kept off ponds until well feathered as the down is no protection from cold water. Not till warm weather and they are feathered should they be allowed to sport on the water. Overlapping, oily plumage is a sort of armor, Feed them on corn meal, animal meal and ground oats, moistened three times a day and get them onto grass as soon as possible.

The fellow who raises a lot of mongrels can never expect to get beyond the county store bargain counter. Here he dumps his few little scrubs in exchange for goods and homeward wends his weary way. The storekeeper gathers a strange assortment of poor, half starved fowls of every age, and ships them to his commission merchant, thankful if half reach their destination alive and become ontwhole. Buford-Trenton Irrigation Projects.

A new irrigation project which promises much for the Northwestern the Buford-Trenton Reclamation project. The United States Government has set aside $550,000 for this work and the active operations will begin inside of sixty days. When this work is completed some 18,000 acres of now arid land will be reclaimed and the Western part of North Dakota will be as attractive as the great valley of the Red River and the productive lands of the Mouse River Loup, It is asserted that the proposed dam and reservoir will hold between 20,000 and 25,000 acre feet of water and the proposed canals will run north and south of the line of the Great Northern Railway to a point about three miles east of Trenton, North Dakota, from near Buford, North Dakota, on the extreme western border of North Dakota. This is but the beginning of the extensive irrigaton projects which have been planned by the Government and individuals in Western Dakota and Northeastern Montana, which, together with the Milk River Irrigation project, will reclaim thousands of acres for settlement for agricultural purposes which have laid barren for years, an offer and opportunity for the homeless of the East to secure homes of their own. The fact that good agricultural Government land is becoming scarcer and scarcer makes these irrigation projects of great interest to the homeseeker and investor.

Millionaire's Poor Stomach.

The worn-out stomach of the over-fed millionaire is often paraded in the public prints as a horrible example of the evils attendant on the possession of great wealth. But millionaires are not the only ones who are afflicted with bad stomachs. The proportion is far greater among the toilers. Dyspepsia and indigestion are rampant among these people, and they suffer far worse tortures than the millionaire unless they avail themselves of a standard medicine like Green's August Flower, which has been a favorite household remedy for all stomach troubles for over thirty-five years. August Flower rouses the torpid liver, thus creating appetite and insuring perfect digestion. It tones and vitalizes the entire system and makes life worth living, no matter what your station. GOLDEN NUGGETS FOR SALLOW PEOPLE

TROOPS SHOOT MANY

HUNDRED PERSONS KILLED OR WOUNDED AT WARSAW, RUSSIAN POLAND.

Attack of the Soldiers Declared to Be Wholly Unprovoked and Contrary to Orders to Act With Moderation. Aroused Populace Retaliates by Resorting to the Use of Bombs and Firearms.

Warsaw, May 2.—Nearly 100 persons were killed or wounded in disturbances in various quarters of Warsaw during the day. The troops apparently were uncontrollable and violated all orders to act with moderation. They fired into crowds of demonstrators, and workmen in retaliation resorted to the use of firearms and bombs. Many women and children are among the dead and dying. What approaches a reign of terror now exists, the city presents a most gloomy aspect and the temper of the entire community augers ill.

No untoward incident was reported until afternoon. The first disturbances occurred between 1 and 2 o'clock, when a procession of several thousand workmen carrying red flags marched along Zelazna street. The demonstration was quite orderly and proceeded without molestation for some distance. Suddenly several squadrons of Uhlans appeared, but without interfering with the procession, and took up a position along the sidewalks while the workmen passed through the lines. Then a company of infantry approached from the front and immediately the cavalry charged into the procession, driving it with the flat of their swords into a disorganized mass. When the cavalry withdrew the infantry fired a volley, whereupon the demonstrators turned and fled. The infantry continued to discharge volleys into the retreating, shrieking multitude. Thirty-one persons were killed and many wounded, and of the latter it is believed that fifteen will die.

Shooting Wholly Unprovoked.

The shooting is described as having been quite unprovoked. It has aroused the most intense indignation among all classes in Warsaw. Many of those who were killed or wounded were shot in the back, showing that they were running away when they were struck.

Another terrible scene was enacted at 5 o'clock p. m. at the corner of Ziota and Sosnore streets, when workmen fired from behind a wall at a patrol, which immediately opened fire on the passing crowds, killing or wounding twenty persons.

The first bomb throwing occurred at 9:35 p. m. when a bomb was thrown into a Cossack patrol near the Vienna station. Three Cossacks and one policeman were killed and two women who were leaving the station at the time were severely injured by the explosion of the bomb. Cossacks and infantry fired a number of volleys and it is reported that numbers of persons were killed or wounded. Troops surround the whole neighborhood. It has been impossible up to the present time to secure accurate information as to the casualties in this affair.

At 1:45 p. m. disturbances broke out at the Zombowska gate of the suburb of Praga, across the Vistula river. A great crowd had assembled there, threatening the troops, when hussars fired upon the crowd and killed four and wounded many others. In Jerosolini street a man fired into a patrol from the roof of a house, but without result.

PERFECT ORDER PREVAILED.

Outside of Poland No Disorders Occurred in Russian Territory.

St. Petersburg, May 2.—Aside from the expected May day disorders in Poland, where revolutionary parades led to sanguinary encounters with the police and troops in Warsaw, Lodz and other industrial centers, perfect order prevailed Monday throughout Russia. There was no sign even of a desire to stir up trouble, indicating the baselessness of rumors that had been current for some time of plans of rioting and pillage on the second day of the Easter holidays.

NOW OFF PORT DAYET

ROJESTVENSKY'S FLEET OF WARSHIPS NOT FAR FROM KAMRANH BAY.

Saigon, French Cochin-China, May 1.—The Russian squadron is lying off Port Dayet, forty miles north of Kamranh bay, and in Biuhkeng bay (near Kamranh bay), outside of territorial waters. Russian, German and British transports are off Cape St. James, near Saigon, and in the Saigon river.

The French naval division has been mobilized to preserve neutrality in French waters.

HOCH JURY COMPLETED.

Alleged "Bluebeard" Well Satisfied With Men Selected.

Chicago, May 1.—The jury in the case of Johann Hoch, the alleged "bluebeard," who is on trial charged with wife murder, was completed during the day.

After the jury had been accepted and sworn in Hoch turned with a smile to the reporters and said:

"That jury is fine."

OWNERSHIP OF THE HAMMER.

Doubtful If Prosecution Can Fasten It Upon Dr. Koch.

Mankato, Minn., May 2.—In view of the evidence presented in the Koch trial during the day it is doubtful if the state will be able to prove conclusively that the hammer found near the murdered body of Dr. L. A. Gebhard was one owned by the young dentist who is charged with the crime.

Heretofore the evidence, with the exception of that of Mrs. Kars, has tended to prove that the hammer was owned by the Koch family, but Dr. G. F. Renieke, whose office adjoined Dr. Gebhard's, admitted on the stand during the day that he identified the hammer at the coroner's inquest as one belonging to Dr. Gebhard. Dr. Renieke also stated while on the stand that Asa P. Brooks, the newspaper man whose office is below the former dental rooms of Dr. Gebhard, and who is the only witness who obtained full view of the murderer, said on the night of the murder that the blood-stained hammer with which the murderer had felled his victim was one belonging to Dr. Gebhard. It is understood that Asa P. Brooks will repeat this statement when he is called to take the witness stand, and it seems doubtful that the prosecution will be able to lay any stress upon the identity of the hammer.

STRIKERS GROW UGLY

ATTACKS ON NONUNION MEN AT CHICAGO MORE OPEN AND VICIOUS.

Chicago, May 2.—Conditions in the teamsters' strike were worse during the day than at any preceding time. The strikers were in a more ugly mood, the rioting was more open and vicious and the attacks on nonunion men more frequent and daring. The chief cause of the increased belligerency on the part of the strikers and their sympathizers is thought to be that the employers' association has brought 1,500 strike breakers to this city and more are said to be on their way and will arrive here within twelve hours. These men will receive full pay of union men and it has been guaranteed that their places will be permanent. Among them are 200 farmer boys from all the surrounding states, who have volunteered their services and sought positions as drivers.

DROP IN MAY WHEAT

FURTHER DECLINE IN PRICE OF THAT OPTION ON THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Chicago, April 27.—Zero seemed for a time during the day to be the goal of May wheat. Under renewed liquidation the price of the option broke 4¼ cents a bushel. The market closed the previous night at 91¼, opened at 88½ to 90 and sold down to 87 cents. The market was extremely nervous and after rebounding to 89 cents dropped again to 87 cents.

At 87 cents the price reached the lowest point of the day, which was about 35 cents under the highest mark reached during the recent bull campaign and nearly 20 cents under the price where the heavy selling of the John W. Gates holdings began a week ago.

BOWEN CALLED HOME

MUST EXPLAIN CHARGES AFFECTING ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF STATE LOOMIS.

Washington, April 29.—Secretary Taft has received instructions from the president to call Minister Bowen, now at Caracas, to Washington; also to send Mr. Russell, now minister to Colombia, to Caracas, and Mr. Barrett, now minister at Panama, to Colombia.

It is stated that if Mr. Bowen's action relative to the charges affecting Assistant Secretary Loomis are not subject to criticism it is the president's purpose to send him as minister to Chile and then probably as ambassador to Brazil.

TRIAL NEARING THE END.

Counsel for Nan Patterson Will Offer No Evidence.

New York, April 29.—The prosecution and defense have rested the case of Nan Patterson, the former actress accused of murdering Caesar Young almost a year ago.

Attorney Reilly, of counsel for Miss Patterson, notified the prosecution that his side would submit no defense and would rest on the contention that the state had failed to make out any case against the defendant.

DEATH OF FITZHUGH LEE.

Noted Virginian Succumbs to Attack of Apoplexy.

Washington, April 29.—General Fitzhugh Lee, U. S. A., retired, and one of Virginia's foremost sons, died at the Providence hospital here from an attack of apoplexy which he suffered on a train while en route from Boston to Washington.

General Lee was born at Clermont, Fairfax county, Va., Nov. 19, 1835.

TORNADO HITS TEXAS

MUCH LOSS OF LIFE AND HEAVY DAMAGE TO PROPERTY IN VICINITY OF LAREDO.

Storm Causes Great Havoc, Twenty-one Persons Being Killed and Scores of Others Injured—Adobe Houses of the Poorer Classes and the Magnificent Business Blocks Alike Wrecked by the Terrific Force of the Wind.

Laredo, Tex., May 1.—Twenty-one people dead, scores more injured, many rendered homeless and great damage to property, sums up briefly the result of a tornado which during the night tore through Laredo and New Laredo, across the Rio Grande. Rumors of others killed in nearby places are current, but lack confirmation.

People were crushed to death by the falling of the heavy walls of adobe houses. Trees, fences, telegraph and telephone poles, corrugated roofs, chimneys, wells and debris of all imaginable kinds strew the streets.

Houses have been turned into hospitals. Physicians are busy attending to the injured and it is thought no additional deaths will result. Dr. Hamilton of the United States marine hospital service has placed 150 tents with equipment at the disposal of the homeless.

The property damage is heavy. Not one of the group of magnificent buildings of the city escaped damage. How any one quartered in the various institutions escaped is considered miraculous, as the walls were totally demolished.

THIRTEEN ENTOMBED

OKLAHOMA MINERS ARE BURIED BY A TERRIFIC EXPLOSION OF DYNAMITE.

Wilburton, Okla., May 1.—Thirteen miners were entombed and probably killed by an explosion early in the day in the Missouri, Kansas and Texas Coal company's mine No. 19. No bodies have been recovered.

The men went into the shaft at midnight Saturday night. Foreman Ray of the shift that left the mine at that hour states that the mine was in good condition and a gas explosion was hardly possible. His shift left a shot hanging which the new shift may have fired. It is suggested, from the force of the explosion, which could be heard for miles around and which tore heavy timbers aside and piled tons of dirt into the shaft, that a bad shot had set off some dynamite which had been stored conveniently for work.

ALL BADLY MANGLED

TEN MINERS KILLED BY FALLING CAGE IN A SHAFT AT WILKESBARRE, PA.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., April 27.—Ten miners were instantly crushed to death during the day at the Conyngham mine of the Delaware and Hudson company located in the northern part of the city. The men were being lowered into the mine and when 360 feet from the surface the rope broke and the cage fell to the bottom of the shaft, a distance of 400 feet. A rescuing party was at once organized. The bodies of the men were found at the bottom of the shaft beneath a mess of debris. They were terribly mangled.

TROUBLE IS AVOIDED.

Syndicate to Take Over Union Pacific Holdings of Securities Stock.

New York, May 2.—Possibility of trouble between the Great Northern and Union Pacific interests have been avoided, according to Wall street reports, by the formation of a syndicate to take over the Union Pacific's holding of Northern Securities company stock. According to the report the syndicate is under the leadership of the First National bank of New York and the price to be paid is $150 per share. In addition to taking over the stock the syndicate is to guarantee that encroachments will not be made in Union Pacific territory by the Northern Pacific or Great Northern.

President Not Indisposed.

Glenwood Springs, Colo., April 29.—Rumors of a persistent character are coming continually from the vicinity of West Divide creek that the president is ill in his camp. The reports are denied by Secretary Loeb and telephone messages to the ranch of W. L. Smith, two miles from camp, are to the effect that the president is resting, but is not indisposed.

Engineer Killed in Iowa Wreck.

Ottumwa, Ia., May 1.—The Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Southwest limited train was wrecked here during the day. Engineer Harry T. Dikes was killed and Fireman Claude E. Warren injured. The engine climbed the rail on a curve and was ditched and two sleeping cars derailed.

CAN YOU BETTER YOURSELF?

The following able editorial from the Princeton Union is right to the point, and is well worth pondering over. Many farmer leaves a country because they have poor luck a year or so, but the Union clearly illustrates the folly of such a nature. Here is what the Uuion says:

"Farmers, more than any other class, are influenced by poor crops and low prices to sell out, or trade out and get out, anything to change their condition though the change is often for the worse. These men who are so easily influenced by what they call hard times seem to labor under the delusion that times of depression never visit any locality except the one they happen to live in and they are ready to consign that particular spot to the demnition bow-wows and seek their fortunes in some favored clime where crops are never failures and prices always high; where merchants are philanthropists and commission men never ask for profits; where both ends always meet with a little to spare on right end. The question is, where is such a place to be found? Where can those who are dissatisfied with Minnesota go and better their condition? Would they go south? There the cotton crop last year was a failure and the frost has ruined the peach crop. Would they go east? There potatoes were cheap last year and New York apples sold here for $2.40 per barrel after several commissions and retail dealer's profit had been paid. The far west is no better, each industry has its hard features and farmers are no more successful than they are here. Nowhere are farmers more flourishing than in Minnesota. Times are hard just now, but we may reasonably expect them to change for the better. There may be good reasons for wishing to emigrate, a change of climate or business interests, but a year or two of poor crops or low prices will be certain to overtake the emigrant wherever he may go. If any man expects to keep out of way of business depression he may as well load his effects on a wagon, turn Gypsy and be prepared to migrate at any season."

Rural schools employing teachers of the first class are due to suffer a cut in their pro rata of the $100,000 which the state distributes annually as state to rural schools says the Roseau Region. It has just been discovered that a law was passed by the last legislature extending the aid to the extent of $50 each to schools employing teachers of the second class. The purpose was evidently to supplement this law with an appropriation sufficient to cover this extra aid, but in the rush at the close, the appropriation was forgotten and now the aid will have to come out of the $100,000 heretofore given to schools employing teachers of the first class. Last year the distribution was made on the basis of $120 for each school, but if they get $75 this year they will be lucky.

Nearly all the papers in the valley have stated during the past week that the salaries of Judge Watts, Judge Grindeland and all other district court judges have been raised from $3,500 to $4,200. This is a mistake as the bill providing for such an increase died a natural death. According to the Warren Sheaf Judge Grindeland thinks it is up to the newspapers that extended the false hopes to make up the deficiency.

Just now when the department stores are being roundly scored all over the country the following from the Minnetonka Record is pat: "Suppose that on Friday forenoon, just as father and mother are planning a trip to the big stores in Minneapolis for Saturday, they should receive a copy of this paper with your bargains attractively displayed in the advertising columns. Would it not have the effect of cooling their enthusiasm for city shopping and turn their attention toward home institutions? You have the goods and you can sell them as cheap as the department stores. There is just one possible reason why you do not get all the trade in your territory: the people do not know the facts. This paper is willing, among its many other useful and humanitarian missions, to diffuse this information to your possible customers at a reasonable cost to you."

DIDN'T KEEP THEIR WORD.

Insurance Company Refused To Reimburse Resident Out East.

A few weeks back, George Singer who lives just over the Red Lake county line near Gully, lost his home by fire. The residence was insured in the State Mutual Fire Insurance company, of St. Paul, and on application of Mr. Singer the company sent a special representative to adjust the loss. The following from the Gully Sunbeam tells the story complete, and should be a lesson to farmers to assure themselves that they are getting into good companies when they take out fire or other insurance:

"Geo. Singer returned from his reservation farm last Saturday on the request of one E. J. Lawlis, an adjuster for the State Mutual Fire Insurance Co., of St. Paul, who claimed that he had sent for him for the purpose of adjusting the loss by fire on his (Mr. Singer's) farm residence and store house, which was totally destroyed by fire here on March, 25th last, which accidentally caught fire by the explosion of a lamp. Had the company been collecting a premium on insurance the position would have been different, but when it came to adjusting a loss, it was a case of bluff and bulldozing from start to finish, by a man who claimed he was drawing a large salary from the company for doing that kind of work. He made no offer to adjust the loss, rebuild the house, or to compensate Mr. Singer for his loss, but when informed that the case could be carried to court, and allow a jury of twelve men to decide the case he laughed and made the following statement, "We don't take the decision of a jury but appeal to the supreme court, and we corporations control them." There was other vile and abusive language used by the Gentleman? in an attempt to bluff Mr. Singer out of any adjustment or settlement for his loss, but he did not succeed in bluffing or scaring any one to a perceivable extent, and left for Fosston, the same evening without accomplishing anything, except to injure the reputation of the company he represented.

On last Wednesdays mail Mr. Singer received the following letter from the company which we publish in full.

F. 50.703 St. Paul, Minn.,
Apr. 25, 1905.

Geo. Singer,
Gully, Minn.,

Dear Sir—This is to advise you that the State Mutual Fire Insurance Company, disclaims any and all liability arising from an alleged fire or otherwise by virtue of their policy No. F. 50703 for reasons that have been undoubtedly indicated to you by E. J. Lawlis, representative of this company.

Yours Respectfully,
L. C. Stebbins.

This transaction speaks for its self. Mr. Singer paid this company about $49.00 insurance and when he meets with a loss the company informs him that they are not indebted to him in any sum whatsoever. We use some space to fully explain this matter, as there is a large number of our subscribers who are doing business with this company and we have stated the facts as they are, so they will know the position they are in, if their property should be accidently destroyed by fire.

TEACHERS ALL HIRED

School Board Fills Vacancies In Teaching Corps At Meeting Monday Evening Of This Week.

The school board held a meeting at the office of Clerk Toupin Monday evening of this week, at which time the question of the vacancies remaining in the corps of instructors for the Red Lake Falls public schools was taken up, and applications for positions investigated, with the result that sufficient teachers were engaged to complete the list.

The new teachers chosen at Monday night's meeting were Miss Ella C. Hanson, of Crookston, as principal. Miss Hanson is a graduate of the University of Minnesota and is recommended as an able instructor. Miss Anna Runnells, of Hamline, was elected as science teacher, or assistant principal, and Miss Nellie M. Daggett, of Montgomery, as the the third teacher in the high school.

The board has decided to change the grading of the schools slightly and will have three teachers employed in the high school room hereafter instead of two. Prof. Chamberlain was instructed to hire a Normal graduate primary teacher for the Lafayette school, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Miss Vietz.

The teaching force, with the exception of one primary teacher, is now completed and will be as follows at the opening of school next fall:

Superintendent Edgar W. Chamberlain.

LAFAYETTE SCHOOL

Ella C. Hanson, principal; Anna Runnells, sciences; Nellie M. Daggett, Eliza M. Trudo, Bertha Norby, Mrs. J. J. Doe and Alice Caughlin.

ATTACK PROVED FATAL.

Mrs. J. B. Surprenault, of Terrebonne, Succumbs to Attack of Appoplexy.

Mrs. Olivine Surprenault, wife of J. B. Surprenault, of Terrebonne, died at her home in that town last Thursday evening, after an illness of ten days from an attack of appoplexy.

As mentioned in the Gazette at the time Mrs. Surprenault was stricken with appoplexy two weeks ago last Monday while leaving this city on her way home. She was brought back to the home of her brother, T. A. Crompe, here and medical aid summoned, with the result that she improved steadily until a week ago Wednesday it was thought that she had recovered sufficiently to be removed to her home in Terrebonne. She arrived there feeling exceptionally well and felt better Thursday until five o'clock, when she was taken with a second attack and died within twenty minutes, never gaining consciousness after being stricken.

Deceased was forty-seven years of age, and had been a resident of this county for the past twenty-one years. She has always enjoyed the best of health up to the time of the attack of the fatal disease, and her untimely death while just in the prime of life was a severe blow to the members of her family and their many friends.

The funeral was held Saturday morning from the Terrebonne Catholic church, an unusally large number of friends turning out to pay their last respects to a beloved neighbor and friend. The Lady Foresters, of this city, of which she was a member, attended in a body.

Deceased leaves a husband and seven children, her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Crompe, of Terrebonne, four sisters and one brother to mourn her loss, and the sympathy of the entire community goes out to them in this dark hour of grief.

Notice To Contractors.

Notice is hereby given that sealed bids will be received by the undersigned up to 10 o'clock May 20, 1905, for the material required and the erection of a certain school house in District No. 80, town of Terrebonne, Red Lake county, of which plans and specifications can be seen in the clerk's office in said township.

Bids will be opened at the clerk's office May 26, 1905. The board reserves the right to reject any or all bids.

Dated at Terrebonne, Minn., April 29, 1905.

COUNTY DADS MEET

Organize Some New Towns and School Districts On the Reservation and Attend To Other Matters.

The special meeting of the board of commissioners was called to order by Chairman Johnson Monday, and for a couple of days the board ground out county business.

The most important work before them was the organizing of six new school districts and several new townships on the reservation. The school districts are scattered around in various parts of the reservation and will be organized so as to commence work as soon as possible.

Township 154-41 was organized and named Clover Leaf, and will shortly elect officers and proceed to conduct itself as a Red Lake county town. Town 154-40, was also organized, but was not named. The unorganized part of Wyandotte was joined to that town a resolution was passed changing the name of Big Bend township to Smiley.

A number of applications for abatement of taxes were granted.

The auditor was authorized to place $1500 more insurance on the court house.

The sum of $250 was voted to assist the village of Plummer in building a bridge over the Clearwater.

Ingvald Huseby was granted an auctioneer's license.

A liquor license was granted to Hoken Johnson at Wylie.

Several towns were given aid for the road and bridge fund for road building purposes.

C. W. Nelson was given a license to operate a ferry between lots 5 and 8 in sec. 21-153-41 on the reservation near what is called "Skunktown." He was authorized to charge 25c for teams and single rigs, 15c for foot passenger across and back and 10c for single trips.

The usual grist of bills was allowed.

Climatic Cures.

The influence of climate conditions in the cure of consumption is very much overdrawn. The poor patient, and the rich patient, too, can do much better at home by proper attention to food digestion, and a regular use of German Syrup. Free expectoration in the morning is made certain by German Syrup, so is a good night's rest and the absence of that weakening cough and debilitating night sweat. Restless nights and the exhaustion due to coughing, the greatest danger and dread of the consumptive, can be prevented or stopped by taking German Syrup liberally and regularly. Should you be able to go to a warmer clime, you will find that of the thousands of consumptives there, the few who are benefited and regain strength are those who use German Syrup. Committee At Work On Charges Against Beltrami Officials.

The first session of the commission appointed by Governor Johnson to investigate the charges against Messrs. Loud, Sibley and Wright, was held at the Bemidji court house yesterday morning. The commission consists of W. A. McIntyre of Red Lake Falls, Cleveland Van Dyke, the governor's executive clerk, and G. M. Torrance, of Bemidji. Mr. McIntyre was elected chairman of the commission.

Mr. C. M. Osborn of St. Paul will be the official stenographer of the commission. R. A. Stone, assistant attorney general, appeared for the state, assisted by E. E. McDonald of Bemidji, while Chester McKusick appeared for F. O. Sibley and P. J. Russell for Wes Wright. Both attorneys objected to the charges made against Commissioners Sibley and Wright and moved that the cases against them be dismissed on the grounds that no specific charges had been made, that the charges were not sufficient to constitute a case and that sufficient time had not been allowed for the preparation of the defense. Chairman McIntyre announced the commission had no authority to rule upon the motion which will, however, be made a part of the record to be submitted to Governor Johnson.

Mr. Stone, for the state, announced that ample time would be allowed the accused officials to secure evidence and witnesses on every charge.

When the commission convened in the afternoon the matter of letting the county printing for the years 1903 and 1904 was taken up and the minutes of the board of county commissioners at which the printing was let for these years showed that the contract had been awarded to the Pioneer.

Millionaire's Poor Stomach.

The worn-out stomach of the over-fed millionaire is often paraded in the public prints as a horrible example of the evils attendant on the possession of great wealth. But millionaires are not the only ones who are afflicted with bad stomachs. The proportion is far greater among the toilers. Dyspepsia and indigestion are rampant among these people, and they suffer far worse tortures than the millionaire unless they avail themselves of a standard medicine like Green's August Flower, which has been a favorite household remedy for all stomach troubles for over thirty-five years. August Flower rouses the torpid liver, thus creating appetite and insuring perfect digestion. It tones and vitalizes the entire system and makes life worth living, no matter what your station. We Paid $100,000

For the American rights to Liquozone. We did this after testing the product for two years, through physicians and hospitals, after proving, in thousands of different cases, that Liquozone destroys the cause of any germ disease.

Liquozone has, for more than 20 years, been the constant subject of scientific and chemical research. It is not made by compounding drugs, nor with alcohol. Its virtues are derived solely from gas—largely oxygen gas—by a process requiring immense apparatus and 14 days' time. The result is a Liquid that does what oxygen does. It is a nerve food and blood food—the most helpful thing in the world to you. Its effects are exhilarating, vitalizing, purifying. Yet it is a germicide so certain that we publish on every bottle an offer of $1,000 for a disease germ that it cannot kill. The reason is that germs are vegetables; and Liquozone—like an excess of oxygen—is deadly to vegetal matter.

There lies the great value of Liquozone. It is the only way known to kill germs in the body without killing the tissue, too. Any drug that kills germs is a poison, and it cannot be taken internally. Every physician knows that medicine is almost helpless in any germ disease.

Germ Diseases.

These are the known germ diseases. All that medicine can do for these troubles is to help Nature overcome the germs, and such results are indirect and uncertain. Liquozone attacks the germs, wherever they are. And when the germs which cause a disease are destroyed, the disease must end, and forever. That is inevitable.

The funeral was held Monday of last week, nearly the entire police force and fire department of the city turning out to pay their last respects to an honored comrade and friend. Mr. Belair was a resident of Red Lake Falls for a few years some twenty-eight years ago, and had also made several trips here since then, being known to a great many of the old residents of the city. He leaves a wife and four children and several brothers and sisters to mourn his loss.

Climatic Cures.

The influence of climate conditions in the cure of consumption is very much overdrawn. The poor patient, and the rich patient, too, can do much better at home by proper attention to food digestion, and a regular use of German Syrup. Free expectoration in the morning is made certain by German Syrup, so is a good night's rest and the absence of that weakening cough and debilitating night sweat. Restless nights and the exhaustion due to coughing, the greatest danger and dread of the consumptive, can be prevented or stopped by taking German Syrup liberally and regularly. Should you be able to go to a warmer clime, you will find that of the thousands of consumptives there, the few who are benefited and regain strength are those who use German Syrup. Trial bottles, 25c; regular size, 75c. At all druggists. A. L. Reichert.

United States Steel corporation 5 per cent first mortgage bonds for $10,000,000 have been transferred to a board of trustees and steps will be taken at once to organize a corporation to receive the donation. BIGELOW NOW A BANKRUPT.

Former Milwaukee Bank President Has No Cash on Hand.

Milwaukee, April 28.—The latest step in the career of Frank G. Bigelow, the former bank president, who defaulted in the sum of about $1,500,000, is the filing of a petition in involuntary bankruptcy. The revised schedules show a total liability on the part of Mr. Bigelow of $3,277,000, of which $1,975,000 is wholly or in part secured. Of the remainder $1,110,000 is a secondary liability on notes and bills discounted in which Bigelow figured as endorser.

The filing of the schedules revealed the fact that Bigelow, who has been looked upon as a model of business sagacity, pursued decidedly loose methods in the transaction of his private business. He was not positive of the names of several of his creditors and had no memoranda with which to refresh his memory.

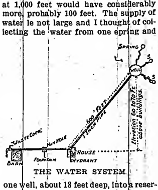
THE FARM WATER SUPPLY.

A Subject of Vital Importance to the Man Who Has a Large Dairy.

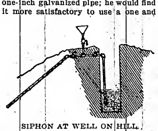
"I am thinking of gathering up some springs on hillside above my buildings and piping the water down to house and barn. I think of putting in self-watering devices for stock in barn and inside closet in house, with fountain in dooryard. About 600 feet from house I have a rise of 60 to 80 feet; at 1,000 feet would have considerably more, probably 100 feet. The supply of water is not large and I thought of collecting the water from one spring and one well, about 18 feet deep, into a reservoir, and from there conveying it to house and barn through one-inch galvanized iron pipe. In case well and spring would give out, I might drill well and put up wind wheel to pump into reservoir. How shall I go about it?"



THE WATER SYSTEM.

The above letter is from W. W. Gibson, a farmer of Lawrence county, Pennsylvania, to which the Ohio Farmer replies as follows:

A one-inch pipe under the circumstances stated will deliver from 12 to 15 gallons of water per minute. With small pipes of great length, friction greatly retards the flow, and your correspondent should not use less than one-inch galvanized pipe; he would find it more satisfactory to use a one and one-half-inch pipe. Assuming that he will use a one-inch pipe, the most important question for him to decide is whether he will need a reservoir or not. If he can collect water from different springs and get a flow equal to about the amount per minute named above, he will need no reservoir.



SIPHON AT WELL ON HILL.

Dig out the lower spring and put in two lengths of 36-inch sewer pipe. Then drill through just below the joint between them and connect the iron pipe. Place a screen over entrance to pipe. If a reservoir is needed, the size of it will depend largely upon the amount of water that is available and the amount of water that will be used. It is better to have supply enough to keep water running a good portion of the time. The pipe is then less liable to become clogged, will be cooler in summer, and less liable to freeze in winter.

Run the pipe as straight as possible from spring to buildings and without any abrupt turns. Lay it at least two feet deep so that it will remain cool in summer and keep from freezing in winter. T joints should be inserted wherever water is to be taken from the main pipe line. At the fountain there may be a manhole giving access to a stop-cock to shut water off from the fountain and a gate to let water out of fountain pipe in winter so as to avoid damage from freezing.

A waste-cock is put in at the barn so that, at times, the surplus water may be allowed to escape, and thus keep up more of a flow in the pipe than might otherwise be required. No filter will be needed.

In regard to drawing water from a well 18 feet deep: It could be siphoned out, but I should avoid this if possible, as air will sometimes collect in the siphon and water stop flowing. If a siphon is put in, at the highest point should be an opening with valve in order to facilitate filling the pipe with water, to get the flow started.

For Wrapping Butter.

Only the very best pure vegetable parchment paper should be used in wrapping butter. Inferior paper encourages the growth of mold and does not protect the butter. Much of the paper used is too light in weight. A ream of 500 sheets, measuring 50x12½ inches should weigh at least 40 pounds, and the same number of sheets 38x12½ inches should weigh not less than 30 pounds.

The Rattling Farm Wagon.

If your lumber wagon rattles take off the nuts, drive out the bolts and put a leather washer under the bolt head and under the nut or washer. Tell the boys and hired man not to drive so fast when the wagon is empty.

Old-Time Methods.

Every man who has given any thought to the subject knows that old-time methods will not apply to modern conditions. Every dairyman should keep this constantly in mind.

A SENSIBLE LAWN FOUNTAIN

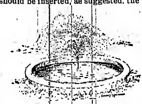
Suggestion for the Beautifying of the Grounds About the Farmhouse.

The general idea of a lawn fountain seems to be a vase-like affair standing up from the ground and looking generally inartistic. It is because of an unwillingness to have such an affair before one's house that many are deterred from having a fountain upon the lawn. It is possible, however, says the Country Gentleman, to have a simple, yet artistic, fountain that will not only prove attractive, but will be inexpensive.

Fig. 1 shows the method of construction. A circular space of the size desired is dug in the ground, to a point below the frost line. This is to be filled nearly to the surface of the ground with loose stones, wider at the bottom than at the top, that the frost may have no chance to "lift" on the outside. The supply pipe must be put in position as the stones are filled in, the diagram showing the position. Over the top of the loose stones place a layer of cement. Around the edge of the circular space lay up a little wall of stones, placing cement between them, and covering the outside, top and inside of this little wall completely with the cement.

HOW THE FOUNTAIN IS BUILT.

As this wall is made, a waste-pipe should be inserted, as suggested, the top of this being the limit to which the water can rise in the fountain. The top of the low wall should be nicely rounded and smoothed. The upper end of the supply-pipe should have a spray nozzle, so that a shower of spray may be sent up, to fall gracefully over into the water of the tank. The height to which the water will rise depends, of course, upon the force with which the water is pressed through the supply-pipe from its source. It also depends upon the nozzle. A very fine spray will not rise to the height of a coarser spray, or a solid stream of water. Much of the work of making such a fountain can be done by the owner of the place, in which case the only expense would be for a little cement and the iron pipe.



THE FOUNTAIN COMPLETED.

FERTILIZE THE GARDEN.

The Absolute Necessity of Enriching the Soil If Good Crops Are to Be Secured.

After you have given the time and the energy in spading and digging and hoeing and raking your garden spot into shape, have spent money for good seeds that you have carefully planted, you certainly expect to have a crop of nice, luscious vegetables, providing you have given the garden the proper cultivation. You will not have, though, if you do not feed the soil that is to feed the plants that are to grow into feed for you. Don't expect an impoverished soil to grow vegetables, says the Farmers' Review. That is one of the impossibilities. If you do not know it now you will find it out to your regret and cost if you try it. Give the garden the heaviest dressing of fertilizers of any spot on the farm. Use all the old, well-rotted manure that you have available and then add a liberal quantity of such of the commercial fertilizers as your soil most needs, and nearly all soils need all of the elements of fertility to grow vegetables to perfection. Buy of a reliable manufacturer some of his best complete vegetable manure and apply it at the rate of from 1,000 to 2,000 pounds per acre. It will cost something to do this, but the return that will be made to you in the crop will amply repay you for the expense.

RYE MAKES GOOD PASTURE

How One Farmer Manages to Get Good Feed for His Live Stock.

I draw the manure on the sod ground, plow and harrow well, then plant to corn and cultivate well, writes a New York farmer in the Farm and Home. The next spring I plow the corn, top-dress with stable manure and sow oats. As soon as the oats are off, plow and top-dress again, then sow to rye. In six weeks I have big feed and pasture the rye until it freezes.

The last of May I cut the rye as soon as it heads, and the stock like it and do well on it. In the spring I seed on the rye with equal parts of clover and timothy. I pasture this in the fall, and the rye will be headed out the second time.

I cut the grass for hay three years, and plow again and follow the same rotation. I manage a piece of land this way every year, have nice fall feed and never fail to have big crops. Last fall I got first and second premiums on my corn at our fair. My rye was very stout and five feet tall, the grass so stout that I could not cut it with a machine until I cleared a place for it to run.

Early War on Weeds.

The early killed is the easy killed weed and the weed that robs the crops the least. Proper bedding is essential in making richer manure, as well as increasing the bulk.

MY TEXAS.

Oh, if ever in your travels it is your good luck to go
Where midwinter blasts are tempered into winds that softly blow,
And the mocking bird is singing, swinging high and swinging low,
That's the land I'm always loving, loving so!

Where each fresh recurring season brings new blossoms in its train,
Where the sunshine is like nectar and there's glory in the rain,
Where pink roses shed their petals while the bushes bloom again,
That's the land I'm always loving, loving so!

Where blue violets are hiding 'neath the leaves the year around,
And each prospect is like music and the air is sweet with sound,
And forgetmenots are snuggling, wee blue stars against the ground,
That's the land I'm always loving, loving so!

Oh, you cannot help but know it! Its each voice will bid you stay!
You will know it by the sweetness of its every night and day!
You will know it by its memory when you have gone away!
That's the land I'm always loving, loving so!

On Their Honeymoon

Funny Things Seen by a Capitol Guide

"NEVER noticed such a big lot of doves as there are around here this year," was the observation of a capitol guide the other day.

"Doves?" inquired the man to whom the remark was made, involuntarily gazing up into the cornices to see if any of the white birds were visible.

"Yes, doves," repeated the guide. "Cooers, hand-claspers, ear-whisperers, eye-searchers, dark-corner hunters."

"Oh, you mean newly married people."

"Well, what did you think I meant?" said the guide. "I haven't seen anything like so many of them in all the 20 years I've been prowling around this building.

"I took a finely feathered pair of them around the building the other day. They were New York people, too, and you'd naturally have thought that living in that cold-blooded town would have put enough frappe in them to enable them to be chilly and haughty and self-contained when in the sight and hearing of a whole lot of other folks.

"But they weren't chilly and haughty with each other by the whole size of these grounds. They didn't mind the Little Brighteyes me, either. You'd have thought that I was the star pupil in a deaf, dumb and blind asylum if you had been around and seen and heard them. It was the most touching and tender case of love's middle-aged dream that ever I came into contact with.

"'Lucille, dream of my life,' said he, 'if you persist in standing in that cruel draft your little boy will go stark, staring mad! Of what possible value would your poor little bubbsy wubbey's life be to him if his 'ittle-bittle Lucille were to get pneumonia and be carried away up to the stars by the whitest angel that ever,' and so on—you can fill out the rest yourself, but that was the general line of escaping steam that the old boy let out.

"'Never 'oo mind, Oodzy-Woohzy,' she replied. 'Baby's not going to 'eave her teeny-weeny Bubbsy-boy,' and so on, until, say, I'd have given $98 to 've been alone in the woods for about a minute, so that I could bust loose and howl like a wild man of Borneo.

"They're not all cooers, though. I showed the scrappiest young couple around the other day that I ever nudged alongside of. There wasn't a coo in either of them, and yet I could tell by their make-up that they hadn't been married more than three days. You know the way they're rigged: Man with fearfully brand-new suit, hat, shoes, gloves and cane, and that wriggly, uncomfortable look that some fellows wear when all of their togs are right off the hook; and the girl, too, with everything new, from hat to spats, and looking as if she'd appreciate about ten minutes of a house-wrapper and slippers a whole lot.

"Well, this pair certainly carried the brittle chip on their shoulders. They seemed to be just a-hunting trouble with each other, and I came near spraining my neck looking dreamily up into the air while their scraps were in progress.

"It looked to me as if they'd got married on a bet or to get even with each other for something.

"'Let's go up to the dome,' suggested the girl.

"'Not much,' said the man. 'I'm too strong.'

"'Well, I'll go up alone, then,' said she, batting her eyes wickedly.

"'Not to-day you won't,' said he, with 'mean man' sticking out all over the way he said it.

"'Oh, I don't know,' said the girl, dreamily. 'Not that I haven't been up before a few times.'

"'Oh, you have, have you?' chopped the man. 'You never told me that, did you? Who with, I'd like to know?'

"'You don't know, do you?' said she, with one of those slow smiles some women use to work a man into state's prison with.

"Well, then they had it out some more, I'm a-telling you. I went off into a corner and pretended to be watching a spider weaving a web while the battle was on. Then I heard a gurgle or two and it was all right—for a while.

"About three minutes later I started them for the sub-basement to show them the machinery. The man made a little stumble on the dark steps, and he said 'd—!'

"'Do you know whom you are with, pray?' inquired the girl, stopping stock still.

"'Er—unfortunately, yes,' he replied, and I began to hunt around for another spider to take an interest in for a spell.

"'Oh, well, come along,' said the bride, after a pause. 'It is impossible for me not to reflect, however, that the last time I was here I was not compelled to listen to such language from—'

"'Look a-here,' broke in the groom, 'I want to know, and I want to know right now, who the confounded, blithering, Miss-Nancy idiot was that you traipsed around here with,' and so on, and I was reduced to the necessity of twirling the pedals of a bicycle that was tethered in the corridor for the five minutes or so that this mix-up lasted. I am wondering yet whether that pair hailed from a state where 'incompatibility of temperament' is a loophole for a breakaway in the high court of part-them-asunder.

"A few weeks ago I had a pair of British goo-gooers around who provided me with an exceedingly queer pain.

"They were making a tour of the world. I couldn't exactly figure how long they had been married, but they certainly were as affectionate a sketch team as ever I showed around. This sort of puzzled me, too, for I had always heard so much about the reserve of English people.

"But with these two it was 'Agnes, ma own,' and 'Algernon, me love,' from cellar to garret.

"Of course I walked about ten feet ahead of them to let them have room, but all the same they gave me that empty feeling.

"But I didn't start to tell you how much they loved each other, but how they disliked the United States. Neither of them could tolerate this country at all, and they gave everything at the capitol the joyous ha-ha from the minute they set foot in it.

"Now, I stood this patiently for quite a long while, but all the time I could feel the Indiana-American creeping through my system like a mountain cascade.

"They looked at the pictures on the walls.

"'How stoopid,' they said in unison.

"They looked at statuary.

"'What a Brummagem lot!' said they in one voice.

"It was the same all over the building. The whole works, from one wing to the other, got the laugh from them, till the spirit of '76 began to rattle around in me so hard that I could just barely hang on to myself.

IN DARK CORNERS.

"Finally, I got them around to the picture of the battle of Lake Erie, over on the senate side.

"'What a frightful daub!' they exclaimed together. 'What is it supposed to represent, gee-ide?'

"Well, say, this made me too hot to handle.

"'That,' said I, 'is considered an admirable work of art. It is also regarded as an accurate representation of the battle of Lake Erie. That battle, as you will of course recall, took place between the American and British fleets during the war of 1812 between Great Britain and the United States. And if any fleet on salt or fresh water was ever ker-soaked, smothered, jolted, hammered, torn in two, ripped up the back, hamstrung, keel-hauled, butchered to make a Roman holiday, and knocked into eighteen hundred and twelve different kinds of junk and kindling wood, it was the lime-juicer British fleet on that occasion, when Commodore Oliver Hazard Perry put it on and all over them!'

"Well, y'ought to 've seen their faces. I had never had a chance to twist the British lion's tail at such close range before, and under such justifiable circumstances, and just then it would have been all one to me had I been addressing the prince of Wales.

"'Fellow,' said the male Briton, indignantly, and he tossed me a two-bit piece. I let it lay where it fell, and walked off with a tip of the hat.

"I don't read the London Times, but I'll bet a can of tomatoes that that Britisher wrote to the London Times about the incident, and described the lack of proper subservience on the part of American gee-ides."—Washington Star.

AFRICAN HOSPITALITY.

Considered the Duty of Every Citizen to Entertain Strangers Without Compensation.

Hospitality may be considered as one of the characteristics of not only the Veia, but of the whole African race. It is considered the duty of every citizen to entertain strangers without the smallest compensation, writes the author of "Africa's Appeal to Christendom," in Century. Places of rest stand always open, and when these are found occupied by strangers, a man goes and tells his wife, who will send her servants with water for the strangers to wash their feet; for, as they wear no shoes, they naturally need such accommodation. Afterward rooms and cloth wrappers are given them, food is brought from all quarters, or they are invited to eat with the people. They continue to be so provided for, even if they stay months. Their garments are also washed and returned to them. On leaving, they generally make a small gift to the wife of the host, though not more than two or three cola nuts or two or three English pennies.

UNCLE SAM'S MEN TO WASH

Circular Issued by Shaw Requires Cleanliness of Government Employes on Road.

Washington, D. C.—Hereafter all persons traveling upon the public business by order of the secretary of the treasury will be expected to keep clean at the public expense. Hereafter cleanliness will be a charge upon the United States treasury employe.

The information as to the innovation is contained in a circular letter signed by Secretary Shaw and sent to all whom it may concern. After citing the new statute passed at the last session of congress, which says that only actual traveling expenses may be paid, it makes an enumeration of the items which may be included in an account. The new rule differs from the old one in only one particular. That particular is the addition of the words "reasonable allowance for baths."

Before the new circular was filed chiefs of division began discussing the question whether under the rule they will be permitted to approve hotel bills containing a charge for room and bath, or whether, in order to get a reasonable allowance for baths, the employe will have to swear that he went to the public bathroom and there did pay the sum of 25 or 50 cents, as the case may be. They also speculated as to whether the secretary will think it necessary that the traveler should be allowed the luxury of at least one bath per day.

The question whether it would be according to rule to have a room with bath arises from the fact that the strict letter of the rule appears to limit a hotel bill to $5 a day—"for board and lodging." There is no question in their minds but that a man may under the rules pay $5 a day for his lodging and his meals and 50 cents a day for baths taken in the public bathroom, but they are unable to decide whether a man may pay $5.25 a day to a hotel for the privilege of having a room with a bath attached.

ODD BASIS FOR HER SUIT.

Man Sits in Woman's Lap When Street Car Gives a Lurch—Wants $10,300.

Cincinnati.—Because a street car on which she was riding gave a sudden lurch and Theodore Wolking, a prominent business man of Latonia, quite unostentatiously sat down in her lap for an instant, Mrs. Martha Bunch, No. 2006 Madison avenue, Covington, the widow of the late Henry Bunch, wants damages in the sum of $10,300.

She claims that Wolking was neglecting his duty in failing to support himself by a street car strap.

The suit was filed by B. F. Graziana against the South Covington & Cincinnati Street Railway company and Wolking.

Mrs. Bunch alleges that she was on a car bound for Cincinnati, and that when the car reached the Covington entrance to the suspension bridge, by reason of negligence the car was allowed to round the curve at a high rate of speed, bringing up on the straight piece of track beyond with a sharp jerk.

The Plaintiff further alleges that Theodore Wolking was standing in front of her, and, not having taken the precaution to cling to a strap, was precipitated into her lap when the car swung around the curve.

She claims that by reason of this fact she suffered great mental and physical suffering.

If all marry but one she is to have the fee simple to all the property. If however, she marries, she is to be deprived of all interest in the property. In that event, the deed stipulates, "the whole of the property shall vest in either of them who shall be a widow." The young women are well known in social circles. They refuse to explain or discuss the matter.

CHEAP FARM GREENHOUSE.

How One May Be Constructed with Hotbed Sash by the Farmer Himself.

My experience with a greenhouse began with one 70 by 70 feet, and slowly grew till it took in 1¾ acre; this was on my father's place, writes a correspondent of the Rural New Yorker. At first we heated with hot air through large tile, but they would choke with soot and often crack with the heat, and that let smoke enough out to injure the crops. Next he heated with hot water in four-inch soil pipe, then with two-inch gas pipe for hot water, and later, when the houses were made twice as long, we changed to steam, because it would take water too long to make the trip with the houses 300 feet long. It is hardly possible for a farmer to make a small greenhouse pay if his time is worth anything unless he takes his pay out in satisfaction, because the opening and closing of the ventilating sash and attending the fire take more time than most folks think, and the smaller the house is the greater is the cost per square foot of roof in taking care of it. I would call them an expensive luxury for most farmers.

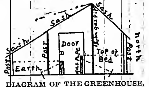

DIAGRAM OF THE GREENHOUSE.

Almost any man who has gumption enough to want a greenhouse could build one by using hotbed sash for the roof, supported by two rows of posts for the outside walls and two rows of gas pipe posts inside; they would cause less shade than wooden posts of equal strength, and short gas pipe posts can be used outside the boards along the aisle by staying the posts with a wire. Use one sash on the north slope and two on the south slope, and enough more by the side of these to make the house the desired length.

Hot water is by far the best heat for a small house, and a water heater such as were used in railway cars, ought to be large enough to do the business. The piping must be arranged so that there are no air pockets to check the circulation of the water. The average winter will take about 16 pounds of soft coal per square foot of roof. A hillside will do if it slopes south; then it would answer as a wind-break and not shade the roof. Cold, windy days take the most coal. By using regular hotbed sash for a roof they could be taken off, after danger of frost is past, and stored away or piled and covered and the beds used for garden during the summer. The diagram shows end view of house.

SOAPS AS INSECTICIDES.

They Are Effective If the Soap Is of First-Class Quality—Make Your Own Soap.

A communication from the New York experiment station relative to the quality of soaps for insecticides, says:

Whale oil, or fish oil, soaps are among the best of contact insecticides if they are of good quality, since they are inexpensive, easy to use, safe and effective. In practice, however, they have been found to give varying results, some lots of the solutions made from such soaps failing to kill many of the same kind of insects that other lots of the same apparent strength destroyed completely. The continued occurrence of such failures cast suspicion upon the soaps, and examinations at the experiment station, by the exact methods of the chemist, proved that they vary to a surprising extent. The best sample contained four times as much actual soap as the poorest one, and one sample of a certain brand was only half as good a soap as another sample of the same brand from a different package. So unreliable were these soaps that the best solution of the problem appeared to be for the users to make the soap at home, if feasible, and a very few trials showed the process of making to be very simple and inexpensive.

The soap is made by thorough mixing of easily obtained materials, without heating. To make 40 pounds of soap, containing 60 per cent. actual soap, requires six pounds of caustic soda, 22 pounds of fish oil and 1½ gallons of water. The soda is first dissolved in the water and the oil then added gradually with constant and vigorous stirring. This soap can be made at a cost of three cents a pound or less. Used at the rate of one pound to seven gallons of water, the solution will destroy plant lice, scales and other soft-bodied sucking insects without injury to foliage.

Spraying the Apple.

The first spraying of the apple trees should be given as soon as the blossoms fall, says the Farmer's Review, to prevent the ravages of the curculio and codling moth. The spraying should be with Paris green or arsenate of lead in bordeaux mixture, keeping the foliage well covered with mixture till the fruit is nearly grown.

Irrigation in the Milk River Valley.

Montana is coming in for a big share of the general prosperity of the country, and it will only be a few short years when she will rank with any of the Northwestern states in agricultural greatness. The recent act of the Interior Department of the United States in setting aside $1,000,000 toward reclaiming three or four hundred thousand acres in the Milk River Valley is but a beginning of a much vaster development of this section as the needs grow apace. Already the agricultural worth of this to be famous valley has been adequately demonstrated in the results which have followed the irrigation works already established. It has been successfully proven that all kinds of agricultural products grow in great abundance wherever irrigation is used. The soil is naturally rich and needs only moisture to make it yield prolifically. The Great Northern Railway furnishes adequate transportation facilities, its main line practically cutting the valley in two. The fact that the Government has decided to begin immediate operations will prove a great incentive to the people of that section who have always believed in the future of their country and will open to settlement a vast area of rich land to the homeseeker and investor.

Wife No. 1, who resides in Grand Forks, commenced an action some time ago, and now wife No. 2, who resides in this city, has also commenced an action. Quite an estate in North Dakota has been left to Martin and both women will try to get as much of this as possible.

CAN COLLECT EXPENSES.

New Law Provides For Extra Pay To Superintendents.

A uew law passed by the legislature will effect the office of connty superintendent of schools in this connty. It provides that in certain instances superintendents are allowed travelling expenses, and Attorney General Young has decided that the law effects all officers who receive less than $1400 per year.

The salary of Supt. McAnnlty is less than $1400, so under Mr. Yonng's ruling he will be allowed to collect not more than $250 per year for travelling expenses, and $50 extra for institute work. There is no good reason why a school superintendent should not be allowed his expenses when visiting district schools, and it is the generol opinion that the law is a good oue.

TAX SALE IS HEAVY

Auditor Ford Disposes of a Large Number of Pieces of Property at Public Sale.

The annual sale of property on which taxes remain delinquent was held at the office of County Auditor Ford Monday, with that popular official in the role of auctioneer, and one of the most successful sales in the county's history resulted.

Every piece of farm property offered was eagerly snapped up, in several instances the bidding being spirited and the interest rate being cut as low as 7½ and 8 per cent. A good many of the city and village lots were also hid in, abont $7000 worth of property heing sold in all.

F. H. Wellcome, of Minneapolis, was the heaviest foreign hidder, while the local banks, Thief River banks and several individuals also secnred choice hits of the land offered.

The sale lasted nearly all day, and Anditor Ford is of the opinion that there are more desirable johs than acting as an auctioneer for eight or nine hours, even if the county strong hox is replenished considerably as a result.

The list was nicely cleaned np, however, and the officers are well satisfied with the sale.

A True Fish Story.

Harry Healy is telling the first fish story of the season, and while it sounds too unreasonable to be true, Harry and Butch swear by their version, and as their reputations as purveyors of truth and veracity are unquestioned, The Gazette takes pleasure in telling the tale. Monday evening they were at the west mill dam fishing, and Harry made a cast as far into the river as he could in hopes of attracting the wily pickerel with a brand new spoon hook he had purchased that afternoon. Instead of a fish, Harry encountered an old sunkeo log, and try as he would he could not get the hook to let go of the obstacle, with the result that he finally broke the line and attached a new hook. After fishing up and down stream for about an hour he again cast his line out towards the old log, when quicker thao a flash a monster pickerel snapped up the hook and started to run. After a pretty fight, Harry succeeded in laoding his prize, a 6-pound specimen, and imagine his surprise when Mr. pickerel flopped himself around and threw out the new spoon hook Harry had lost an hour or so before. The supposition is that the movement of the log on which the spoon got caught caused the thing to whirl until the pickerel grabbed it off the end of the log, and being unable to rid himself of it carried in his gills until caught later in the day. Harry was jubilant oot alone over the recovery of his hook, but from the fact of having landed the prized monster and he has since been relating the story with considerable pride.

CONFESSES TO MURDER.

Fred Foote, In Custody For Killing Gannon, Makes Clean Breast.

Fred Foote who was arrested last week for the murder of Mat Gannon at Beaudette several weeks ago, has made full confession. He murdered Gannon in cold blood. He had no accomplice and was not one of the Spooner crowd. There had long been bad blood between the two men and Gannon had threatened Foote's life that day, says the Bemidji Pioneer.

Foote came to this conclusion yesterday afternoon, when Sheriff Bailey returned to Beaudette where he subpoenaed six witness on the case. The names of the witnesses that were subpoenaed are Thos. Cathcart Jr., John France, Wm. Yonng, John Evarts, J. B. Montague and John McAffery. Most of them are residents of Spooner.

Sheriff Bailey stated on his return from Beaudette and before the confession that there was every reason to believe Foote was the man who fired the fatal shot. While not wishing to give ont the exact nature of the testimony that would be used against Foote at the trial, Mr. Bailey intimated that there would be ample proof to show that Foote's actions on the night of the killing were suspicious enough to warrant his arrest on the charge of murder.

"Since looking into the affair more closely" said Mr. Bailey "I was more than ever convinced that we have the right man, and while the evidence must necessarily be circumstantial to a large extent, I helieve that it would he strong enough to convict Foote of the crime."

The six witness that were subpoenaed will not be brought to Bemidji hefore the trial of Foote.

COLD IS BENEFICIAL.

Wheat Will Get Better Start As Result of Cold Snap.

According to the heft anthorities the present cold weather, thought by many to be disastrous to the growing crop of grain, is, according to old time crop experts, the hest thing possible for the fields of the valley and will insure a strong healthy growth during the remainder of the summer which will produce wonderful results from a crop standpoint this fall. The present cool weather has the tendency to retard the growth of grain above the ground and as a result but little showing has heen made since the spring seeding. There is little grain which is discernable above the ground. By examining carefully the progress made by the sown seed below ground however, an altogether different state of affairs is found. The tiny roots have spread out about the plant in a wonderful manner, the moisture providing all of the nutriment needed for a speedy and rapid growth beneath the top surface, where the temperature is warm and the roots now forming as a result of the cold weather will in weeks to come play an important part in the growth of the '05 crop of grain.

The roots will he strong, healthy and firmly seated, capable of withstanding drouths and other possible disadvantages. The stools will he many and of sturdy proportions, and the final result in the fall should he an excellent crop.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

Indians Can Buy Fire Water.

Large number of Indians of the White Earth and Red Lake reservations will be affected by the recent supreme court decision upholding the right of the reds who have renounced their tribal relations to purchase and drink as much firewater as they desire. There are some 2,500 Indians upon the White Earth and in the neighborhood of 1,800 upon the Red Lake.

On the White Earth the majority have taken allotments renounced their tribal relations and assumed as near as possible the civilized customs and manners of their white neighbors and brothers. Upon this reservation, therefore, the greatest harm will be done by the recent decision, for upon Red Lake the Indians are of a more wild and native character. The majority of them do not change their time honored customs or tribal relations and will not take allotments.

At White Earth where the civilized Indians are numerous, the result of the decision, if effective immediately, will not be long in leaving its mark. The reds have an insatiable thirst for liquor and once the guarding hand of Uncle Sam is removed, Poor Lo will go to pieces. Bootleggers and blind-piggers infest the neighborhood and will not stop at any unscrupulous means of adding to their ill gotten wealth.

Unscrupulous speculators who have made fortunes thru purchasing Indian allotments after the death of the Indian holders gloat over the increased rate of mortall which will result from the bestowal to Lo of all freeholders.

Millionaire's Poor Stomach.

The worn-out stomach of the over-fed millionaire is often paraded in the public prints as a horrible example of the evils attendant on the possession of great wealth. But millionaires are not the only ones who are afflicted with bad stomachs. The proportion is far greater among the toilers. Dyspepsia and indigestion are rampant among these people, and they suffer far worse tortures than the millionaire unless they avail themselves of a standard medicine like Green's August Flower, which has been a favorite household remedy for all stomach troubles for over thirty-five years. August Flower rouses the torpid liver, thus creating appetite and insuring perfect digestion. It tones and vitalizes the entire system and makes life worth living, no matter what your station. Trial bottles, 25c; regular size 75c. At all druggists. A. L. Reichert.

Found Indian Remains.

Thief River News: While coming down river one day last week in a gasoline launch, Sam Cheeley and George Jarman saw the skeletons of a number of Indians on the banks of the river just above Kratka post office. The water had washed away a portion of the banks at this point and exposed the skeletons to view. They brought three of the skulls to town with them and one of them was a decidedly large one.

Just when these Indians were buried there it would be hard to tell, but it was long before the remembrance of any of the old Indians that lived in this section. It is said that a hundred years at least the graves of all Indians on this portion of the reservation were kept track of and that, when the bodies were removed up river last summer, all that had been buried during the past century were removed.

Climatic Cures:

The influence of climate conditions in the cure of consumption is very much overdrawn. The poor patient, and the rich patient, too, can do much better at home by proper attention to food digestion, and a regular use of German Syrup. Free expectoration in the morning is made certain by German Syrup, so is a good night's rest and the absence of that weakening cough and debilitating night sweat. Restless nights and the exhaustion due to coughing, the greatest danger and dread of the consumptive, can be prevented or stopped by taking German Syrup liberally and regularly. Should you be able to go to a warmer clime, you will find that of the thousands of consumptives there, the few who are benefited and regain strength are those who use German Syrup. Trial bottles, 25c; regular size, 75c. At all druggists. A. L. Reichert.

For The Farmer.

A narrow minded man is like a narrow tire wagon. Gets in a rut and stays there.

The farmer is almost the only business man who can regulate his hours of work—and of play.

To get along with a harness just ready to fall to pieces is a poor method of economy in these days of automobiles and trolley cars.

Whether a man expects to sell his farm or not he should endeavor to bring it to a state where, if it has to be sold, it can be disposed of to advantage instead of at a sacrifice.

A farmer should be at his very best at forty-five. But how few really are! We learn so slowly how to look out for ourselves. We study our horses and cows and keep them in prime condition, but all the while we are digging down the walls of our own life building. Poor policy.

It seems singular that 100 hens produce in egg shells about 137 pounds of chalk yearly and yet not a single pound of that substance or perhaps even an ounce, exists on the farm or anywhere about the house within the circuit of hen's feeding ground. But the material is found in the sand, pebble dust, bits of bones and so forth that they pick up miscellaneously.

Don't let the children suffer. If they are fretful, peevish and cross, give them Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea. The best baby tonic known. Strength and health follow its use. 35 cents. W. A. Schreiter.

PLUMMER.

(From the Pioneer.)

E. B. Lanager expects to move his family and household goods to his claim in section 18 of Wyandotte next week.

John Erickson, a nephew of Mrs. Knute Steen, arrived last week from Sioux Falls S. D. to make his home on a claim on the reservation.

Olaf Sande was at Red Lake Falls Monday looking some business before the county board.

Oscar Carlson and W. G. Brown were at Red Lake Falls Monday attending Justice court.

J. E. Buckirk transacted business and visited with his family at Red Lake Falls the first of the week.

Hon L. C. Simons is here today from Red Lake Falls presiding at the cashier window in the First State Bank during the absence of Henry Enderle.

L. H. Larson has been the happiest man in town this week because of the arrival of a 7 pound baby girl at his home. All concerned are doing well.

J. M. Read went to Grand Forks Thursday afternoon. It was the twentieth anniversary of his wedding and he went home to celebrate the occasion in a fitting manner with his family.

The entertainment given here last Saturday evening by the Owens colored Musical and Dramatic Co., contained some meritorious features and others. Taking all in all the show was about as good as could be expected under the conditions.

Some day in the dim and distant future the oldest inhabitant will tell about the late spring of 1905 and how, on the 5th day of May after a heavy rain it snowed and the thermometer hung out around the freezing point and the people around their stoves.

Louis Sieff and Thor Gustenson were arrested last Friday on a warrant charging them with having stolen a horse from Constable Carlson on the 25th of April at Garnes: the horse being the property of the First State Bank of Plummer. Both men will have a hearing next Monday.

Louie Seiff Tuesday swore out a warrant for the arrest of W. G. Brown on a charge of assault, and sheriff Linnihan came out from Red Lake Falls and served the warrant. The case came up for trial Wednesday morning and was adjourned till next Tuesday. The alleged assault was committed last Friday when Brown assisted the constable to place Seiff in a cell after his arrest on charge of horse stealing. Brown claims the prosecution is malicious and he will fight the case to a finish.

LUCKY NUMBER IN DICE.

Cubes Believed to Turn with Fives Up Oftener Than Any Other Side.

"Dice seem to have a fancy for fives," said a clerk in a cigar store. "We get sets of them frequently that show many more fives than any other number. We call it running to fives. The players seem to know this, and they nearly always select fives when they begin to roll. I have never seen the dice show partiality for any number other than fives, and I do not understand why this is. It is a fact, however," says the Louisville Courier-Journal.

"The five and six sides of a dice should be the least frequent thrown, for they are lighter, having more holes, but this does not seem to make any difference. The fives keep on coming just the same.

"Of course, if one number shows oftener than another it means that the dice are not properly made; but it does seem curious that this irregularity should always make the five side come up instead of some other. Since I have been here we have had a number of sets of dice that ran to fives.

"Another peculiar thing is that nine men out of ten who roll the dice in this game choose fives or sixes. It is the rarest thing that anyone takes one of the smaller numbers. It may be superstition, but if so almost all men are superstitious, for they will have nothing to do with aces or twos. And those who win almost always win with the larger numbers. Fives are the favorite, and are selected most often."

WHITE RABBITS AS PETS.

They Are Easy to Take Care Of and Are Very Satisfactory Little Companions.

"What do white rabbits most like to eat?" Almost everything. They are not in the least fussy as to diet, says St. Nicholas. For that reason, and for their attractive appearance and playful ways, they make excellent pets. Always have an ample supply of good, clean hay and oats before them. Good green food once or twice a day, and only in quantities that will all be eaten. If at any feeding they do not eat all you give them, omit the next feeding, and then give less thereafter. They are fond of almost any kind of grain or vegetable—in fact, anything that a cow or a sheep will eat; and they will devour almost any wild plant, except poison-ivy or wild parsnip. Among the favorite delicacies of the summer are clover, dandelion, plantain, blackberry briers and blackberry leaves.

Give them water once or twice a day. Some dealers and breeders may tell you not to do this; but if you love your pets, pay not the slightest attention to such advice. It is cruel treatment. Hay should be kept in a rack on the side of the hutch; oats, in a "self-feeder" or in a firm dish that will not tip over easily. Clean the hutch frequently, and cover the floor with a light layer of sawdust or of fine shavings.

NATURAL GAS IN ENGLAND.

Was Struck in 1832, But No Use, It Seems, Has Ever Been Made of It.

During the last summer, says an English magazine of 1832, a bore was put down at Johnstone, to the depth of 150 feet, for the purpose of procuring water. The boring was mostly through shale or till.

At the depth of 125 feet, or thereby, the workmen heard a noise proceeding from the bore, which they supposed to be from water rushing upward, but which proved to be from gas.

The bore was sunk 25 feet deeper, when an abundant supply of water was procured, so as nearly to rise to the surface. The supply of gas, however, did not fail. It continues to ascend through the superincumbent column of water with a hissing noise, and, when a light is applied, burns with a blue flame.

No analysis has been made of the gas, but from the accounts of the workmen it may safely be concluded that it is hydrogen. The quantity is so considerable as nearly to be sufficient to supply two or three gas burners of the ordinary size. It gives out little light in combustion, probably from the absence of carbon in its composition.

A Russian Idea.

In Russia if you don't pay your photographer's bill, he hangs your picture in his window upside down. Every Russian photographer's window has five or six of these reversed pictures in it, and there is always a little crowd of people outside craning their necks and saying: "Oh, that is Vasili Popoffsky. Won't he be ashamed?" "And look at Anna Olinsky. You'd think she'd be able to pay." "Is that Senia Gogol there? It certainly is. What a pity."—Detroit Free Press.

It Hurt His Feelings.

"I'll scalp that reporter," growled old Waston Nurox, over the morning paper.

"Why, popper," replied his daughter, who had had her coming out reception the night before, "I thought he wrote me up real nice."

"But he speaks of ye as wearin' 'some soft, clingin' material,' an' that reminds me too much o' the time I was tarred an' feathered out in Montanny."—Philadelphia Press.

He Called a Doctor.

Yeast—I saw the doctor's carriage at your door, to-day. Anybody sick?

Crimsonbeak—No; he called to present his bill.

"Oh, I see, you didn't call him?"

"Yes, I did, too; I called him every old thing I could think of!"—Yonkers Statesman.

OYAMA IS PREPARED

JAPANESE COMMANDER READY TO ASSUME THE OFFENSIVE ON A LARGE SCALE.

Advance Divisions of Mikado's Forces Already in Contact With the Russians in What May Be the Prelude to Another Big Battle—Cossack Division Compelled to Retire by Superior Force of Japs.

Fanghushshieng, Manchuria, May 6.—Field Marshal Oyama seems ready to assume the offensive on a large scale and activity already has begun against General Linevitch's left. This may be the prelude to another general battle. The Japanese have concentrated heavy columns on the Liao river and their advance divisions have been in contact with the Russians, who are holding the main road from Fakoman to Bashienchen.

On Thursday the Japanese cavalry suddenly attacked a Cossack division in overwhelming force, compelling the latter to retire. Then, supported by infantry, the Japanese advanced and drove the Russian infantry out of the village of Palitoun.

A Russian reconnoitering party twenty miles further west fell into an ambush and all except five were killed.

APPEAR OFF HOKKAIDO.

Vessels of Vladivostok Fleet Burn Small Sailing Craft.

Tokio, May 6.—Four Russian torpedo boat destroyers from Vladivostok have appeared westward of Hokkaido.

They seized and burned a small sailing vessel and imprisoned the captain and disappeared to the northwest. They were evidently returning to Vladivostok. There is a possibility that they have destroyed other small craft, although no reports to that effect have been received.

The object of their visit is not clear. It is thought that probably they hoped to torpedo the Japanese patrol at night and it is also suggested that the Vladivostok vessels plan a diversion to assist the fleet of Admiral Rojestvensky.

Although none has been sighted it is believed the larger vessels of the Vladivostok squadron accompanied the torpedo boats. It is doubted that the torpedo boats would venture across unescorted in the heavy sea which was running when they burned the sailing vessel.

All the crew of this vessel except the captain, who was captured, succeeded in landing, but a steamer dispatched to the rescue of the burning derelict was forced to return on account of the storm. The Russians poured kerosene on the deck of the sailing vessel and withdrew after having ignited the surface of the oil.

FLEETS ARE UNITED

NAVAL DIVISIONS OF ROJESTVENSKY AND NEBOGATOFF JOIN FORCES.

St. Petersburg, May 9.—According to dispatches to the admiralty brought to Saigon by the hospital ship Kostroma, the junction of Vice Admirals Rojestvensky and Nebogatoff is by this time an accomplished fact. The admiralty professes ignorance of the present location of the united squadrons, but in view of the long and uninterrupted voyage of Nebogatoff's division, it is believed his ships will spend some time in sheltered waters of the Chinese sea near the coast, but outside the three-mile limit, in order to complete final recoaling and other preparations before setting out on the last and crucial stage of the voyage.

TOGO'S FLEET CONCENTRATING.

Jap Warships Assembling in the Korean Channel.

London, May 9.—The correspondent at Singapore of the Daily Mail telegraphs: "A private letter from influential friends at Tokio states that Vice Admiral Togo's fleet is concentrating in the Korean channel and that a portion of the Japanese navy is watching Vladivostok."

NAMES ARE SUPPRESSED.

Illinois Grand Jury Indicts Standard Oil Officials.

Peoria, Ill., May 6.—The grand jury at Pekin, Ill., has returned indictments against two high officials of the Standard Oil company. Requisition papers will be asked of Governor Deneen. The names have been suppressed.

The two officials are charged with having induced one Charles Kersher to swear that he owned a horse and wagon, which really belonged to the Standard Oil company, in order to force Fred Hamsult, a resident of Pekin, to quit selling the product of the Royal Oil company, a competitor of the Standard Oil company.

Trip Beneficial to Kaiser.

Berlin, May 6.—Telegrams from Karlsruhe, where Emperor William arrived during the evening, describe him as much benefitted by his Mediterranean trip. His naturally pale face has become really browned by exposure to the Southern sun.

ISAAC PERRY ACQUITTED.

Found Not Guilty of Setting Fire to Plant at Hegewich, Ill.

Chicago, May 6.—Isaac Perry, who has been on trial charged with having set fire to the Chicago Car and Locomotive plant at Hegewich, Ill., to secure the insurance money on the plant, was acquitted by a jury in Judge Kersten's court during the day. The jury was out only ten minutes. The car and locomotive works, which were burned down several months ago, had been shut down for some time. Mr. Perry, who was president of the National Bank of North America, was also an officer of the Hegewich concern. The bank of which Mr. Perry was an officer had loaned the concern several hundred thousand dollars and Mr. Perry was charged with setting fire to the plant to secure the insurance money to meet the claim of the bank.

DEATH IN WIND STORM.

Number of Persons Perish in Indian Territory.

Muskogee, I. T., May 6.—A number of persons are reported killed, many injured and much damage wrought to property as a result of a fierce storm in various parts of Indian Territory. Wires are down and names and details are lacking.

At Owl, 260 miles southwest of South McAlester, eight persons are said to have been killed and a dozen injured. At that place nearly every building is reported wrecked. Professor Binson, a teacher, is reported fatally hurt and many pupils are said to have been injured. It is believed that none of them will die. Among the buildings wrecked were a church, which was wholly demolished, three business houses and twenty residences.

GOTTSCHALK GUILTY

ST. PAUL ALLEGED DOUBLE MURDERER ADMITS COMMITTING ONE CRIME CHARGED.

St. Paul, May 9.—Edward Gottschalk, charged with killing Christien H. Schindeldecker, the West Seventh street butcher, Feb. 18 last, and afterward murdering Joseph Hartmann, his alleged accomplice in the crime, pleaded guilty before Judge Lewis to killing Hartmann. Sentence was deferred.

Hartmann was slain on Pike island Feb. 21 with a heavy instrument, probably an ice pick. Heavy flatirons were tied to his feet and his body thrown into the Mississippi river.

According to Gottschalk Hartmann planned the Schindeldecker robbery and the young fellow entered the butcher shop and killed the butcher while Gottschalk remained on the outside in the street. Hartmann came out and told Gottschalk what he had done, much to Gottschalk's surprise and dismay. Gottschalk then tried to avoid Hartmann, but the actual murderer persisted in following him about.

Gottschalk on the Monday following the murder went to Pike island and Hartmann trailed after him. Gottschalk could not rid himself of Hartmann. Finally Hartmann produced a razor and made a savage attempt to kill Gottschalk. In self-defense Gottschalk killed Hartmann and threw his body into the river.

The self-defense story, however plausible, does not comport with a plea of guilty to murder in the first degree.

BANQUET AT DENVER.

President Entertained by Prominent Men of Colorado.

Denver, May 9.—The entertainment of President Roosevelt by the citizens of Denver was a fitting conclusion of a day of royal welcome as he journeyed over the state of Colorado from Glenwood Springs. All the towns along the Denver and Rio Grande railway, over which the presidential train traveled, centered their population at the stations to greet the president, and every evidence of hearty good will was seen and heard. The crowning event came at night in the form of a banquet tendered President Roosevelt by the Denver Chamber of Commerce at the Brown Palace hotel. This was perhaps the most sumptuous affair ever held in the state and the president was visibly pleased by the picture that unfolded itself to his eyes as he entered the banquet hall. Everything known to the decorator's art was called into use to embellish the commodious hall. The menu was perfect. The banquet began at 8 o'clock and continued until 11, when the president was escorted to his private car "Rocket," where he almost immediately retired to await his departure for Chicago at 7 a. m.

ONLY ONE PERSON PERISHED

Steamer Aransas Sunk in Collision Off Vineyard Haven.

Vineyard Haven, Mass., May 8.—With the arrival here of the tug Patience came news of one of the most remarkable marine disasters in the history of Vineyard sound shipping. The Joy line steamer Aransas, bound from Boston for New York, was struck by the coal laden barge Glendower, in tow from Philadelphia for Boston, and sunk less than fifteen minutes later, but out of forty-seven passengers and a crew of twenty-nine on the steamer only one life was lost. Miss Mamie Kelley, twenty-seven years of age, residence unknown, was missing when the roll of passengers was called.

Few of the passengers saved anything except their clothing and small hand baggage.

TROOPS NOT NEEDED

MAYOR DUNNE ASSURES GOVERNOR THAT EVERYTHING IS QUIET AT CHICAGO.

Large Increase in the Number of Wagons in Use in All Sections of the City and Less Interference With Traffic—Employers Declare They Will Allow Business to Stagnate Rather Than Surrender to Strikers.

Chicago, May 6.—Governor Deneen and Mayor Dunne had a talk over the long distance telephone during the day and the mayor assured the governor that everything was quiet and there was no need for the militia.

The city and county authorities claim to have the situation well in hand. Sheriff Barrett now has 500 deputies (all white), who are aiding the 2,000 policemen on strike duty. After walking through the streets and watching the moving caravans of wagons and the diminished number of followers the sheriff came to the conclusion that peace is near. The leaders of the teamsters, however, say that the strike has not been won by the Employers' association.

Many additional wagons were moved during the day and the deliveries down town and in the residence districts were largely increased. The threats of the police to arrest those who follow escorted wagons has had an excellent effect.

A sympathetic strike of tugmen, which will interfere with coal delivery on the river, was the only addition to the ranks of the teamsters.

RATHER THAN SURRENDER.

Employers Declare They Will Let Business Stagnate.

Chicago, May 6.—C. H. Conover, vice president of Hibbard, Spencer, Bartlett & Co., said that the employers of Chicago are agreed to lock up their doors and let business stagnate rather than surrender to the Teamsters' union. This, he said, would be the rule of his own house. The statement was brought out by a report that the company was about to return to union drivers.

Sheriff Thomas E. Barrett, after making a tour of the shopping district, where he believed rioting might be likely to follow the greatly increased delivery plans of the retail merchants, said:

"The serious trouble seems to be over. The strike situation is now well in the hands of the authorities and I look for a continuation of comparative quiet and tranquillity. I am glad that the employers have decided not to engage any more negroes. When I was brought into this matter for conference I unhesitatingly informed the merchants that the use of negroes for strike breakers was causing more rioting than any other factor in the fight to win from the unions."

President Charles Dold of the Federation of Labor denied with force and accuracy a statement from a member of the Employers' association that the employers had already won the strike.

"The unions have not touched at the edge of their resources yet," said President Dold. "The strike has not been won by the Employers' association. The unions have only started. They know they have a big fight and expect a long one. There is no surrender thought of."

Tugmen Out in Sympathy.

Chicago, May 6.—A strike of tugmen in sympathy with the teamsters began during the day and river traffic of the Peabody Coal company and other concerns was interrupted. Members of the Tug Linemen's union and Licensed Tugmen's union refused to work on tugs doing lighterage work for the boycotted places. The strike was not called officially.

PAT CROWE AT OMAHA.

Alleged Kidnapper of Eddie Cudahy Returns Home.

Omaha, May 6.—Pat Crowe, alleged kidnapper of Eddie Cudahy, son of the millionaire packer of Omaha, and for whose arrest rewards aggregating $50,000 have at different times been offered, has returned to this city after an absence of four years.

Crowe stated that he had served in the Boer war, fighting with the Boers. He returned to this country after the war and has lived continually, according to his statement, in a South Side flat in Chicago. He says he has been in Chicago nearly three years and that he has visited Omaha on three different occasions during that time.

ALL ON BOARD PERISH.

Barge Moonbeam Goes Down in a Gale Off Point Judith.

Newport, R. I., May 4.—The tug Gertrude put into this harbor during the day and reported the loss of the barge Moonbeam off Point Judith during the night with all on board, including the captain, engineer, steward and two children of the captain. Captain Helyburton of the towboat did not know the names of any of those drowned.

The Moonbeam was being towed from Hoboken to Providence with a cargo of coal.

Freight Train Hits Street Car.

Philadelphia, May 6.—An unknown woman was killed and three men injured, two of them seriously, in a grade crossing accident. A freight train on the Philadelphia and Reading railway crashed into a summer car which was well filled with passengers.

Red Lake Falls Gazette

L. A. DAUTREMONT, PROPRIETOR
SAM S. HAISLET, EDITOR AND MANAGER

Published weekly, Thursday evening, entered as second-class matter in the post office at Red Lake Falls.

Official Paper of Red Lake County.

Official Paper of Red Lake Falls.

Subscription, $1.00 per Year

Thief River Falls is getting a surplus of lawyers, no less than four new ones having located there within the last month. The reason is apparent. That $8000 county seat fund looks good to the lawyers, and the powers that be up-stream have promised a liberal apportionment of the pie.

I. D. Converse, well known in this city, has leased the Cass Lake Times of Frank Ives and took possession this week. Mr. Converse has had a great many years experience in the newspaper business and will undoubtedly make a success of his business venture. Here's hoping he does.

The suspension of the St. Paul Globe leaves aunty Democracy without a recognized organ in Minnesota. The Minneapolis Journal and several other mugwump Twin City sheets climbed over the Democratic hand wagon last fall, however, and they can be looked to for aid to his "donkship" in time of need.

There will be thirty-nine summer schools in Minnesota this year for the instruction of Minnesota teachers, ten more than were held in the summer of 1904. Of this number twenty-seven will begin July 5, continuing four weeks, and twelve will begin June 21 continuing six weeks. Although the recent legislature refused to pass a law providing for summer terms at the normal schools, teacher's institutes will be held nevertheless at the normal schools at Mankato, Winona, Duluth, Moorhead and St. Cloud. The terms at the normal schools and the state university will be six weeks.

For the benefit of friend McDonald, we will state that The Gazette never made the charge that Thief River Falls used $8000 or any part of it to secure signers to their now dead removal petition. We did say, and here re-iterate that they have held up the saloon men up the river to the time of $500 apiece to assist them in the fight for the seat of government and to help pay railroad bonuses, but as long as they let several loud mouthed fellows brag about the achievement, we fail to see where they can feel sore at the public getting next. They're ashamed of it, though, and have just cause to be.

The Thief River Press calls the Gazette scribe the "young Horace Greely". This being the case, if it wasn't for the sympathy we have for the people out there, we might suggest, as the great Greely once did, that this warm member from Iowa get busy and "go west." But no, they hang people for trival offences in that part of the world, and if the dear Iowa boy editor (?) up stream should emigrate to the west with his present attack of the swelled head, the coroner and his Satanic majesty would each be assured of a brief session of activity, and as long as he is harmless here perhaps it is better that he be admonished not to heed the advice of either Greely or "young Greely".

The Gazette learns that some criticism has been made of County Attorney Germo's stand in the county seat controversy, claims being made that he has been partial to one side or the other. It is hardly fair to Mr. Germo to make charges of this sort, as he is the servant of the people of the county and is endeavoring to the best of his ability to be fair and impartial. The criticism has undoubtedly been made without giving the matter a thought, but when an impartial view is taken it can easily be seen wherein Mr. Germo has performed his duty simply as an officer, without regard to the partisans in the county seat war.

The Koch murder trial is nearly over at Mankato, and it is expected that the judge will charge the jury sometime Saturday. Hardly any new evidence has been introduced by either side that has any great bearing on the case, and it seems to be the general opinion that the jury will either disagree or bring in a verdict of "not guilty." Without doubt this murder has attracted more attention than any other ever committed in the state, and it has been the common topic of conversation in nearly every hamlet in the state during the past few months. From all appearances the murder of Gebhardt will never be avenged, as the state has not yet succeeded in making a case of any strength against Koch.

The Thief River, St. Hilaire and Plummer papers last week contained write-ups of the hearing at Crookston in regard to the temporary injunction issued restraining the auditor from filing the Thief River Falls petition, and in all the reports it is stated that Judge Watts ruled that Auditor Ford exceeded his authority when he did not file the petition on presentation. This impression is entirely erroneous, as Judge Watts made no such ruling at all. He stated that as far as he knew the auditor was not the one to pass upon the legality of the petition, but was merely to examine the lists carefully to see that they were in proper form as set forth in the affadavits thereon, and that in referring them to the County Attorney, Mr. Ford took exactly the right course. The Crookston counsel for Thief River Falls admitted that County Attorney Germo did not take nearly as much time to examine the lists as he had himself taken, which brings the thing to the conclusion that both officers acted squarely to the letter of the law and their oaths of office in the petition matter. While this matters but little to the participants in the fight, the people at large have been lead to believe that Mr. Ford refused to perform his official duty in this instance, and The Gazette is anxious to set them right, and shows gladly where the Judge held that Mr. Ford acted fairly and honestly in this matter as he has done in all other matters during his term in office.

A SOLID FRONT.

The Redwood Falls Gazette predicts that the Republican party of Minnesota will be thoroughly united next year, and that the candidate of the party for governor will receive the solid support of all Republicans, and be placed in the gubernatorial chair, and that the other candidates for state offices will be fully as successful.

This prediction is based on a general desire for unity all over the state, and particularly in the large centers of St. Paul and Minneapolis, where the opposing leaders of last year are forgetting their differences and getting together in a manner decidedly pleasing to the country spectator.

The gubernatorial candidate is a long way from being selected. But let it be Clague of Redwood, Lord of Dodge, Hanson of Meeker, Nolan of Mower, Brower of Stearns, Heatwole of Rice, Block of Nicollet, or any other member of the important galaxy from which excellent material can be so judiciously selected, there will be a rallying around the standard bearer that will result in a victory at the November polls.

The sore spots are healing and the fur is being rubbed the right way.

The Thief River River Press does the C. Columbus act and "discovers" that the committee in charge of the Red Lake Falls side of the county seat controversy are trying to call the Gazette off the perch for talking so much about the grafting policy of the town up the river. It is evident that the "wish is father to the thought" with the Press, for they surely manufactured that great heavy editorial out of whole cloth. Not only the committee here, but the people all over the county are anxious that the grafting schemes manufactured up-river to bunco the public, be exploited free and openly and this is what the Gazette has done so far and will continue to do, taking chances on running amuck of the committee and not worrying over the outcome. If any "committee" would like to call quits it's the one from Thief River Falls, as they have this early in the game tumbled to the fact that the renowned Barnum wasn't exactly correct when he said that "the American people liked to be humbugged." Their anxiety for a chance at the county strong box blinded them to the fact that their underhand schemes were likely to prove veritable boomerangs.

Millionaire's Poor Stomach.

The worn-out stomach of the over-fed millionaire is often paraded in the public prints as a horrible example of the vile attendant on the possession of great wealth. But millionaires are not the only ones who are afflicted with bad stomachs. The proportion is far greater among the toilers. Dyspepsia and indigestion are rampant among these people, and they suffer far worse tortures than the millionaire unless they avail themselves of a standard medicine like Green's August Flower, which has been a favorite household remedy for all stomach troubles for over thirty-five years. August Flower rouses the torpid liver, thus creating appetite and insuring perfect digestion. It tones and vitalizes the entire system and makes life worth living, no matter what your station. SYSTEMIC CATARRH SO LITTLE UNDERSTOOD

Claims Many Thousands. A Tragedian's Thanks to Pe-ru-na.

ROBERT DOWNING, THE FAMOUS TRAGEDIAN.

In speaking of Peruna, Robert Downing, the famous tragedian, says:

"I find Peruna a preventative against all sudden summer ills that swoop upon one in changing climates and water. It is the finest traveling companion and safeguard against malarial influences.

"You may notice that persons in poor health always find the heat most intolerable; this I avoid by using Peruna. I know by the thermometer that the weather is hot, yet I have felt the heat less this summer than ever.

"The cooling action of Peruna on the mucous membrane makes it invaluable to actors and singers, as it does away with that tendency to sudden hoarseness so apt to overtake one on emerging from a hot dressing room to a draughty stage.

"To sum it up, Peruna has done me more good than any tonic I have ever taken."—Robert Downing.

Dr. Hartman was the first physician in the United States to accurately describe systemic catarrh. His remedy Peruna, the only systemic catarrh remedy yet devised, is now known all over the civilized world. A person having used it once can never be persuaded to be without it when in need of such a remedy.

Write for a copy of Dr. Hartman's latest book entitled "Summer Catarrh." Address Dr. Hartman, Columbus.

Climatic Cures:

The influence of climate conditions in the cure of consumption is very much overdrawn. The poor patient, and the rich patient, too, can do much better at home by proper attention to food digestion, and a regular use of German Syrup. Free expectoration in the morning is made certain by German Syrup, so is a good night's rest and the absence of that weakening cough and debilitating night sweat. Restless nights and the exhaustion due to coughing, the greatest danger and dread of the consumptive, can be prevented or stopped by taking German Syrup liberally and regularly. Should you be able to go to a warmer clima, you will find that of the thousands of consumptives there, the few who are benefited and regain strength are those who use German Syrup. We Offer $1,000

For a Disease Germ That Liquozone Can't Kill.

On every bottle of Liquozone we offer $1,000 for a disease germ that it cannot kill. We do this to assure you that Liquozone does kill germs.

And it is the only way known to kill germs in the body without killing the tissues, too. Any drug that kills germs is a poison, and it cannot be taken internally. Medicine is almost helpless in any germ disease. It is this fact which gives Liquozone its worth to humanity; a worth so great that, after testing the product for two years, through physicians and hospitals, we paid $100,000 for the American rights. And we have spent over one million dollars, in one year, to buy the first bottle and give it free to each sick one who would try it.

Acts Like Oxygen.

Liquozone is not made by compounding drugs, nor is there any alcohol in it. Its virtues are derived solely from gas—largely oxygen gas—by a process requiring immense apparatus and 14 days' time. This process has, for more than 20 years, been the constant subject of scientific and chemical research.

The result is a liquid that does what oxygen does. It is a nerve food and blood food—the most helpful thing in the world to you. Its effects are exhilarating, vitalizing, purifying. Yet it is an absolutely certain germicide. The reason is that germs are vegetables; and Liquozone—like an excess of oxygen—is deadly to vegetal matter.

Liquozone goes into the stomach, into the bowels and into the blood, to go wherever the blood goes. No germ can escape it and none can resist it. The results are inevitable, for a germ disease must end when the germs are killed. Then Liquozone, acting as a wonderful tonic, quickly restores a condition of perfect health. Diseases which have resisted medicine for years yield at once to Liquozone, and it cures diseases which medicine never cures. Half the people you meet—wherever you are—can tell you of cures that were made by it.

Germ Diseases.

These are the known germ diseases. All that medicine can do for these troubles is to help Nature overcome the germs, and such results are indirect and uncertain. Liquozone attacks the germs, wherever they are. And when the germs which cause a disease are destroyed, the disease must end, and forever. That is inevitable.

The play given by the Senior Class of the Red Lake Falls high school at the Metropolitan opera housa last Friday evening, was one of the best amateur productions ever presented in the city, the class of '05 doing themselves proud in their randition of the brilliant play, "The Silent Detective." The members of the class all took their parts exceptionally well and individual mention is entirely uncalled for, suffice to say that the work of the entire cast would do credit to older and far more experienced actors. The opera house was crowded nearly to the doors, and the vast audience showed their appreciation of the efforts of the performers by liberal applause. The high school band discoursed a number of stirring marches between acts that helped liven up things. The class netted nearly $70 for their commencement expenses, which will help them wonderfully in paying the heavy charges incident to these exercises. Prof. Chamberlain deserves a large shara of tha credit for the success of the venture, as he has been untiring in his efforts to make tha play a brilliant success.

Taking Time To Be a Lady.

"It is a truism that it takes time to be a lady," is one of Esperance Goodlove's wise observations concerning the rush of a business woman's life, in the New Idea Woman's Magazine for June, and characteristically she meets the situation, which seems rather discouraging to her audience of business women, squarely in the face. "Very well, then," she continues, "find the time and take it. I have no sympathy with the notion that the woman who is clever enough to support herself is not clever enough to make opportunity for the things she really wishes to do. She who, in a daily expanding knowledge, sees new possibilities of refinement and culture must pursue such valiantly." This writer is an excellent inspirer, yet most readers, I fancy, will pause here with a more or less definite feeling of demur as they think with regret of the talents undeveloped, the fields of knowledge viewed only afar off, yes, even the time which others were filling with graceful avocations, given up to the demands of stern duty or necessity. Yet it would be unsafe to claim "sticking to one's job" hinders refinement; and if refinement calls for dissipation of energy, to meet old conventional standards, a revised "curriculum for a gentlewoman" will have to be compiled to meet the needs of "the strenuous life."

WIFE AND CHILDREN KILLED.

Minnesota Farmer Leaves Dynamite in Kitchen Stove.

St. Cloud, Minn., May 4.—One woman and two children were instantly killed and one boy probably fatally injured on a farm three miles from Bridgman by the explosion of dynamite.

James Hunter was clearing his farm of stumps, using dynamite for the purpose. Before he went to work he put a stick of dynamite in the kitchen stove to warm it. Soon after this he found it necessary to change his plans and go to town for some repairs, forgetting to take the dynamite from the stove.

Soon after Hunter left his wife and three children, who were in the kitchen, were blown up by an explosion, which instantly killed the mother and two children. A boy about six years old was blown through a window and thus escaped instant death. He will die, however.

WEALTHY WIDOW SUICIDES.

Unfortunate Love Affair Cause of Rash Act.

New York, May 5.—Mrs. J. W. Gray, believed to be wealthy and said to be the widow of a Chicago broker and who was described by her friends as a remarkably beautiful woman, committed suicide in the Hotel Imperial here by shooting. She was found lying unconscious before a mirror in her bedroom with a bullet wound in her head and died a few hours later at a hospital without regaining consciousness. Letters left by the suicide indicated that she was the victim of an unfortunate love affair and that, although possessed of ample means, she had no desire to live without the man she loved.

JURY FAILS TO AGREE

THIRD TRIAL OF NAN PATTERSON ENDS WITHOUT A VERDICT BEING REACHED.

New York, May 4.—Having failed to reach a verdict and declaring that they were hopelessly disagreed, the jury in the Nan Patterson case was formally discharged at 2:20 o'clock Thursday morning.

It is understood that a majority of the jury was for acquittal, but in what proportion cannot be ascertained.

Miss Patterson collapsed on the jury's announcement and fainted dead away. She was assisted from the court by one of her counsel and several court attendants and revived in an ante room.

Future procedure in the case is uncertain. The district attorney's office may not attempt another trial. Should this be the case Miss Patterson would be released either on nominal bail or under her own recognizance and the indictment eventually be quashed.

DR. KOCH NOT THE MAN.

Asa P. Brooks Says Defendant Did Not Kill Gebhardt.

Mankato, Minn., May 5.—"The man I saw bending over the form of Dr. Gebhardt as I gazed through the transom on the night of Nov. 1, 1904—the night of the murder—was not the defendant, Dr. Koch."

Asa P. Brooks, the New Ulm newspaper man, who is the only direct witness in the Koch murder trial, made this statement during the afternoon while on the stand.

Unless Brooks' testimony is impeached in such a forceful style as will leave little doubt as to its lack of authenticity, it will prove a crippling blow to the prosecution.

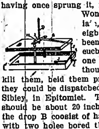
ROAD AND FARM IMPROVEMENT

AN EXCELLENT RAT TRAP.

Home-Made Device Which Will Catch the Most Wary and Cunning Rodent.

The only kind of trap proved to the writer a complete success is the deadfall shown in the accompanying cut. It has been used in his family for nearly half a century, catching, during that time, an army of rats. Simple in construction, it is, nevertheless, so swift and deadly in its action that any rodent, having once sprung it, never escapes.

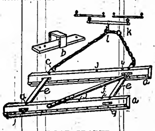


Wonderful to relate, as many as eight rats have been caught in such a trap at one time, which, though it did not kill them, held them prisoners until they could be dispatched, says Fred O. Sibley, in Epitomist. The platform A should be about 20 inches square, and the drop B consist of hardwood plank with two holes bored through exactly middle-way, so that it will slide readily up and down the posts supporting the crosspiece H. Through the center of this is a hole for the similar action of the circular post D, which is securely embedded into B. A piece of light band-iron is G, which, when the trap is set, rests on the support H and, being loosely fastened to D at I by an iron pin, thus holds up the plank B. The rat enters and begins nibbling at indian meal sprinkled in the groove of the platform at J, and finally reaching the spindle, hidden beneath it, agitates it enough to displace the bottom E on the outside; this, in turn, releases both the string F and band-iron G, the latter of which, owing to the weight of the plank B, is drawn upward into a groove, sawed middle-way through D by its sliding down the hole in the center of H and as the motion of B is then exceedingly fast, the victim, ere it can scramble over the sides round the platform, is caught and killed. Provided the affair is nicely adjusted and made so that it operates easily, there is no patented trap on the market, to my knowledge, half as good, for it has such an innocent appearance that the oldest and most cunning rat will ultimately be caught by it. To work well the spindle C should have a little play, and the more lightly the button E rests against the notch cut in it and yet will hold, the better. Made on a smaller scale, this kind of trap is also most excellent with which to catch mice.

HOME-MADE ROAD SCRAPER

It Will Do as Good Work as the High-Priced Grader, and Is Very Durable.

In the illustration a a are 3x12x8 feet long, bottom edge beveled with its hoe of steel ¼x4 inches, bolted on cutting edge as shown at g. The crosspieces, e e, are bolted with inch bolts in mortises 1x8, two inches from the top of a a, and made out of 1x4x30-inch iron, which has holes in front ends to fasten draft chain to, also a hole in e at the right-hand end to bolt brace, f, on, which is also bolted to the rear a at b. The guider, f, is 1x2 inches and six feet long, with holes in back end so the rear a can be changed at any time so it will properly follow front a. A seat board, b, is bolted to a a at i i when team is hitched at b for ditching, and at j j when smoothing up the roadbed. The right-hand ends of a a are sloped back 45 degrees to prevent catching in the bank of side ditch. If properly made of good material, this is very durable, and does almost as good work as a costly grader.—Farm and Home.



ROAD GRADER.

FARM FACTS AND FANCIES.

Farming is a poor business when the farming is poor.

Wire fencing is more durable and cheaper than wood.

A farmer without plans is next to a ship without a rudder.

One way to increase the profits in farming is to reduce the cost of production.

What per cent. of that seed corn do you think will grow? If you haven't tested it, you don't know.

The greatest saving of time is made by the use of the best tools in the preparation of the ground, planting the seed, and after cultivation.

It is much more profitable to keep land in good condition than to get it out of such condition by one-sided fertilization and then try to bring it back.

Time will be saved and you will be apt to be more careful in your selection if the seed corn is selected this month. If you intend buying seed, place your order now.

Every farmer should have his seed corn testing patch on which competing selections from his own fields and varieties secured elsewhere may be subjected to a careful field test under his own eye.

DYNAMITE MAKES CHANNEL

Ice in Long Island Sound Was Blown Up to Permit of Navigation.

The severity of last winter in the neighborhood of New York is emphasized by an occurrence at Port Chester, N. Y., on Long Island Sound, says the New York Tribune. Usually the harbor of that place is not closed in the winter by the ice. The steamers from New York are able to make their way up the Byram river, the mouth of which forms the harbor of Port Chester, to the wharves. In the winter just ended it has been impossible for them to do this, for ice more than a foot in thickness formed and effectually blocked navigation in the channel.

The manufacturers became tired of waiting for nature in the form of gentle spring to release them from their icy bonds. When March came roaring in, and the ice was found still to be from a foot to 18 inches in thickness, they decided to treat the ice themselves. Procuring 450 pounds of dynamite, they set to work. Beginning at the open end of the ice field the ice was divided into huge blocks with plows. Then sticks of dynamite were inserted in holes made for the purpose. The dynamite was exploded by an electric current, and three or four miniature geysers of mixed ice and water would shoot up into the air.

Foot by foot the ice was broken away. Finally after five days of ice breaking of this sort the channel was opened sufficiently to permit a steamer to reach a wharf.

AN APPEAL FROM AFRICA.

What the Peoples of the Dark Continent Ask of Those of Other Nations.

It is but very little that we ask—the right to work on our own soil, among our own people, ruled by some, at any rate, of our rulers, and to be permitted to eat and drink what we think good for us, instead of having deadly poison poured down our throats, say an extract from "Africa's Appeal to Christendom," in Century. Even if foreign powers should for a time be financial losers, they cannot eventually be anything but gainers—aided by a country almost unlimited in its capabilities, and the willing, grateful service of 20,000,000 of people rescued from the moral as well as physical death now staring them in the face. They will not have the obstacles presented to them in their own country; all will be with them in this crusade; leaders and people alike are stretching out their hands for aid. We appeal, not to England, not to France, not to Germany, not to other empires and states, but to the consciences of the individual men forming such nations. We appeal, not for a gift or favor, but for our right. Even as the Americans appealed for their rights, and obtained them by heroic measures, so do we claim the right for "freedom to worship God," and to worship Him by sobriety, industry, good will and all the Christian graces.

FOUND IN "LEMON" PIES.

Analysis of Restaurant Pastry Fails to Bring to Light Any Lemon.

Three lemon pies brought from the shelves of downtown restaurants were analyzed in the office of the state food inspector, and this is the composition of the filling of one of them, as announced by the chemist, reports the Chicago Record-Herald.

"Starch in thick, firm paste, flavored slightly and very little acid; 21 per cent. sugar. Aniline coloring (methyl-orange group). The color is made synthetically from aniline, and aniline from coal. Method—di-methyl-aniline on diazo-benzine sulphonic acid. Methyl orange is poisonous in large doses. Found to contain very little flavoring and acid from lemon. Filling of starch paste, sugar and colored deep yellow.

In plain English, it was explained by the chemist that aniline is used instead of eggs. The butter was neglected altogether and the lemon juice was slighted.

Another lemon pie was beginning to decompose when it was delivered to the laboratory. There was dough at the bottom. The third lemon pie examined was said to be tolerably good. The much-abused mince pie escaped with good reputation, but one of the two pumpkin pies examined was said to be old.

Largest Known Sun Spot.

The Abbe Moreux has published a chart of the great sun spot made at the Observatory of Bourges, when on February 2 it attained its greatest extension of about 175,000 kilometers long and 102,000 kilometers wide—that is to say, about one-twenty-ninth part of the solar disk. It is the largest yet known. Lengths of 200,000 kilometers have been noted, but they represented a group of spots. One in 1858 was 250,000 kilometers long, but owing to its narrowness only measured one-thirtieth of the solar surface. The spot passed the central meridian of the sun on the night of February 3. It lay in the southern hemisphere, and varied notably in its aspect.—London Globe.

MINE ON FIRE SINCE 1857.

Vein of Coal in Pennsylvania Still Unextinguished After Forty-Seven Years.

President Lewis A. Riley, of the Lehigh Coal and Navigation company, in his annual report, says that one of the company's mines near Tamaqua has been on fire for 47 years, says Fuel. Regarding the efforts now made to quench these subterranean fires the report says:

"A portion of the outcrop of the Mammoth vein in this locality has been on fire since 1857, the fire being confined by the water filling the workings below water level and cut-offs on the outcrop. Before opening the colliery below water level it is necessary either to extinguish the fire or get it under control. During the past year efforts have been made with this end in view which have met with a large measure of success. A boiler plant and pumping machinery have been erected on the bank of the Little Schuylkill river at Tamaqua for the purpose of pumping water to the level of the outcrop. A branch of the Panther Creek railroad has been extended nearly two miles to reach the outcrop, and more holes have put down at various places where there were indications of fire. The fire is being extinguished by washing fine coal dirt through bore holes on the fire and filling up the vacant spaces so as to cut off the air supply."

HE DIDN'T WANT THE COAT

But There Was Something in the Inside Pocket He Did Want.

The truth of this story is vouched for by the victim, says the New York Sun.

"Where is that old blue coat I knocked around in last summer?" he asked his wife. She was not quick to offer an explanation.

"It was here only yesterday," remarked the husband. "I know it was."

"Yes," said the wife with a touch of anger, "I know it was. I just got sick and tired of seeing that coat and a lot of other old stuff lying around cluttering things up, and I sold it this morning."

"You sold it! Sold the coat—the old blue coat?"

"Yes, I sold it. And I don't want you to go around moping about it."

"Dear, I didn't want the coat, but to-morrow is your birthday and I had hidden a ring and a nice yellow bill in the inside pocket. I wanted to surprise you and I couldn't think of a better hiding place."

The victim says that what happened after that is nobody's business.

TRUE HEROISM OF LIFE.

Found in Every-Day Occupations That Call for Steady Heads and Hands.

Prof. William James, of Harvard university, relates that, upon a certain journey, he was questioning with himself whether or not the higher heroism of life was passing out of human society; and that, at the very moment, he looked from the car window and suddenly got sight of a number of workmen performing some task on the dizzy ledge of an iron construction at a great height. This at once brought to his mind, says Success Magazine, a sense of the everyday bravery of men in everyday occupations. It flashed upon him, on the instant, that the true heroism of life is found, not only on the day of battle and in desperate adventures, but also in building every bridge, or in the ordinary day-by-day service of the world, whether of the sailor upon his deck, the brakeman upon his train, the lumberman upon his raft, or wherever else men are at work.

"As I awoke to this unidealized heroic life around me," he says, "the scales seemed to fall from my eyes, and a wave of sympathy greater than I had ever before felt with the common life of common men began to fill my soul."

WOODS FOR FURNITURE.

Objections to Oak and Rosewood—Walnut's Day Gone—Seasoning Mahogany.

Some of the best cabinetmakers of New York are chary of working in oak. Really old and well-seasoned oak is hard to get and harder to work, says the New York Sun.

There is no great quantity of old oak furniture in the market, and old pieces that would supply large enough lumber for important work are seldom found. New kiln-dried oak is uncertain, being liable to warp and crack.

Paneled articles can be made of such material with some safety, but large solid articles are likely to give a bad account of themselves at the end of a winter in a steam-heated house.

Rosewood also the best cabinetmakers distrust. This wood has a peculiarly oily quality that makes it uncertain when glued. For this reason rosewood is used chiefly as a veneer. Thin sheets lose much of their oil and take glue satisfactorily.

Solid rosewood furniture is hard to find.

Unpardonable.

Mrs. Flip—That new neighbor is a fearfully slipshod housekeeper.

Mr. Flip—How do you know?

"Why, every single time I send over there to borrow something she's always out of it!"—Detroit Free Press.

It Sure Does.

Hear the Glee club!

Why do they call it a Glee club?

Because it effectually removes all evidences of glee from the adjacent populace.—Pittsburg Post.

THE ISLAND OF TANGIER.

Strange Yet Beatific Conditions Prevailing Upon This Little Body of Land.

In Chesapeake bay, 125 miles south of Baltimore, with which city communication by boat three times a week may be depended upon during the summer season, is the strange Island of Tangier, so completely isolated from the usual lines of travel that it hardly seems possible that it can be a part of the state of Virginia. * * * Imagine if you can, writes Charles E. Fairman, in Four-Track News, an island about five miles long and three-fourths of a mile in width, with a population of nearly 1,500, where each house is connected with Chesapeake bay by a tiny canal; an island where the population has built homes along one narrow street but nine feet in width, without sidewalks, road-bed or gutter; an island where the women go about with bare feet and calico gowns during the week, and where the men leave for their work at an early hour on Monday morning and remain away until Saturday afternoon; an island where intoxicating liquors are not sold, where billiard-rooms and pool-rooms are unknown; an island where one physician and the minister constitute the professional class; an island where profanity is punished by fine; an island without a jail or lock-up, and where religion is the rule, and to be outside of the church is to be outside of the pale of the best society; an island where public cemeteries are unknown, and where the dead of each home are buried in the front yard; if you can imagine all this you may have some faint idea of the peculiar surroundings of the inhabitants of Tangier.

HUNTER'S ODD EXPERIENCE

Fox and Hawk Attempt to Purloin Quail His Gun Had Brought Down.

Dr. William Rowland, of Pasadena, who was up at Middle Ranch quail shooting a few days prior to the close of the season, had a most unique experience, relates an Avalon correspondent of the Los Angeles Times.

He ran upon a covey of quail, and; flushing them, dropped one with his left barrel, and then, at considerable of an angle, dropped another with the right barrel. Turning to his first bird, he was just in time to see a fox snatch it up and start to run away with it. Quickly pumping another cartridge into his gun, he let the fox have it, knocking him stiff. After reconnoitering a minute, and finding his first bird, he was returning to pick up the second, when something shot down like an arrow from the skies in front of him, the object proving to be an osprey.

The quail had been wounded, and its fluttering attracted the attention of the big hawk, which, while sailing through the ether had an eye out for a quail dinner, and, darting upon the wounded bird, was about to cheat the hunter out of his quarry. Dr. Rowland, while amazed at the turn of events, did not propose to stand for such a play, and, training his ready gun on the bold robber, with a pull of the trigger put him out of commission, and saved both his birds.

PHOTOGRAPHING AN OWL.

Easy of Accomplishment If a Dog Be Brought to View of the Bird.

The great horned owl may also be fascinated by a dog, writes Silas A. Lottridge, in "The Great Horned Owl," in St. Nicholas. And the photographing of the great horned owl under these conditions is not difficult; wait until the owl seizes the fowl and stops to rest on the return to the woods; then let a dog be led to within 20 or 30 feet of the owl, and the bird will be all attention for the dog and take no apparent notice of the person leading it. The behavior of the owl at such times is very amusing. It stands motionless, gazing intently at the dog; but after a few minutes, if the dog remains quiet, the bird seems to become nervous, and steps first to one side and then to the other, hissing, snapping its beak, and ruffling its feathers. After this the owl will usually try to make off with its prey; but if another halt is made, the bird's actions show even more nervousness. While the owl's attention is thus attracted is the time to approach within "photo-distance" to get the "snap-shots."

The Papal Flag.

The papal flag is comparatively unfamiliar outside of the Eternal city. The war flag of the defunct temporal power of the pope was white, and in its center stood figures of St. Peter and St. Paul with the cross-keys and tiara above them. The flag of the merchant ships owned by the subjects of the states of the church is a curious combination, half yellow and half white, with the design of the cross-keys on the white. In the banner used by the crusader king of Jerusalem, Godfrey, the only tinctures introduced were the two metals, gold and silver, five golden crosses being placed upon a silver field. This was done with the intention of making the device unique, as in all other cases it is deemed false heraldry to place metal on metal.—Chicago Journal.

Ban on Hunting Doge.

The new game law of Minnesota has a number of stringent provisions which, it is believed, will prevent the wholesale slaughter of chickens and other game. Hunters must not kill more than fifteen chickens a day, and must not at any time have over forty-five chickens in their possession. The duck limit per day is fixed at fifty, and fisherman must not catch more than twenty-five per day, unless bull heads or worthless varieties. Fisherman must not use more than one hook on a line. Hunting out of season is to be strictly looked after and dogs must not be trained or allowed to run at large in chicken fields before the season opens. The section relating to this follows:

No person shall hunt, pursue, catch take or kill any of the animals in this chapter mentioned with any dog or dogs. Any dog used or attempted to be used in violation of the provisions of this section is hereby declared to be and is a public nuisance, and it shall be lawful for any person to kill any dog or dogs so being used or attempted to be used. The use or running of either pointer or setter dogs in the fields or upon lands frequented by or in which game birds may be found during the month of August, or at any time except during the open season for killing game birds and keeping and maintaining any dog at or about any hunting or lumber camp used by hunters situated in any locality frequented by deer, moose or caribou, is hereby prohibited and made unlawful.

is often as great as woman's. But Thos S. Austin, Mgr. of the "Republican," of Leavenworth, Ind, was not unreasonable when he refused to allow the doctors to operate on his wife, for female trouble. "Instead" he says, "we concluded to try Electric Bitters. My wife was then so sick she could hardly leave her bed, and five (5) physicians had failed to relieve her. After taking Electric Bitters, she was perfectly cured, and can now perform all her household duties." Guaranteed by W. A. Schreiter, druggist, price 50c.

DRUGS LIKELY TO ADVANCE

Many Plants That Once Grew Wild Are Disappearing with March of Civilization.

Dealers in American drugs are much alarmed at the scarcity and high price of most of the vegetable drugs indigenous to this country which have developed during the present year. Many of the drugs in chief demand have advanced from 100 to 300 per cent. in price and the suply of all is said to be small. Some of the drugs most affected by these conditions are golden seal senega root ginseng wild cherry bark, white pine bark, elder flowers, sarasaparilla root, sassafras and at least a dozen others of less importance. Golden seal in particular has advanced since January from 74 cents to $1.50 and senega root from 82½ cents to $1.15. In 1899 senega root was selling at 24 cents. White pine bark has gone up in two years from 2½ to 4½ cents. The plants from which these drugs are gathered grow wild and are said to be gradually disappearing with the march of civilization and the settlement of the country. No steps have been taken to safeguard the supply and the plants are gradually being exterminated. It is feared that this country will soon be in the same position as Germany and other countries of Europe as producers of vegetable drugs. Formerly Germany was a great producer of herbs and barks, but now these drugs are gathered chiefly in the wilds of Hungary. Drug dealers say the result will be a heavy advance in the prices of many of the commoner and more popular medicines.

STRIPED GRUNTS KISSING.

Little Fishes in New York Aquarium Afford Amusement to Spectators.

In one of the tanks at the aquarium is a lot of striped grunts, handsome little fishes from Bermuda, which do one thing that is peculiar and different from anything done by other fishes in the aquarium, relates the New York Sun.

If the outside of the glass front of the tank is stroked softly and repeatedly downward with the finger tips, the pretty fishes will come swimming toward it, opening wide their mouths, which are within of a beautiful red.

When near the glass two of them, each with its mouth wide open, will approach each other and gently lock jaws in an attitude of kissing. Sometimes when the glass has been stroked as many as four pairs of the striped grunt have gone through this performance at once.

Why the striped grunts do this nobody knows. It may be due to some sort of hypnotic influence exercised by the moving finger tips; but men experienced in the care of fishes in captivity have observed that all the species of the grunt family do the same thing in like circumstances.

Little Plume, chief of the Blackfoot Indians, of Montana, in company with another Indian chief and an interpreter, visited the aquarium one day recently and viewed all the other exhibits with interest, though with all of the Indian's traditional immobility. But at the exhibition given by the kissing striped grunts Little Plume laughed outright.

DIVORCE IN ENGLAND.

Report of Consul General Evans Shows That It Is Increasing Rapidly.

Interesting statistics concerning divorce proceedings in England and Wales are contained in an official report from United States Consul General Evans, at London. The number of petitions for dissolution of marriage filed in 1902 was 1,050, as against 900 filed in 1901. Of the petitions filed in 1902, 609 were filed by husbands and 441 by wives. The prompt action of the courts is shown by the fact that of the total number of petitions filed, 930 were set for trial during the year. Judgments were rendered as follows: For husband, plaintiff, in 397 cases; for wife, plaintiff, in 284 cases; for husband, respondent, in 17 cases, and for his wife, respondent, in ten cases. The annual number of petitions filed during the past five years was 853.

The population of England and Wales is about 33,000,000, showing, says Consul General Evans, that there was one petition for dissolution of marriage in some form filed in the courts in 1902 for about each 32,500 population. He adds that experimental or trial marriages, seemingly, are not encouraged by the ease of securing divorce, and that the sentiment of the people, sustained by the courts, is clearly against divorces or the divorced. The established church, he says, is against performing the marriage ceremony where either party to the proposed marriage is a divorced person.

TOUGHNESS OF CURRENCY.

Single Treasury Note Will Sustain Lengthwise a Weight of Forty-One Pounds.

That Uncle Sam's notes stand a great deal of rough and careless handling is a fact that impresses itself upon anyone who has ever chanced to note the manner in which the average cashier pulls and jerks the bills before he pushes them through the window to the waiting patron, says the Philadelphia Record.

A single treasury note measures 3⅛ inches in width by 7¼ inches in length. It will sustain, without breaking, lengthwise, a weight of 41 pounds; crosswise, a weight of 91 pounds. The notes run four to a sheet—a sheet being 8¼ inches wide by 13½ inches long. One of these sheets lengthwise will suspend 108 pounds, and crosswise 177 pounds.

It will be observed that a single note is capable of sustaining crosswise a weight of 91 pounds, which is twice the amount by nine pounds, of the weight the note can sustain lengthwise; while in the case of the sheet, the crosswise sheet lacks 39 pounds of double the sustaining power of the lengthwise sheet.

English Village Life.

A writer in Cornhill says of village life in England: "The plain and terrible truth of the matter is that, in districts far wider and more numerous than the kind dwellers in towns and casual visitors to our pretty villages can be expected to realize, the agricultural laborer, his wife and his children are half-starved from the beginning to the end of life."

PLANS A NEW ROAD

E. A. Nelson of the Hallock News Former State Librarian, at Head of New Company.

E. A. Nelson, former state librarian under the Van Saut administration, is at the head of a plan for the construction of a new railroad from the vicinity of St. Vincent, through Kittson, Roseau, Beltrami and Itasca counties to the head of the lakes.

Mr. Nelson is understood to represent a syndicate of wealthy men who are only awaiting the development of public interest along the line to assure them of strong support. He says:

"If it can be shown to these men that such a road is desired, they are ready to push it through. It would bring in additional railroad competition and would reduce the freight rate on grain 3 cents a 100 pounds on the average. This would save the farmers of my own home county, Kittsou, $60,000 a year."

Wants Money-Order Office.

Postmaster Dupont, of Terrebonne, is this week circulating a petition among the patrons of the office, asking that the Terrebonne post-office be made a money-order station, and it is likely that the prayers of the petitioners will be granted by the department. The Terrebonne office does a large amount of business in a year, and the patrons have felt that the government should provide them with the convenience now asked. It is to be hoped that they will be granted what they ask.

FIELD MEET IN JUNE

High School Athletes From Neighboring Towns Will Hold Competitive Meets Here Next Month.

The annual field meet of the high school association of the Red River valley will be held at this city during the coming month of June, probably the first week in that month, and plans are well under way to make the meeting highly successful.

Representatives of the various high schools in the valley, including Ada, Crookston, Warren, Fosston, Fertile and Thief River, Falls have been invited to participate and the probability is that at least four or five of the outside schools will join with our school in going after the records and prizes.

The events will include everything usually put on at these track meets, running races, jumping, vaulting, hammer throw, etc., and suitable prizes will be awarded the winner of each.

Sam E. Huut is managing the affair, along with Prof. Chamberlain, and these two gentlemen anticipate one of the most successful track meets ever held in the valley.

The complete program of events will be announced as soon as completed.

Notice.

I intend to have a class in music this summer and will give lessons on either the piano or the reed organ. I intend to begin the class on the first Monday and Tuesday of June. If you have a child whom you wish to take lessons during the vacation, I will be pleased to confer with you.

INJUNCTION IS DENIED

Judge Watts Refuses To Enjoin Auditor Ford From Filing Thief River Falls County Seat Petition.

The final hearing in the proceedings asking for a permanent injunction restraining Auditor James E. Ford from filing the petition of Thief River Falls, asking for the removal of the county seat of Red Lake county, was held at Crookston before Judge Watts last Saturday, and after reading the arguments the Judge decided that an injunction at this time was not proper, and ruled that the auditor was not the one to pass upon the legality of the petition, other than on its face, the judge's findings being that the prayer of the petitioner for a permanent injunction be denied.

Tuesday morning the petition was legally filed with Auditor Ford, and notices were at once sent out to all the legal papers in the county calling a meeting of the board of county commissioners for Monday, June 5, to act on and consider the petition of Thief River Falls, asking that the seat of goverument be moved from Red Lake Falls to Thief River Falls.

The commissioners will have full power to decide upon the legality of the petition, and it is likely that there will be "something doing" when the day for the meeting rolls around.

The future developments will be awaited with interest.

TO WED IN JUNE.

Popular Young Red Lake Falls Boy Chooses Crookston Belle.

On June 14th, in Crookston, at the home of the bride's parents will occur the marriage of Dora Eikoff, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chris Eikoff to Arthur Zaiser of Red Lake Falls. The bride-to-be has spent the greater part of her life in Crookston and is at present employed in the Journal office. Mr. Zaiser is head miller of the Red Lake Falls roller mills and is one of the best known and popular young men of that city. The foregoing from Sunday's Crookston Journal will come as a surprise to the many Red Lake Falls friends of the young couple, who will be pleased to learn of the happy event. Miss Eikoff was employed here for several months a year ago and is known as a young lady exceptionally well fitted for a help-mate to the popular young man she has chosen. The Gazette is pleased to extend advance congratulations.

ALBERS IS DEPUTY.

Receives Appointment As Boiler Inspector For This District.

Louis Albers, of this city, received word Tuesday of his appointment as deputy boiler inspector of the 61st senatorial district, comprising Red Lake, Beltrami, Clearwater and Norman counties, and will begin work immediately.

Mr. Albers has held this position for several years under Governor Van Sant, but when Governor Johnson qualified was succeeded by H. E. Zimmermau, of Ada. Mr. Zimmerman is the electrician at Ada and could not find time to care of the increased work, so appointed Mr. Alhers as his deputy, who will have complete charge of the work.

Mr. Albers is a very capable engineer and during his tenure in office as boiler inspector for this district gave the best of satisfaction and looked after the work in a careful manner. His experience fitted him as the logical deputy, and Mr Zimmerman used excellent judgement in the selection.

The appointment was made in the face of a bitter contest for the place, and friend Albers is receiving the congratulations of his friends on being the successful aspirant.

GRADUATION JUNE 5

Class of 1905 Will Hold Their Commencement Exercises At the Metropolitan On That Date.

The annual commencement exercises of the Red Lake Falls high school will be held at the Metropolitan opera house, on Monday evening, June 5, and the arrangements and program are about completed.

The first event to mark the beginning of the end will be the Junior banquet on Saturday evening, June 2, at which time the class of '06 will act as hosts to their elder class members. The banquet will be on an elaborate plan, and besides the usual feasting and merry-making, a program of toasts touching on all the phases of class and school work will be arranged for.

Sunday evening, June 4, Rev. Ansgaar, of St. Mary's church, will deliver the baccalaureate sermon to the members of the graduation class, and this feature of the exercises planned will be an important event for the young people. Rev. Ansgaar is a scholarly gentleman and one who can be depended upon to touch on many important points in the lives before the young people he will lecture to.

The program for commencement night will consist of a salutatory and oration, the class poem, class history, class prophecy and class will, four orations and the valedictory. Appropriate music will also be provided. Every number on the program that evening gives promise of being extremely meritorious, and without doubt the opera house will be filled to overflowing with the friends and admirers of the young people.

The class numbers ten members, seven girls and three boys, and is one of the largest classes graduated from the local school. Commencement night will mark an important stepping stone in their existence, but those who know them best appreciate the fact that each and every member is exceptionally well fitted to take up the work beyond with an intelligent understanding and determination to win.

Notice, G. A. R. Men.

You are requested to meet at the city hall in Red Lake Falls at 7 o'clock sharp, Sunday evening, May 28, to march in a body to St. Joseph's church, where the Rev. Father E. Fayolle will deliver an address in honor of the nation's heroes. It is especially desired that every Grand Army man in the vicinity be present.—Committee.

The tax cases of the State of Minnesota vs. J. K. Hannay and Tallef Thompson, of St. Hilaire, were tried, but no decision has yet been rendered.

Court adjourned Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock.

County Pays Bills

Thief River Falls Makes The Taxpayers Put Up The Money To Help Them Win The County Seat Of Red Lake County.

When the county seat petition was first presented to the auditor, the Thief River Falls committee represented by Alex Sweeas agreed to post all notices of the meeting of the county board to consider the petition, free of charge to the county. This was no more than right as Thief River Falls is the only place interested in having the county seat removed, and the farmer tax-payers ought not to be asked to pay for Thief River's sole benefit.

But this week when the auditor prepared the notices of meeting, he at once wrote Mr. Sweeas stating that the notices were ready for posting and asking him to make good his offer of free posting. By return mail he received answer that Sweeas refused to act.

Consequently all this work will have to be done by the sheriff and his deputies at a big expense to the county as three notices must be posted in each town in the county and the mileage and posting fees will run up in the hundreds of dollars.

THIS IS THE WAY THIEF RIVER FALLS MAKES GOOD HER FREE OFFERS.

The tax-payers must pay for it all.

This is just an instance of what the Thief River Boomers would do if they had the county seat.

That offer of a free court house would melt away in air. Sweeas would refuse to act as he did this time. Their next move would be to build a fifty thousand dollar court house at Thief River at the expense of the farmer tax-payers. This is just what one of their county seat committee said they would do when he happened in Red Lake Falls the other day.

MEN'S COLUMN.

Frank Eddy, in Sauk Center Herald.

Men ought to know that;

A pretty girl can conceal a heap of deviltry behind an innocent look.

If wooden legs were fashionable every woman would have one of hers cut off.

The joy of the honeymoon isn't to be compared to the jaw-y that comes after it.

A woman's idea of benevolence is to give somebody something they don't need.

A courtship is not regarded as a military manouver although it is a call to arms.

A woman will die for those she loves but to save her life she can't keep from scolding them for trifles.

If women's tears could blot out men's transgressions their record would be as clean as an unwritten page.

In a house of many daughters the porch next the street where the young men pass is swept the most frequently.

The two easiest things in the world for a man to do is to fall in debt and fall in love. What makes men gray headed is trying to get out.

The man who devised a crown as a symbol of absolute authority was a bachelor. If he had been a married man he would have selected a skirt.

The men who kick the most about women's clubs destroying women's home influence are the ones that seldom get home before one o'clock a. m.

If the serpent had given Eve a pretty hat instead of an apple man would never have fallen. She would not have asked Adam to wear it part of the time.

Nothing seems quite so amusing as to hear a father lecturing his son for "playing keeps" with marbles he bought for him out of winnings from a poker game

The Times is misinformed. Red Lake Falls has had an active commercial club for the past several years, which has always been alive to the interests of Red Lake Falls and her institutions. The fact that not much had been done during the past six months, isn't any indication that they are not ready to take advantage of anything looking to the welfare of Red Lake Falls, and until such time as they refused to act we will consider ourselves well hooked up in that line.

ST. HILAIRE

[From the Spectator.]

There has been quite a number of claims filed on this spring on the reservation and very little of the land is left.

Superintendent McIntyre of the Crookston schools came up last Saturday and spent the day with the Red Lake county teachers.

Sylvan Hall and Arthur Mercier drove up from Red Lake Falls last Sunday and Sylvan returned the same evening. Mr. Mercier, finding the atmosphere congenial, remained until Tuesday.

Owing to the heavy rain last Thursday night the saw mill shut down. The night crew reported for work with the exception of the platform men who refused to work so the mill was shut down for the night.

The log drive between here and Thief River Falls arrived this week with about three million. The upper river is full of logs and the recent rains have given sufficient stage of water to insure plenty of logs for all the season.

Word has been received from Rainy River that Mr. and Mr. Robt. Fritz have been called upon to mourn the death of their daughter Gertrude. The sympathy of their many friends will be extended to them in their bereavement.

H. D. Pettibone was up the river above Thief River Falls last Thursday helping the big tow boat to start up the river. It did not look promising for a ride home and the weather was bad so he started across country on foot. He did the trick in five and a half hours arriving here at eight o'clock in the evening.

Attorneys F. A. Grady and Chas. E. Boughton, of Red Lake Falls, were here Thursday, Mr. Grady has been retained by the village council in the Hannay-Thompson tax dodging cases and was here looking over the village books preparing for the cases which comes before Judge Watts at Red Lake Falls Tuesday. Mr. Boughton is the attorney for the men who want to dodge the taxes and was here looking for evidence.

Hon. L. C. Simons was here from Red Lake Falls Wednesday and spent the day looking over the business of the Merchants State Bank

Sheriff Linnihan was here yesterday from Red Lake Falls. He had some papers to serve out on the reservation and was trying to make it from here.

Mrs. W. A. Arthur and children came in last Saturday from their reservation claim and will spend a short time here until the weather permits their return.

Clearwater county will now indulge in a county seat fight as the village of Shevlin is serving notice that they will circulate a petition to move the county seat from Bagley.

A. M. Edstrom, who is the local agent for the J. I. Case threshing machines, was here trying for farmers' contract. He says that thirteen carloads of the Case threshers passed through Hazel on the Soo this week for Winnipeg.

We understand that the village council have decided to postponed all matters pertaining to sidewalks until after the tax dodging cases have been decided If they are against the village when the old sidewalks wear out we will have to "mud it" and look pleasant.

Man's Unreasonableness

is often as great as woman's. But Thos S. Austin, Mgr. of the "Republican," of Leavenworth, Ind, was not unreasonable when he refused to allow the doctors to operate on his wife, for female trouble. "Instead" he says, "we concluded to try Electric Bitters. My wife was then so sick she could hardly leave her bed, and five (5) physicians had failed to relieve her. After taking Electric Bitters, she was perfectly cured, and can now perform all her household duties." Guaranteed by W. A. Schreiter, druggist, price 50c.

We regret to say that there are some boys here in Plummer who take a delight in shooting little birds with small calibre rifles. It is a practice that savors little of the manhood to which these youths aspire. It is both illegal and disgraceful to kill the little song birds whose coming in spring and company during the following months should be regarded as a delight to both old and young. And we may add that the discharging of fire arms is prohibited within the village limits and some of these young fellows may be arrested at any time. Just remember that the use of these small rifles is extremely dangerous as well as illegal.

The most important change made by the Minneapolis legislature in the fish laws to reduce the number that may be caught from fifty to twenty-five fish. The penalty for violation of the above is a fine of from $10 to $100 or from 10 to 60 days in jail. The length of fish may be caught is limited to six inches for all except pike which must not be less than 14 inches in length. Penalty for violation same as above.

Millionaire's Poor Stomach.

The worn-out stomach of the over-fed millionaire is often paraded in the public prints as a horrible example of the vile attendant on the possession of great wealth. But millionaires are not the only ones who are afflicted with bad stomachs. The proportion is far greater among the toilers. Dyspepsia and indigestion are rampant among these people, and they suffer far worse tortures than the millionaire unless they avail themselves of a standard medicine like Green's August Flower, which has been a favorite household remedy for all stomach troubles for over thirty-five years. August Flower rouses the torpid liver, thus creating appetite and insuring perfect digestion. It tones and vitalizes the entire system and makes life worth living, no matter what your station. Trial bottles, 25c; regular size 75c. At all druggists. A. L. Reichert.

"Wonderland" A Wonder.

Another volume has been added to the rich "Wonderland" series issued by the Northern Pacific railroad, a literature not only attractive to the eye. but of historic value. The 1905 Wonderland just issued, is a triumph of decorative illustrations, containing a large number of chapters and new features. By a system of inserts the book is made to contain magnificent half-tone illustrations four pages in width, the notable ones being panoramas of Duluth, of Isle Royale and of Yellowstone park.

The first new feature in the book is a description of the new Minnesota state capitol, with photographs of interior and exterior and of the first and second capitol buildings of the state. Then there is a chapter on "The Shores of Kitchigami," or Lake Superior with illustrations of Duluth harbor and of scenery along the north shore, including Isle Royale. The wonderful nature sculpture in Pyramid park, formerly the "bad lands" region of North Dakota, is illustrated and described in another chapter. Olin D. Wheele, the indefatigable editor of Wonderland, contributes a chapter of unwritten Montana history telling how N. P. Langford, now of St. Paul, was seated as a delegate from the new territory in the republican national convention of 1864, at Baltimore. A thrilling frontier story is entitled "The Sepulchre of Lane Deer," one of the chiefs who took part in the Custer massacre and was pursued and killed in a fight with General Miles. He is supposed to have been laid away in a natural cave overlooking the Rosebud valley, which was sealed up and has since been pointed out by the daughter of the old chief.

The usual chapter on Yellowstone park is featured by splendid photographs of the geyser region and attention is called in another chapter to beautiful Lake Kachess, nestling high among the crags of the Cascades. The Lewis and Clark exposition at Portland is illustrated and described at length. Other picturesque points along the Northern Pacific line are shown in striking half-tone illustrations. The book as a whole is a worthy successor to the notable series of this railroad's publications. It is sent to any address on receipt of 6 cents for postage.

Climatic Cures.

The influence of climate conditions in the cure of consumption is very much overdrawn. The poor patient, and the rich patient, too, can do much better at home by proper attention to food digestion, and a regular use of German Syrup. Free expectoration in the morning is made certain by German Syrup, so is a good night's rest and the absence of that weakening cough and debilitating night sweat. Restless nights and the exhaustion due to coughing, the greatest danger and dread of the consumptive, can be prevented or stopped by taking German Syrup liberally and regularly. Should you be able to go to a warmer clime, you will find that of the thousands of consumptives there, the few who are benefited and regain strength are those who use German Syrup. Trial bottles, 25c; regular size, 75c. At all druggists A. L. Reichert.

GOLDEN NUGGETS FOR SALLOW PEOPLE

WORK OF TORNADO

TOWN OF SNYDER, OKLA., PRACTICALLY WIPED OUT BY SEVERE WIND STORM.

MORE THAN ONE HUNDRED PERSONS KILLED AND SCORES SUSTAIN INJURIES.

LOSS TO PROPERTY ESTIMATED AT FOUR HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS.

Snydsr, Okla., May 12.—Ninety-five persone are known to be dead, a dozen ars missing and given up for dead and 150 more are injured, seven fatally, resultant from the tornado which tore through this vicinity at 8:40 Wednesday night.

In a number of cases entire families were killed and in almost every family in town some member was injured.

The havoc wrought by the tornado is complete. Out of a town of 1,000 people not more than a score of houses are intact, whils two-thirds of the buildings are totally wrecked.

The property loss is variously estimated at $400,000. Two hundred residences are demolished and about half the business buildings are a total loss. The remainder are more or less damaged.

The tornado struck Snyder from the southwest, traveling north until within about 100 yards from the tracks of the Oklahoma City and Western railway. There it took a northeasterly course through the business portion of the town. North of the track not a building was left standing.

Storm Formed Near Texas Line.

The storm formed south of Oulstee, near the Texas line, and took a northeasterly course through a well settled section. At 8 o'clock it was observed by the people of Snyder, but the usual funnel shaped formation was lacking, and though the roar was plainly heard for some time before the storm broke, many were of the opinion that it was a hail storm. Within a few minutes the sky became suddenly dark and a terrific downpour of rain began, lasting for several minutes, when it stopped almost as suddenly as it had commenced. A few moments after this an ominous calm followed and then the tornado struck, tearing buildings to pieces as though they were made of papsr.

Many people who had thought to take advantage of the calm to seek refuge in cellars were caught in the streets and between buildings, where some were lifted high in the air and dashed to the ground as though hurled from a catapult, while others were struck by flying debris and beaten almost beyond recognition. Those who remained in their houses fared no better in the path of the tornado, which swept across all excepting a few blocks in the southeastern corner of the town. The frame structures collapsed like eggshells, burying occupants under the debris, killing, crushing and maiming.

Six Hotels Demolished.

Six of the eight hotels were torn to pieces, burying many in the wreckage. North of the railroad track, where many cottages stood, none is left and there the wreckage is mostly carried away.

In a few moments it was all over and the air was filled with shricks of injured, mingled with cries of those who had escaped and were seeking lost ones. Within a short time messengers were dispatched to Mountain Park, two and a half miles away, where the news was sent by telephone to Hobart. Physicians and nurses were called for and relief trains were made up at Mangum, Hobart, Chickasha and Lawton and hurried to the scene by the railroads. Many of the ablebodied survivors in Snyder were working heroically all through the night amidst the most heartrending scenes. A building was utilized for a temporary hospital and another used as a morgue. The latter, a dry goods building, presented a gruesome appearance when day dawned with the corpses lying tier above tier on the shelves. The search for bodies continued during the day and at 9 p. m. ninety-five had been recovered. Others are being searched for, which with the casualties reported from the country will probably raise the death list to above 100. Several fatally injured will raise the list of casualties.

It is also believed that the steamer was inside the zone that ships have been warned to avoid.

MORE THAN ONE HUNDRED OTHERS INJURED IN SERIOUS RAILROAD DISASTER.

Passenger Train Collides With Derailed Freight at Harrisburg, Pa., and an Explosion of a Car of Blasting Powder Follows—Flames Break Out in the Wreckage and the Imprisoned Passengers Meet a Terrible Death by Cremation.

Harrisburg, Pa., May 11.—Twenty persons are believed to have been killed and approximately 100 injured by the wrecking of the Cleveland and Cincinnati express, westbound, on the Pennsylvania railroad, which dashed into a wrecked eastbound freight train, exploding a car filled with 50,000 pounds of blasting powder. The wreck occurred in the southern part of Harrisburg at 1:40 a. m. It was one of the most terrible disasters ever experienced by the Pennsylvania railroad.

The primary cause of the wreck was a shifting engine. It was going west slowly when the engineer of the eastbound freight train saw it coming on his track. He applied the airbrakes suddenly, which caused the middle of the freight train to buckle, shoving several of the cars onto the westbound passenger track. A moment later the express, one of the fastest night trains on the road, came along and dashed into the wrecked cars. The next instant the boiler of the passenger locomotive exploded. The wreck took fire and those who escaped began the work of rescue. Six minutes after the express struck the freight wreck, the railroad men say, the flames reached the car filled with powder. There was a flash and a deafening roar. The earth trembled as though some terrible seismic disturbance had occurred. All who were not killed and injured by the explosion fled from the awful scene.

Wreckage a Mass of Flames.

The entire wreckage became a mass of flames and small boxes of powder that had not exploded "let go" continuously. While these explosions continued men who had bravely gone to the rescue before the first explosion did not dare to approach the burning wreck, though they could hear the agonized shrieks of the dying.

Flames began their cruel feast of human bodies that were helplessly pinned in the wreckage. An alarm of fire was turned in and when the firemen arrived it was impossible for them to go closer than 300 yards of the fire until the explosions ceased. Then the intense heat interfered with the work of rescue. Men of the boldest nerve were forced to retire with singed hair, blistered faces and burning clothing when they attempted to respond to the piteous cries for help. Those who escaped by leaping and crawling through windows, in scant attire, from their sleeping car berths, hurried to the open fields, where they were gathered together and carried to the offices and workshops of the Paxtang Electric Light company and other industrial plants, which were quickly transformed into temporary hospitals and later into morgues.

Victims of the disaster were burned to a crisp. So completely incinerated were the bodies that only four of those recovered could be identified.

FLEET SAILS NORTH

ADMIRAL ROJESTVENSKY IS NO LONGER IN THE VICINITY OF KAMRANH BAY.

Saigon, Cochin-China, May 15.—The Russian fleet, which reappeared off Honkohe bay, a short distance north of Kamranh bay, sailed northward early on the morning of May 14. No warships have since been sighted there.

Admiral de Jonquieres, the French naval commander at Saigon, telegraphs from Nhatrang, Annam, that he has visited all the bays as far north as Turan and found no Russian vessels.

St. Petersburg, May 16.—A naval action within a few days is regarded as likely in well informed naval circles. The Associated Press learns that Admiral Rojestvensky and Rear Admiral Nebogatoff joined forces May 10. There is reason to believe the united fleet will proceed northward immediately. No delay was necessary for the purpose of coaling or cleaning Nebogatoff's ships, as his division made a stop for this purpose before entering the straits of Malacca.

HUNGARIAN MINE DISASTER.

Twenty-two Men Killed by Premature Explosion.

Budapest, Hungary, May 13.—Twenty-two miners were killed during the day by a premature explosion during blasting operations in the Almasy coal mine at Resicza.

No Knowledge of Russian Fleet.

Saigon, Cochin-China, May 13.—Nothing has been heard of the movements of Admiral Rojestvensky's fleet since May 9, when the Russians left Vanfong bay.

JURY FAILS TO AGREE

SECOND TRIAL OF DR. KOCH OF NEW ULM, MINN., RESULTS SAME AS FIRST.

After Deliberating Almost Forty-eight Hours Without Reaching a Verdict the Court Discharges the Twelve Men From Further Consideration of the Case—Prisoner Remains in Jail Pending Decision for Release on Bail.

Mankato, Minn., May 16.—The jury in the second trial of Dr. George R. Koch, accused of killing Dr. L. A. Gebhardt at New Ulm Nov. 1 last, was discharged at noon, being unable to agree after deliberating nearly forty-eight hours.

The jury came into court at 9 a. m. and the foreman informed Judge Cray that an agreement was impossible. The foreman told the court they were divided seven to five, but he was not allowed to state whether the majority favored conviction or acquittal. After considering the statement for a moment Judge Cray sent the jury back for further deliberation and urged them to endeavor to reach a verdict. Shortly before noon the jury again came into court, the foreman announced no change in the situation and Judge Cray dismissed the twelve men from further consideration of the case.

It is understood the state will insist on a third trial of the case. General Childs, leading counsel for the prosecution, contends that the placing of Koch in jail at the close of the present trial was tantamount to cancelling his bail and he will oppose his release on bond at this time.

NAN PATTERSON FREE

FORMER ACTRESS ACCUSED OF MURDER RELEASED ON HER OWN RECOGNIZANCE.

New York, May 12.—Nan Patterson, the one time "Florodora" show girl, was released from the Tombs prison during the day after almost a year within its walls awaiting a determination of the charge that she had murdered her protector, "Caesar" Young, a racetrack bookmaker. She left for Washington during the afternoon. She was loudly cheered by a crowd of 200 persons as she left the prison.

Her release was made at the instance of District Attorney Jerome, who said he did not believe another trial would result other than in a disagreement. At the same time he declared that there had been a serious miscarriage of justice. He said many of the newspapers had labored to create sympathy for the girl and that this case had "caused one more step in this country towards trial by newspaper rather than trial by jury."

KILLS FOUR PERSONS.

Insane Man Runs Amuck at San Diego, Cal.

San Diego, Cal., May 16.—William P. Robinson, a house cleaner, ran amuck in this city during the day, killing four persons, fatally wounding another, causing serious injuries to still another and then blew out his brains.

The dead are: William Stewart, Mrs. Emma Stewart, H. W. Chase, Harry Doddridge and W. P. Robinson.

Mrs. W. H. Doddridge was fatally wounded and W. S. Doddridge was seriously injured.

At first it was supposed to be the work of a liquor crazed man. Later it was stated, however, that Robinson had been heard to make threats against Doddridge, who he claimed had been engaged in an attempt to have him "shanghaied" when he was a sailor.

Brother Asserts He Was Not a Victim of Foul Play.

Kansas City, May 15.—Richard Croker, Jr., arrived here during the day on the way to New York city with the body of his brother, Herbert V. "I am satisfied with the investigation the police have made of my brother's movements while in Kansas City. I have nothing to say about his death except that I am sure he died from natural causes; that he was not the victim of foul play."

No further investigation of the case is to be made.

OBSERVE MEMORIAL DAY.

The Gazette has been asked whether or not Red Lake Falls will take any part in the universal celebration of that great day to all of the old guards—Memorial Day—and while we have not yet heard of any plans being made, we should hate very much to say that no attempt will be made here this year to honor these heroes, living and departed.

But a few years must yet elapse before the old guards who put forth the best years of their life battling for their nation's pride and honor will have joined the silent majortty on the other shore, and it should be the pride and delight of every hamlet in the country to do honor to their deeds of valor, by an appropriate celebration of Memorial Day.

To those who pride themselves on being citizens of the grandest country on the earth, the work of fittingly observing this great day should be a labor of love, and we should regret very much to know that Red Lake Falls would refuse to make anf effort in that direction.

Isn't it time to get busy, gentlemen?

"Jack" Eastman writes Red Lake Falls' obituary notice in his last week's News. John always was an amoosin' cuss, but this latest effort of his out Herods Herod for truth and veracity. Jack, you're a peach.

The Gazette is a "yellow journal" according to that bright young editorial scribe of the Thief River Press. It's better to put out a "yellow" sheet, Mc., than none at all, so you had better hire someone to give you a dipping in some yellow ocre, especially if it will have the effect of making a real newspaper out of the Press.

The jury in the Koch murder trial at Mankato disagreed, and the second trial of the young dentist has succeeded in doing nothing but bringing a big bill of expense on the county, while the murder of Dr. Gebhardt goes unavenged. The jury stood seven to five for conviction, which is proof positive that all the evidence introduced didn't get into the papers. It is likely that Dr. Koch will be tried again soon, but there seems to be considerable of a question whether or oot they will ever be able to convict him, especially on the present evidence. If he is guilty, he is certainly one of the nerviest criminals in the history of the state, as at no time has the prosecution succeeded in getting him confused or away from his first story as to his whereabouts the night of the murder. If the young man is innocent it is to be regretted that cirumstances have made it possible to put him on trial, as the ordeals through which he has had to pass would have wrecked many a stronger man. It is to be hoped that the third trial will succeed in bringing to light sufficient new evidence on one side or the other, in order that he be found either guilty of the murder in the first degree, or given his liberty, completely exonerated of the terrible charge against him.

MAY 17.

In this section, where those particular descendents of the Norsemen known as the Norwegians have played and are playing so important a part, the significance of the observance of May 17 can not escape the thoughtful citizen. The very depth of feeling manifested by the sons and daughters of Norway on these anniversaries is a worthy testimonial to the character of Norwegians as a people—for where there is concentration and devotion to a national ideal in the hearts of a people, there must be, too, fertile soil for the growth of individual virtues. Show us a people devoid of patriotism, of civic pride, and we show you a people decadent, with the heart-fire burned out. That reverence for national institutions, that fealty to country, that spirit of obedience to law, that intellectual culture which distinguish the Norwegian race,—the very elements which have made the Norwegian a good citizen as a Norwegian, have served to place him equally high in in the scale of American citizenship. Thus all true Americans second the honor that is accorded by these loyal subjects to their old flag—which significantly floats here on the flagstaff below the waving Stars and Stripes.

The history of the event that made May 17 the national holiday, may be briefly told:

On May 17, 1814, a treaty was made with Denmark whereby a constitution was granted to Norway, which practically made the latter nation independent. Norway broke away from the rule of Denmark and joined with Sweden. In order to satisfy the claims of the King of Sweden it was agreed that the King of Sweden should always rule Norway, under the rule of a limited monarchy. The nation is practically independent, the rule of the king of Sweden is limited to about the same degree as that of King Edward of England. The treaty of 1814 has stood to this day and the nations of Sweden and Norway are united under peaceful relations and both nations celebrate the independence of Norway and its union with Sweden. This is the 91st anniversary of the birth of Norwegian freedom.

Editor Frank Packard, of the Crookston Journal, thinks that the local censorship against a live newspaper is sometimes more strict than the foreign censorship dares to be, as notice the following from last Friday's Journal: "One of the exchanges from Rome unblushingly says that the stork will soon pay a visit to the king and queen of Italy. If the Journal should show this same degree of enterprise in recording the local news we'd soon be in trouble all over town."

The Bemidji Pioneer pays Attorney W. A. McIntyre, of this city, the following deserved compliment: "The ready knowledge of law, good sense, abilty and fairness displayed by W. A. McIntyre, chairman of the investigating commission appointed by Governor Johnson to inquire into the charges against the Beltrami county officials mark him as an exceptionally able jurist. When the Fourteenth Judical District wants another judge it will have in Mr. McIntyre an unusual opportunity."

AN ASSET WORTH WHILE.

Co-incident with the increased attention to dairying by farmers of the Red River Valley or any other community, the importance and value of the hay crop increases says the Crookston Times. While corn fodder is superior to wild hay as a milk producer the farmers of this section, as a rule have not come to depend on corn, though its use is steadily increasing. A good hay crop is worth thousands of dollars to the valley and its importance is often overlooked at this time of the year when but little can be heard but grain crop talk. The hay crop is of prime importance not as food for the cow alone but for all stock. While straw can be fed, and there is generally a super-abundance of it, the results of straw feeding are not satisfactory with cows and at all times means an additional ration of grain. An abundant hay crop means a saving of grain, of large sums to the farmers and a greatly increased milk flow from their cows in the winter. One result of the recent copious rains will be to give the grass a splendid start. The ground has been so thurougbly soaked that every particle of wild hay land will produce a fine crop with moderste rains at intervals during the balance of the season.

HOW TWO BEAUTIFUL WOMEN ESCAPED SPRING CATARRH BY USE OF PE-RU-NA.

Nothing Robs One of Strength Like Spring Catarrh---Spring Fever is Spring Catarrh.

Mrs. Leone Dolehan.

Mrs. Leone Dolehan, in a letter from the Commercial Hotel, Minneapolis, Minn., writes:

The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio.

Gentlemen: "For two months my physician experimented with me trying to cure a hard cold which settled in my stomach, causing inflammation and catarrh. I then made up my mind he was simply unable to help me, and reading some of the flattering testimonials as to the value of Peruna in such cases, I thought I would try it.

"It was six weeks before I could eat a meal without unpleasant effects, but I have now been well for six months, and I give all the credit to Peruna."—Mrs. Leone Dolehan.

Miss Helen Whitman.

Miss Helen Whitman, 808¼ Grand Ave., Milwaukee, Wis., writes:

"There is nothing like Peruna for that tired feeling, which gives you no ambition for work or play. After a prolonged illness, about a year ago I felt unable to regain my health, but four bottles of Peruna made a wonderful change and restored me to perfect health. As long as you keep your blood in a good condition you are all right, and Peruna seems to fill the veins with pure, healthful blood. I thoroughly endorse it."—Miss Helen Whitman.

How to Get Strong Nerves.

First, repair the injury already done to your nerves. The way to do this is to do exactly as did Mr. Hal. P. Denton, Chief Department Publicity and Promotion of National Export Exposition.

He writes: "Toward the latter part of August I found myself in a very much run-down condition. My family physician said I had nervous prostration and recommended a sea voyage. I gradually grew worse. A kind friend whom I had known in Ohio recommended Peruna. Though skeptical, I finally yielded to his advice. After using one bottle I was much improved and with the fifth bottle came complete recovery. I am in perfect health today and owe everything to Peruna."—Hal. P. Denton.

A Spring Tonic.

Almost everybody needs a tonic in the spring. Something to brace the nerves, invigorate the brain, and cleanse the blood. That Peruna will do this is beyond all question. Everyone who has tried it has had the same experience as Mrs. D. W. Timberlake, of Lynchburg, Va., who, in a recent letter, made use of the following words: "I always take a dose of Peruna after business hours, as it is a great thing for the nerves. There is no better spring tonic, and I have used about all of them."—Mrs. D. W. Timberlake.

Catarrh in Spring.

The spring is the best time to treat catarrh. Nature renews herself every spring. The system is rejuvenated by spring weather. This renders medicines more effective. A short course of Peruna, assisted by the balmy air of spring, will cure old, stubborn cases of catarrh that have resisted treatment for years. Everybody should have a copy of Dr. Hartman's latest book on catarrh. Address The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio.

A Good Idea.

A blackboard of suitable size will now be found in every passenger depot in the state where there is a telegraph operator, on which will be place a little information regarding the arrival of passenger trains. Twenty minutes before the scheduled arrival time the operator will write on the board the fact of whether the train is on time or not, if late how late and give the number of the train. This is in accordance with a recent law and failure to provide the information on the board lays the company liable to a fine of $25 per day.

Nine Nations

Now Use Liquozone. Won't You Try It—Free?

Millions of people, of nine different nations, are constant users of Liquozone. Some are using it to get well; some to keep well. Some to cure germ diseases; some as a tonic. No medicine was ever so widely employed. These users are everywhere; your neighbors and friends are among them. And half the people you meet—wherever you are—know some-one whom Liquozone has cured.

If you need help, please ask some of these users what Liquozone does. Don't blindly take medicine for what medicine cannot do. Drugs never kill germs. For your own sake, ask about Liquozone; then let us buy you a full-size bottle to try.

We Paid $100,000

For the American rights to Liquozone. We did this after testing the product for two years, through physicians and hospitals, after proving, in thousands of different cases, that Liquozone destroys the cause of any germ disease.

Liquozone has, for more than 20 years, been the constant subject of scientific and chemical research. It is not made by compounding drugs, nor with alcohol. Its virtues are derived solely from gas—largely oxygen gas—by a process requiring immense apparatus and 14 days' time. The result is a liquid that does what oxygen does. It is a nerve food and blood food—the most helpful thing in the world to you. Its effects are exhilarating, vitalizing, purifying. Yet it is a germicide so certain that we publish on every bottle an offer of $1,000 for a disease germ that it cannot kill. The reason is that germs are vegetables; and Liquozone—like an excess of oxygen—is deadly to vegetal matter.

There lies the great value of Liquozone. It is the only way known to kill germs in the body without killing the tissue, too. Any drug that kills germs is a poison, and it cannot be taken internally. Every physician knows that medicine is almost helpless in any germ disease.

Germ Diseases.

These are the known germ diseases. All that medicine can do for these troubles is to help Nature overcome the germs, and such results are indirect and uncertain. Liquozone attacks the germs, wherever they are. And when the germs which cause a disease are destroyed, the disease must end, and forever. That is inevitable.

James Gilbertson, of the town of River Falls, was arrested the first of the week for setting a prairie fire. He was brought here for trial, but the complaining witness refused to prosecute and Mr. Gilbertson was released.

Rudolph Warberg, one of Lambert's progressive citizens, was a caller at this office yesterday, while in the city attending to some business matters. Mr. Warberg says that things look good in his part of the county, and that indications point to an extra large crop.

Landlord W. H. Kreuger, of the Grand View hotel, has been so happy this week that he hasn't been able to talk, and all on account of the arrival of a brand new "cook" at his house Friday evening. The late arrival has not yet assumed her new duties, but in Billy's midnight parades up and down the room with her in his unaccustomed arms he is vainly endeavoring to impress upon her the importance of the station she is to occupy. Billy Holberg returned last Thursday from St. Paul and has again taken his place behind the counters at the Busy Store Billy has suffered a long time with an ailment of his foot, but the treatment taken at the hospital during the past six months has helped him wonderfully and he expects to be entirely cured of the trouble within a short time.

The steamer Beltrami which was built last winter at Thief River Falls and which was moored at a point two and a half miles above that town waiting for enough water to allow her to make the lakes, was steamed up last week and taken up, the rains having swollen the river enough to allow her to make the trip successfully. The boat will be used in towing logs for the Crookston Lumber company across the Red lake.

The Red Lake river has been giving the people of Crookston the scare again this week, and part of the town along its banks has been under water. The heavy rains have made the head of water very heavy in both the Red Lake and Clearwater rivers, the tributary ditches having added considerably to the flow. The danger point is over, however, and the people along the low lands in and around Crookston and the Forks are resting easier.

Crookston Times: L. Seiff, of Red Lake Falls, passed through the city yesterday upon his way to Downer gravel pit with a car load of heavy draught horses which he will put to work for Castle Brothers, who have the contract for stripping the pit there. Mr. Seiff recently has had considerable trouble at Red Lake Falls in regard to horse deals. He will be employed with the work at Downer during the entire early portion of the summer.

J. Drew Marshall was appointed electrician for the Red Lake Falls Electric Light company this week, and during the summer will have entire charge of the outside work for the company. Electrician Sam Allard, who has been ill nearly all winter, will not be sufficiently strong enough to attend to the work before fall, and the company named Mr. Marshall to act in that capacity for the summer months, at least. Drew is well posted in matters electrical, and can be depended on to give the people the best of service.

Crookston Times: Charles Morley departed Friday morning for St. Hilaire where he will during the next few days enjoy a pleasant visit with with old friends and acquaintances, and incidentally get Harry Ives' gasoline "go devil" in shape for use. Harry has had extremely hard luck with his horseless carriage and has been seen upon more than one occasion pushing the "durned thing" in from the country. It has a penchant for taking him several miles at break-neck speed and then getting its owner all frustrated in his attempts to make it get back into town; the general result being the "pushee allee wayee into townee." Mr. Morley is somewhat of an expert with the gasoline rigs and will endeavor to doctor up Harry's machine in first class style.

The local band organization added several new players to their ranks this week, and will appear Friday evening with a band of twenty-eight men. The new members are all old players, and fill up some important places in the instrumentation of the organization. The heavy rains the latter part of last week made the rivers and streams in this neighborhood go on considerable of a rampage and in several instances bridges came near going out. The bridge over the creek at Badger was badly damaged by the water, while both approaches to the bridge across the ditch nine miles east were washed away, and teams were obliged to ford the ditch. The Badger creek is reported to have reached the highest stage in its history, caused no doubt from the volume of water carried into it by the ditches. Several farms along its banks were badly flooded.

DYSPEPSIA FROM BAD TEETH

Bicarbonate of Soda in Solution Recommended as a Good Mouth Wash.

The close connection between decayed teeth and diseases of the digestion is pointed out by a medical writer. The presence of free acids in the mouth is particularly harmful. These may come from various sources, but most commonly from the acid fermentation of the carbo-hydrate food lodged on or between the teeth at the gums, and due to the action of micro-organisms present in the mouth.

Normally the saliva is alkaline, and any acids produced in the crevices of the teeth are thus neutralized and decay prevented. There are two conditions under which the saliva is unable to neutralize the acids produced locally—namely: First, when it is deficient in alkalinity, and, second, when it is deficient in quantity. As to the former, it is well known that the saliva becomes less alkaline or even acid in any condition of prolonged gastric digestion, a phenomenon which occurs in nearly all cases of dyspepsia.

Moreover, the teeth when decayed further tend to keep up the state of chronic dyspepsia by rendering mastication imperfect. A vicious circle is thus established. To obviate this form of dental disease the teeth should be washed frequently with a solution of which one of the ingredients is bicarbonate of soda. This may prevent one of the mouth disagreeable results of the disease—facial neuralgia.

Catch Pike-Headed Whale.

Provincetown, Mass., will have the honor of sending to the Smithsonian institution a perfect specimen of one of the rarest varieties of whale, known as the "pike-headed whale." Capt. Backus, of the House Point life-saving station, found the whale stranded, well up on the beach, and still alive, and made a line fast to it. The whale was sold to Sylvester Ellis and he received $90 for it.

Great Snakes in Missouri.

A Boston engineer has discovered the remains of a huge prehistoric animal, possibly a dinosaur, near Sedalia, Mo. Missouri is a state in which it is easy to see things, but this creature, since similar remains have been found in Kansas, may turn out to antedate the use of alcohol among the human tribes.

An Unnecessary Measure.

As to that story about the czar's attempt at suicide, just reflect for a moment how unnecessary such an extreme measure would be in a land where the guild of journeymen bomb throwers is so enthusiastically active.

ARMISTICE DECLARED.

Chicago Strike Will Not Be Extended for a Few Days.

Chicago, May 16.—A practical armistice in the teamsters' strike was declared Monday night, to last until the officers of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters meet here either on Wednesday or Thursday of this week.

The employers during the day operated 2,000 wagons, practically without interference, many of the deliveries in the residence portion of the city being made without police protection. It is asserted that the number of wagons in service will be increased by 250 at once and that this ratio will be continued each day until the full number of wagons is in service again.

As a result of the day's developments in the teamsters' strike the labor leaders assert that the strike, aided financially by unions all over the country, will spread in a marked degree. An appeal for funds has been sent out by President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor. The employers, however, predict a speedy settlement. Ground for this prediction is found in a telegram sent by President Shea of the teamsters' union to President Gompers

BLACK-DRAUGHT STOCK & POULTRY MEDICINE

This great stock medicine is a money saver for stock raisers. It is a medicine, not a cheap food or condition powder. Though put up in coarser form than Thedford's Black-Draught, renowned for the cure of the digestion troubles of persons, it has the same qualities of invigorating digestion, stirring up the torpid liver and loosening the constipated bowels for all stock and poultry. It is carefully prepared and its action is so healthful that stock grow and thrive with an occasional dose in their food. It cures hog cholera and makes hogs grow fat. It cures chicken cholera and roup and makes hens lay. It cures constipation, distemper and colds in horses, murrain in cattle, and makes a draught animal do more work for the food consumed. It gives animals and fowls of all kinds new life. Every farmer and raiser should certainly give it a trial.

It costs 25c. a can and saves ten times its price in profit.

PITTSBURG, KAS., March 25, 1904.

I have been using your Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine on my stock for some time. I have used all kinds of stock food but I have found that yours is the best for my purpose.

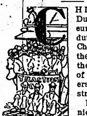
PUBLIC OWNERSHIP

CHICAGO NOW TO MAKE LONG-TALKED OF EXPERIMENT.

LEADER THE NEW MAYOR

Pros and Cons of the Question—Orators in Late Campaign Advocated While Others Warned—Result of General Interest.



CHICAGO—Judge Dunne has assumed his new duties as mayor of Chicago. And now the people await the carrying out of municipal ownership of Chicago street railways.

It was the municipal ownership feature of the platform that elected Judge Dunne. Some philosopher remarked at the time of the election that many of the gentlemen exercising their suffrage privilege on that day thought voting for Judge Dunne meant an immediate three-cent fare, that once the candidate was in office the poor man might begin to hoard his hard-earned nickels.

Whether or not this fling was an injustice to the Chicago voter we are not informed, but may surmise the mass of the people arrayed itself on the side it thought would make a radical move towards the betterment of transportation. If Chicago voters en masse do not possess superior intelligence, even the most unlettered knows five cents should entitle him to a seat or at least a strap in a street car, knows whether or not the cars are uncomfortable and slow.

Judge Dunne's opponents said intelligence came in in proper selection of reforms; they averred they, too, stood for municipal ownership, but municipal ownership worked out gradually. Mr. Harlan, the republican candidate, declared that, owing to the complications of the question, to the fact that the different franchises expired at different times, the best plan would be to make new contracts, all the franchises to expire at one and the same time; it being demanded that the companies in the meantime put their lines in good condition.

Charges and counter charges flew merrily back and forth. Judge Dunne told the people that Harlan was acting as the "agent of the Morgan and Wall street crowd of corporate and overfed trust magnates." In return the Harlan men told the people the plan of immediate ownership would cost the city $50,000,000 more than it ought; that Dunne, rather than Harlan, would be playing into the hands of the greedy trusts.

View of the Conservatives.

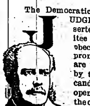
THOSE that opposed Judge Dunne's plan as offered during the campaign, denounced it as irrational, unbusinesslike and dangerous. We cull here and there from the campaign speeches: "In this proposition to pay the traction companies a 'fair, liberal and full price,' for all their tangible property and franchise rights he (Dunne) favors J. Pierpont Morgan and not the city by enabling Wall street to sell franchise rights to the city for many millions of dollars, when these same rights were given to the traction companies without money and without price. In addition to the fair, liberal and full price the city would have to expend $40,000,000 or $50,000,000 to reconstruct the lines. This would make a capitalization so large that the city could not meet the interest charge, the operating expenses, the cost of maintainence and provide a sinking fund to pay off the mortgage. Bankruptcy would quickly follow or the rate of fare would have to be raised to six or seven cents."

How about our voters' three-cent fare?

The opposition continued: "If the street car lines are to be bought the city should get them as cheaply as possible. Why offer in advance to pay Morgan and his associates a 'full, fair and liberal' amount for a lot of junk and a lot of franchise rights, the latter of which the city donated to the company without any cost, except grafters' fees? Shall we buy back this watered stock and pay good hard dollars for it?

If Judge Dunne could get the car lines immediately, as he proposes, and at the price he says he is willing to pay, the chances are many to one that Wall street would get back the lines within three years with the right of free operation on the streets for 20 years."

The Democratic Side.



JUDGE Dunne asserted the Harlanites were vague, obscure in their promises. These are the words used by the democratic candidate in his opening speech of the campaign: "As between the two platforms, one is sincere, one is straightforward, one will accomplish things; one stands for municipal ownership that will own and municipal operation that will operate, while the other platform is so guarded and hedged about with affidavits that it never will bring an ownership that will own or an operation that will operate. By the plans of the republican platform extension of street railways franchises can be given, and if the republican candidate for mayor is selected extension will be given. Under the democratic platform no extension of such franchises can be given, and I promise you if I am elected none will be given."

Judge Dunne referred to the more than local importance of the election. "The coming election will probably be the most important municipal election that has been held in the United States for at least half a century, important not only in its effect upon the people of Chicago, but in its effect upon every municipality in the country. Upon its result depends the question as to whether or not American cities are to take the course pursued by European and Australian cities in owning and operating their own street car systems, or whether the cities of America shall adhere to the mistaken course hitherto followed in farming out the management of their utilities to private capitalists."

Judge Dunne makes this reply to Mr. Harlan's speech about calling on the city for such a large sum: "If private companies having only the security offered by the tangible property and by the 20-year franchise can raise $117,000,000 upon $27,000,000 worth of actual, tangible property, what is to prevent the city of Chicago from now on much better security raising the same amount of money? It will not be necessary to raise any such amount. The city of Chicago can to-day, unless I am very much mistaken, not only pay the present companies full value for all the property and franchises they now own to the last cent, but can reequip and modernize the present broken-down plants for less than $80,000,000."

What Yerkes Says.

THE one-time street railway magnate of Chicago, Charles T. Yerkes, now the London magnate, in an interview with a correspondent of the Chicago Daily News, forecasts failure for Mayor Dunne's municipal ownership. By way of emphasis of a dead-sure thing, Mr. Yerkes said to his interviewer: "Chicago can no more run street railways successfully than you can take wings to-morrow and fly to Heaven."

In regard to financial losses, the man of experience declares many people in Chicago are going to lose money, and are going to make outsiders lose also. Speaking of Judge Dunne, Mr. Yerkes admits he is a man of much intelligence, but inquires what the judge knows about street railways, then goes on to say: "If he were infinitely more able than he is he could not achieve what he has set himself to do. Municipalities cannot manage great complex affairs with success. The only place in Europe where anything important in this line has been accomplished is Glasgow, and private ownership could have done much better there."

Mr. Yerkes tritely remarks that every great business must be run scientifically, says that it was by closest figuring the old management of the Chicago street railways was able to make a margin of profit, and that the succeeding management has failed to make that margin.

The Glasgow Success.

MAYOR Dunne has been in communication with the lord mayor of Glasgow concerning the loan to Chicago of a tramway expert from that city. Chicago purposes to sit at the feet of this man and endeavor to gather points that shall enable her to make a success of the experiment which is looked upon so gloomily by Mr. Yerkes. Which minds us to glance at the municipal system of the Scotch town.

John Young, who organized and got into running operation municipal ownership of the Glasgow street railways, had to teach himself when he made the experiment, for Glasgow was the pioneer in this field. Since the beginning there, ten years ago, of municipal ownership it has grown to an immense success. The municipal system now carries 200,000,000 passengers yearly, the company's record for its best year was but 54,000,000. The system makes a yearly profit of $530,000; the company, in its most prosperous day, never got beyond $120,000. When there is taken into consideration the higher pay and general improved condition enjoyed by the employes, one gets an idea of the measure of the success.

It was the agitation against the treatment by the company of its employes that caused the city to oust the company and try running its own railways. When the system was installed Mr. Young raised the wages of the employes generally about 16 to 18 per cent., reduced the hours of labor from 12 to nine a day, provided each employe a winter and a summer uniform, and made provision that no one should work more than six days a week, and a five days' vacation be given during the year.

It was argued that conditions in Glasgow and Chicago are dissimilar, and that what obtains there might not here.

CHRISTOPHER WEBSTER.

THE VALUE OF GOOD COWS

Few Farmers Realize the Income Which May Be Realized from Them.

Prof. Eckels, in charge of the department of dairy husbandry at the University of Missouri, says of the value of good cows:

"Very few farmers realize the income that can be had from a good cow. The farmer who keeps a cow a year to raise a $15 or $20 calf, usually thinks he has done well, but his profits do not compare with those of the dairyman. Except with the high-priced registered cattle, the milk, not the calf, is the most valuable product of the cow.

"The milk produced by the average Missouri cow in a year will sell for about $50 at the creamery or when made into first-class butter. A good cow of the dairy breed will make at least $50 cash income every year. I have a list of about 50 Missouri farmers who report a cash income of $50 to $100 a cow every year, and these figures do not include the income from the sale of calves, and pigs fed on the skim milk. 'But,' says one, 'milking is a tremendous task.' As a matter of fact, it takes only 60 hours, worth 15 cents an hour, to milk a cow twice a day for ten months.

"Last year the cash income from the herd of cattle on the college farm was $82.50 a cow for butter sold and $12.50 a cow for milk, skimmed milk and calves, making a total income from each cow of $95. This year the average income per cow from the same source will be over $100 for the entire herd of 28. These results do not come from expensive or excessive treatment of any kind. But they are the result of doing the right things at the right time in the proper way."

A DAIRY CATECHISM.

Some Questions and Answers for the Education of the Keeper of Cows.

Q. How many kinds of cows are there?

A. Three.

Q. What are they?

A. Dairy cows, beef cows and combination cows.

Q. What is a dairy cow?

A. One that has the ability to turn all she may eat and digest, over and above that required for maintenance, toward the udder, there to be transformed into milk.

Q. What is the beef cow?

A. One that turns her surplus food into fat.

Q. What is the combination cow?

A. One that tries to take both turns of the road and never gets anywhere.

Q. What causes this difference in cows?

A. Heredity.

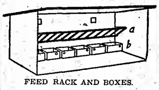
Q. What is heredity?

A. The biological law by which living beings, whether animal or plants, tend to reproduce themselves in their descendants.—Blooded Stock.

FEEDING RACK FOR CATTLE

Cattle Shed with Convenient Feeding Boxes for the Dairy Farm.

The cut shows interior of cattle shed arranged with rack and boxes for feeding, says Farm and Home. The rack, a, may be built of two by fours placed horizontally above and below with slats one by two or two by two vertically for holding the hay. The boxes, b, may be made of any suitable size. They are placed in position loose and have a large hole bored in one end to make them easily removed for cleaning, which we do after each feed.



FEED RACK AND BOXES.

HINTS FOR THE DAIRY.

Wasteful feeding may mean too much or too little.

Always skim sweet milk; never let cream thicken.

Cows should be milked with dry hands and the udders should be washed clean.

Provide a milking stool with a bottom to set the pail on for the boy. Don't expect him to hold the pail between his legs.

Improved machinery improves every industry. The dairy cow is the most important of the machinery connected with the dairy.

Cream is a very perishable article and must be kept under the most favorable conditions if good butter is to be made out of it.

A Missouri writer says: "Missouri has 800,000 dairy cows, and has sunshine, water, grass and feed enough to support 10,000,000 cows."

Any farmer that has ten or more cows should have a silo unless he is selling his milk to some company that refuses to take milk made out of silage.

Stable ventilation is best secured by some well-constructed and easily operated device, rather than by loose boards or accidental holes in the windows.

Borers.

Borers burrow in the base of the trunks of trees. The only way to fight them at this time of year is to inspect the trees and dig out the borers with a stiff wire. It is well to scrape all the loose bark off the trunks of the trees and whitewash them. This will, at least make it easy to find the borers, and the whitewash will perhaps prevent to some extent the entrance of borers.—Farmer's Review.

CHICAGO'S FREIGHT SUBWAY

Will Furnish Facilities for the Best Underground Mail Service in the World.

Far below the surface of Chicago's streets scores of electric locomotives are pulling freight trains that are taking thousands of tons of coal into the boiler rooms of skyscrapers, without dirt, noise or sign of effort in the street, says the Scientific American. They are removing tons of ashes, and caring for the excavations from the basements of buildings in course of construction. More than this, they are hauling daily thousands of tons of freight which was formerly carried over the pavements in wagons. On February 15, 1905, the company entered into a contract with the government under which all Chicago's second, third and fourth-class mail matter will be transferred from the railway stations to the new post office through the tunnels. A further plan to utilize the tunnel for mail purposes involves the building of chutes connecting the street corner mail boxes with boxes in the tunnel, where the mail can be collected by cars. When the new schemes are perfected and added to the present pneumatic tube service for first-class mail, Chicago will have the most perfect underground mail facilities in the world. Eight hundred and eighty tons of mail will be handled in the tunnels daily, in special locked United States cars. The system will be in operation by June 1.

Without noise, dirt, smoke or the slightest delay to traffic, the central business district of Chicago has been honeycombed with these tunnels. Twenty-eight miles already have been constructed, and extensions are projected.

OUR SHARE OF SIMPLON.

Drill That Made the Plan Possible Was Invented by an American.

To the great Alpine tunnels we have, of course, contributed nothing in money and probably nothing in labor. It is not probable that an American was employed in any of them. But we did contribute the original invention which enabled the Mont Cenis to get through even in 13 years, the St. Gothard in nine, and the Simplon in less than seven, says a writer in the Chicago Inter Ocean.

J. J. Couch, an American, in 1849 made the first machine rock drill. He was the first man in all the world to substitute steam or other mechanical power of human muscle in such work. The use and adaptation of his invention was slow in spreading. In 1857 it was so little known that work began on the Mont Cenis tunnel with hand drills, and machine drills were not used on the Italian end until 1860, or on the French end until 1862.

The American inventor made the Mont Cenis tunnel commercially practicable. He shortened the time of such works all over the world. He made the Simplon tunnel possible in less than seven years.

That is the American share in the great engineering work whose completion Europe is now celebrating.

WASHINGTON'S ARMY HOME

House at Valley Forge Which Sheltered the General for Six Months.

It is hardly more than an hour's ride from Philadelphia to Valley Forge, and one alights from the railway train about 100 yards from the ancient, pointed stone house of miller Isaac Potts; the structure which all America cherishes to-day as the home of Washington for the half year the continental army was encamped in that country. As nearly as can be ascertained, writes W. H. Richardson, in Four-Track News, the building is very much the same as it was when it was getting its right to a high place on history's page. "The log cabin to dine in," about which Mrs. Washington wrote, has been rebuilt, and otherwise the restorations have been carried on in a consistent manner. Externally the substantial and comfortable look of the building is very impressive, and its simple, dignified proportions appeal at once to the good taste of every visitor. The curious porch over the front door, the exquisite hand-made moldings and other details of its architecture are charming notes in the very pretty harmony. Interest in the interior is heightened by the presence in the various rooms of rare old furniture, prints, engravings and other relics of the colonial and revolutionary eras.

Biblical Arithmetic.

To the number of times Paul was stoned add the number of times he was shipwrecked; add the number of times he was beaten with rods; multiply by number of times he received 40 stripes save one; add the number of fathoms at first sounding when Paul was shipwrecked; add number of days they sailed; multiply by number of anchors cast out, and the result will be number of persons on board the ship that was to carry Paul to Rome.—Ram's Horn.

Bulls Killed in Spain.

A Spanish contemporary says that in 1904 nearly 12,000 bulls were killed in bull fights of the country. The bulls killed about 10,000 horses. The best and most valuable bulls for the arena are raised on the vast estates of the duke of Veragua, in Andalusia, who has made a fortune out of this business.

Elastic But Not Stretchy.

Customer—I thought you said that last pair of rubber shoes you sold me were elastic?

Salesman—So they were; what was the matter with them?

"Nothing, only I couldn't make them stretch from one end of the winter to the other."—Chicago Journal.

Don't forget the band concert on Main street Friday evening.

A social dance was held at the K of P. hall Friday evening and was greatly enjoyed by all present.

The alumni of the Red Lake Falls high school are requested to meet at the home of Mrs. J. E. Argoe, next Monday evening, at 8 o'clock. Important matters are to be discussed.

Garceau & Zaiser last week installed a modern cash carrier system in their otherwise up-to-date store, which will prove of great convenience to the clerks and public. The system is of the latest manufacture, and is giving excellent satisfaction.

Joseph Ufford, from near Mentor, was a business caller here yesterday. Joe is an old time friend of the writer, and never forgets The Gazette when he comes to town. He reports that the grain is practically all in the ground, and that prospects for a good crop were never better in any part of the state.

The weather was so decidedly unfavorable for a band concert last Friday evening, that the boys decided to wait a week, and if conditions will warrant they will appear in the first concert of the season Friday evening of this week. It is the intention to give regular weekly concerts from now until the time to go to Blackduck for the tournament.

Daniel Aukhus, violinist, of Grand Forks, assisted by Miss Bertha Lombness, pianist, gave a concert at the K. of P. hall Monday evening to a small crowd His program consisted of a number of fine selections, which were well received by his audience. Following the concert a dance was given and those present report an excellent time.

Mentor Herald: Realizing that "It is not well for man to be alone" ye editor took unto himself a helpmate in the person of Miss Edna Wadekomper last Thursday, the ceremony being performed at Fargo, N. D., by Rev. Fonkalsrod. Mr. and Mrs. Hole returned home Monday morning and were surprised to find that their home had been entered by friends during their absence and left a beautiful bureau labeled "To Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Hole." They will go to housekeeping at once in the rooms in the rear of the Herald office.

Crookston Times: Thos. Germo, the Red Lake Falls attorney, drove down this afternoon to attend to legal matters of importance in the city and call upon friends. He reports the roads between here and the Falls as improving very rapidly and the grain along the road as coming up in rapid manner. Wheat in some spots is two inches high and possesses an unusually hardy appearance. Farmers will be able to get onto their fields to complete their spring plowing before the end of the week, in some localities out east.

About seventy-five people from here took advantage of the Great Northern special excursion train from Crookston to Thief River Falls Sunday and went up to see the base ball game between the Crookston league team and the Thief River club. The day was an ideal one and those who went from here enjoyed themselves immensely. The ball game was won by Crookston, by a score of 7 to 3. The Crookston band was present to help out with the entertainment of the crowds, and everyone who went thoroughly enjoyed themselves.

Crookston Times: S. M. Sivertson, of the Red Lake Falls Milling company, in the city this morning on his way home from a trip over the Fargo line on business connected with the string of elevators owned by his company. Mr. Sivertson says the '05 crop at the present time is in as fine condition as any crop during the past ten years and that with only fair climatic conditions the prospects for a heavy crop this fall could not be brighter. The stands of grain coming up are exceedingly healthy and the weather now on tap for growing could not be better.

Tennis Association Active.

At the annual meeting of the Red Lake Falls tennis association held last evening in the First State Bank the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Rev. Hebert W. Knox; secretary and treasurer, Sam E. Huut; members of board of control, R. E. Wyer, V. M. Higinbotham and W. A. McIntyre.

The association voted to amend its rules so as to allow ladies to become members of the association upon the payment of a membership fee of fifty cents. This will entitle ladies to the full privileges of the association with the exception of the use of the grounds after 7:00 p. m. This latter clause was decided necessary because of the fact that the majority of the members of the club are unable to play except in the evening and because of the lack of room on the courts it becomes necessary to restrict the number of the membership entitled to the use of the courts in the evening.

The courts are being put into first class condition and play will be begun at once. As other cities of the valley are taking renewed interest in tennis it is quite probable that tournaments may be arranged with the neighboring cities.

A Shoe Social.

The ladies of St. Mary's society will give a "shoe social" at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Zaiser, on the evening of Thursday May 25th. Games will be played and refreshments served. The admission charged will depend on the size of the shoe you wear, two cents being asked for each number, so that if you wear a number two shoe you will pay only four cents while the wearer of a number twelve will have to pay twenty-four cents, etc. It may be mentioned, however, that no measurements will be taken at the social. Bags of peanuts will be sold at five cents apiece, after which an auction will be held. We are not at liberty to state what kind of articles are to be sold and whoever desires further information and particulars regarding the sale must be present when it commences. All are most cordially invited to put on their biggest shoes and come to the social, on Thursday evening, May 25.

Brown Was Discharged.

Plummer Pioneer: At Red Lake Falls on Wednesday the case against W. G. Brown for assaulting Louis Seiff at Plummer on April 28th, was dismissed by Justice Lewis.

It will be remembered that Seiff was arrested on that date by Constable Carlson on a charge of horse stealing and while attempting to get his prisoner into a cell in the village lock-up he called upon Brown to assist him. This Brown did effectively and without unnecessary violence. Seiff was later released under bonds and promptly preceeded to have Brown arrested for assault. The case came up at Red Lake Falls on Wednesday the 3rd inst, and was adjourned for a week to allow witnesses to be subpoenaed on both sides. At the hearing on Wednesday the Justice decided that Brown was not guilty as charged and promptly dismissed the action. As the arrest is regarded here as purely malicious we understand that an effort will be made to have Seiff pay the costs, which amount to considerable, instead of their being paid by the county.

FARMERS COMBINE.

Farmers Near St. Hilaire form a Company and Buy a Threshing Rig.

The Farmers' Threshing Machine Association Number One, of St. Hilaire, held a meeting at the village hall last Wednesday completing their organization and purchasing a threshing machine outfit. The officers of the new company are as follows: President, J. S. Roy; vice president, Albert Geske; secretary, N. E. Beebe; treasurer, Henry Randolph; trustee, Andrew Soderberg.

The company is composed of the following well known farmers: J. S. Roy, N. E. Beebe, Michel Mc Andress, E. A. Aubol, John Nelson, Ole Loeberg, Paul Olson, O. H. Skottem, H. J. Hanson, Henry Randolph, Chas. Gustafson, N. A. Nelson, W. A. Sorsoliel, G. W. Casbon, Albert Geske, Martin McAndress, Anton Aubol, Andrew Soderberg. A few other farmers in this vicinity will probably join the company in the near future.

The fact that the new company would pay cash for the rig seems to have been well advertised for some sixteen agents representing seven of the large threshing companies were present and submitted bids.

S. A. Swanson, of Red Lake Falls, and W. H. Higham, of Grand Forks, represented the Waterloo.

J. C. McAndress and W. G. Bannerman, of Fargo, for Nichols & Sheppard.

Messrs. Babcock, Murphy and Blanchard for the "Reeves."

James Liberty, of Grand Forks, for the "Minneapolis."

C. C. Thornberg, of Fargo and A. M. Edstrom, of Hazel, for the "J. I. Case."

L. W. Larson, of Crookston, for the "Advance."

McAdams, Ryan and Stone, for the "Aultman & Taylor."

Each company has allowed thirty minutes to present arguments after which they submitted sealed bids. It was late in the evening before all the talking was done and the last bid submitted. The prize was awarded to the Nichols & Sheppard company, of Battle Creek, Michigan, who will supply a twenty-five horse power engine and a 36x56 separator. The price usually paid for rigs of this kind is in the neighborhood of $3700, but it is thought that owing to the number of companies competing and that cash would be paid the price would be considerable less. We cannot state, however, how much was paid as the bids were not made public.

FLAG DAY IN JUNE.

Anniversary of Adoption of Stars and Stripes to be Celebrated.

June 14 will be Flag Day and the 128th anniversary of the adoption of the stars and strips as the flag of the United States. For several years the day has been observed as a national anniversary by many states and communities, and the custom has spread with great rapidity, until there is barely a town that does not give patriotic thought to Old Glory on that day.

Mayors and school officers are appealed to by the American Flag association, an organization formed "to promote reverence for and prevent desecration of the flag of our country," to help make observance more general this year than ever before. It is desired that flags be displayed on all public buildings and upon private residences. Appropriate execises in the public schools are requested, and these are outlined in a circular mailed by the Flag association.

Flag day in this city has never been observed to any great extent the only sign of the day on display being the stars and stripes about the city. This year, however, it is probable or possible that an effort will be made to get up an appropriate Flag Day service. The fact that June 14 so directly follows Decoration Day and its extensive commemoratory program rather affects Flag Day and makes it of less importance to the average mind. ●

Valley Farming Profitable ....

A Terrebonne Farmer's Figures Show That There is Money To Be Made Without Going To Washington..........

Joseph Laurent, one of the oldest and most successful farmers of the town of Terrebonne, was a business caller here Tuesday, and during a conversation with the writer said that he had often seen statements of how much the farmers in Washington made every year, and said that he thought that the Red Lake county farmers were still better off than those of that section. Asked if he could account for the reports not showing up so well, Mr. Laurent said:

"Scarcely a farmer in Red Lake county, I believe, keeps an accurate account of how much money he realizes from his farm in a year, and here is where they make the great mistake, as an accurate system will show them just what they are doing every year and many of them would be greatly surprised to see the amount of money they handle in that length of time. For several years past I have kept an account of every cent I have taken in and all I have paid out, and I am satisfied that my figures prove that Red Lake county is not behind Washington or any other section as a good place to farm and make a living."

Mr. Laurent felt disinclined to give The Gazette his figures from the fact that people might think he was trying to brag, but after much persuasion and assurance that his figures would be the best kind of an ad for the valley, he consented to give the items as they appeared. The year 1904 was taken, and Mr. Laurent showed where he sold 1248 bushels of wheat, amounting to $1038.15; 363 bushels of barley, $370.75; 667 bushels of oats, $199.10; 11 bushels of timothy seed, $11; stock sold, $122.11; milk and cream to cheese factory, $144.67, making a total of $1865.78. Aside from farming his 200 acres to the degree of success above shown, Mr. Laurent found time to do outside carpenter work, etc., to the amount of $546.83, making his total receipts for 1904, $2412.61. The above items do not of course include the grains used for his flour and feed for his stock, nor the cream used for his butter, etc. Aside from this he raised his own garden truck, and his actual expenses cut but a small hole in the receipts. Mr. Laurent is constantly improving his farm and has one of the finest homes in the county, and nothing better demonstrates the advisibility of a strict account system than Mr. Laurent's success.

There is room here for lots of farmers of this kind, and when they figure carefully they can easily prove where Washington isn't the only country where your labors will be rewarded.

CHEESE IN DEMAND.

Cheesemaker Clement, of Terrebonne, Gets Good Offer.

H. C. Clement, proprietor of the Terrebonne cheese factory, was a caller here Monday on some business matters and made this office a visit.

Mr. Clement was feeling pleased over an offer he had received that day from the Armour Packing company, of Chicago, for the entire output of his factory this year at the highest market prices. The letter stated that Mr. Clement had been reccommended by the state dairy and food department as one of the best cheese makers in the state, and the Armour company was anxious to get his entire output this year.

The offer, coming as it did from one of the largest concerns in the country, was highly appreciated by Mr. Clement, and it is quite likely that he will close a deal with them for all the cheese he makes this season.

Wins First Game.

The local high school base ball team went down to Fertile last Saturday morning and met the high school nine from that place in a contest for honors. The game was a fair one, although a little too one-sided to be very exciting. Red Lake Falls was a little too fast for the Fertile boys, the score being 12 to 2 in our favor. The pitching of "Moike" Connaughty, for Red Lake Falls, was the feature of the game, his record showing only three hits made off of his delivery while he struck out nineteen of the Fertile batters. The boys remained over Saturday night at Fertile and report royal treatment and a first-class time.

A LOCAL FIELD MEET

Lafayette School Wins In Series of Exciting Contests by a Score of 34 to 25 Points Last Friday.

Last Friday afternoon the seventh grade of the Lafayette school and the fifth and sixth grades of the Washington school had their long talked of field meet on the Washington school grounds.

Both schools had worked for some time preparing yells; penants and streamers had been made of the school colors, red and white for the Lafayette school, and "Yale" blue and white for the Washington school. The grounds had been well prepared by the boys the night before; and when the afternoon of the event arrived all was ready, the enthusiasm was at a high pitch, the day ideal and the members of the teams in trim.

Those who represented the Washington school were Marcus Marshall, Carl Buse, Preston Hall, Henry Skala and Thomas Payment. The Lafayette team consisted of Walter Gareeau, Robert Zaiser and Thomas Majeres.

The events and results were as follows:

Three points were given the first place, two the second and one the third. This gave the Lafayette school 34 points and the Washington school 26 points.

While both sides did themselves justice in yelling, the Washington school far outdid their opponents. Many visitors were present.

MONTAGUE IS REGISTER.

Chosen To Succeed Sylvester Peterson In Crookston Land Office.

Crookston Times: A telegram from Washington received by the Times Thursday morning announces the nomination of R. J. Montague of this city for the position of register of the Crookston land office. While the appointment has been confidentially expected for some time past, it was not an absolute certainty until the action of the president yesterday taken upon the recommendation of Congressman Steenerson of this city.

Before assuming his new duties Mr. Montague will be required to file a $10,000 bond and go through several of the usual formalities, and it is probable that he will not assume the duties of the office until June first, when he will succeed Sylvester Peterson, who retires after eight years of service.

Judge Montague has been a resident of Minnesota since '56 and of Crookston for the past twenty-four years, during which time he has been prominent in republican politics and has held public offices in Polk county and in the city of Crookston. He has hosts of friends to whom the news of his appointment will be received with a great deal of pleasure.

Meeting at Terrebonne Sunday.

There will be a meeting of the friends and patrons of the Terrebonne cheese factory at the factory next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock, and Mr. Clement, the proprietor, is anxious that a large number of people attend as there are important matters to discuss.

GETS OFF HIS TROLLEY

"One Henry W. Lee" Still Insists That Court House Case Has Not Been Decided Against His Client.

> The case of Peter Engelstad vs. the board of county commissioners has not been decided, the Gazette and Press to the contrary notwithstanding, and, when it is decided, it will not be in favor of Buse. The gang base their right to purchase the old buildings used as a court house out of money they owe called a court house fund, which some of them admit was illegally filched from the taxpayers of the county. —H. W. LEE.

A couple weeks ago the Gazette announced that the case of Peter Englestad vs. the Board of County commissioners et. al. had been decided by Judge Watts, and the application of said Englestad asking for a permanent injunction restraining the treasurer from paying the warrants issued in payment for the court house property denied. At the time we stated this we were informed reliably that the Judge had so decided, but the Thief River News and brother Lee have had a terrible nightmare and refused to acknowledge that their hue and cry in regard to the illegality of the transaction had come to naught. No attention was paid to their first spasm, but Mr. Lee's statement last week was so far from true and intending to mislead that the Gazette is pleased to give publicity to the following order and affadavit from His Honor Judge Watts:

[illegible] E. Ford, County Auditor, Karl M. Hansen, Treasurer, and Ernest Buse, Defendants, JUDGMENT.

This action wherein the plaintiff prays that the defendant county officers of Red Lake county be enjoined from purchasing or paying for the courthouse property at Red Lake Falls, having been regularly on the calendar of said Court for trial at the general March, 1905, term thereof, between, Plaintiff Peter Engelstad, and the defendants, James E. Ford, Karl M. Hansen, and Ernest Buse, no service of the summons herein having been made upon the Board of County Commissioners in this action, and said trial having come on before said Court, and the court having heard the evidence adduced on behalf of the respective parties, and having duly made and filed its findings of fact and Conclusions of law, and order for judgment herein.

Now, therefor, on motion of Chas. E. Boughton, attorney for defendant Ernest, IT IS ADJUDGED,—That said prayer for injunction be, and the same is in all things denied, and this action dismissed, and that the defendant Ernest Buse recover from plaintiff the sum of $12.60 his costs and disbursements herein.

Witness the Honorable William Watts, one of the judges of said court, this 23rd day of May, A. D. 1905.

JOSEPH PERRAULT,
Clerk of District Court,
(Seal) Red Lake County.

CERTIFICATE OF COPY OF RECORD.

State of Minnesota, } ss
County of Red Lake }
District Court, Fourteenth Judicial District.

I, Joseph Perrault, Clerk of the District Court in and for Red Lake county, State of Minnesota, do hereby Certify that I have carefully compared the paper writing hereto annexed with the orginal Judgment in the case of Peter Engelstad against the Board of Co. Commissioners, Ernest Buse et al, on file and of record in my office and find that this is a true and correct copy of said original.

In Testimony Whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the seal of said District Court at Red Lake Falls on this 23rd day of May A. D. 1905.

JOSEPH PERRAULT,
Clerk of the District Court,
(seal) Red Lake Co., Minn.

This action of the Thief River Falls supporters was to be expected from the fact that they all along based their entire argument on deceit and misrepresentation. They hate to acknowledge to the people that Red Lake county OWNS its own court house and jail property, as they realize that the people rather get along with what they now have than to be forced to put up the cash for the erection of an expensive court house at Thief River Falls.

This is all they want, voter, and should they get your support in moving the seat of government they will laugh behind your back when you are called upon to dig up for an expensive set of buildings at Thief River Falls.

CREAMERY IS BUSY.

Weekly Shipments of Butter Now Being Made.

The Red Lake Falls creamery is again on the firing line in good shape, and a great deal of fancy butter is being turned out every day by Buttermaker Blaisdell.

The association is now making Monday shipments to Chicago and New York, and if the increase in the amount of cream will warrant they will shortly double the amount of their shipments.

Considerable of a demand has already been found on the local market for the output of the creamery and from this early in the season it is plainly apparent that the creamery will enjoy a record run this year. No income to the farmers is greater or surer than for the sale of cream, and if your neighbor is not already bringing his cream here it is to your interest and the interest of the community at large to see that he does.

FIRED FROM OFFICE.

Grafting Beltrami Officials Removed By Governor.

Governor Johnson yesterday filed an order removing from office L. O. Sibley and Wes Wright, commissioners of Beltrami county. The governor found that the charges preferred by the public examiner were true, and that the two commissioners have been guilty of maladministration.

Whether the probing of official corruption in Beltrami county is to continue depends largely on the men chosen to succeed Sibley and Wright says the Minneapolis Journal. The vacancy in each district is to be filled under law by the vote of the chairman of each board of town supervisors in the districts and the mayors of the cities or presidents of village councils. Sibley represents the Solway district, which is strictly rural, while Wright represents the Bemidji district. If they can control the election of their successors, they may also be able to succeed in securing a county attorney to succeed Loud, resigned, who will drop further action.

The governor's order is made on recommendation of the attorney general and after a full examination of the facts by the special commission appointed.

All the alumni of the Red Lake Falls High School are requested to be present at the reception to be given the Senior class of 1905 at the K. P. hall. The date is Thursday evening June 8 and the hour 8:30.

New Bridge On Bottineau Avenue.

The Great Northern railroad company has a crew of men and a monster pile driver here this week putting in a new railroad bridge over Bottineau avenue, north of the depot. The bridge over this street has long been unsatisfactory from the fact that the piling has partly obstructed the street below, and this will be remedied by the new bridge. The new bridge will be completed in a few days.

How to Get Soft Water.

The following will no doubt be interesting to our farmer readers who have cream separators, says the Clara City Herald: John Gerken informed the writer last Saturday that he used his cream separtor to obtain soft water. He pours the hard water into the machine just as he would milk, first running the machine at a high speed. The soft water comes out of the milk spout, while the rest comes out of the cream spout. It seems almost incredulous that this should be so, and the dealer who handles the machine was as much surprised as we were. Our readers who have a machine might try it and see how it works.

Telephones Replace Tickers.

The Great Northern has completed a telephone system upon the Crookston Moorhead line and will during the next few weeks test the efficiency of the telephone as a means of sending dispatches and the transaction of regular railroad business. Should the system be found successful the "tickers" and other telegraph instruments will be removed from all of the offices along the road between here and Fargo and dispatchers instead of using their hands to dispatch messages will use their lungs.

The regular telegraph poles and wires have been employed in the new arrangement of affairs and so far the telephones are working admirably. It is understood that the officials of the road are adopting the new plan in order to economize and that in time other pieces of road will be fitted out in precisely the same manner. Station agents at small towns under the telephone communication idea will not have to possess a knowledge of "Morse" consequently salaries can be lowered and a considerable item of expense saved the company.—Crookston Times.

is often as great as woman's. But Thos S. Austin, Mgr. of the "Republican," of Leavenworth, Ind, was not unreasonable when he refused to allow the doctors to operate on his wife, for female trouble. DAIRY NOTES.

From the Ada Index.

Any fool can get into trouble, but it sometimes bothers the best of us to wriggle out of it.

How about your yield? Is your yield too slow and your patrons kicking, or is it too high and in danger of being looked into by the inspector?

Sometimes the creamery is what the buttermaker makes it, in other cases it is what the buttermaker doesn't make it.

Buttermakers, show your patrons that they will make more money by properly caring for their cows and their milk or cream. Keep the profit arguments well to the front in your arguments for higher quality. They are not milking cows for the sentiment and poetry there is in it, they are in the business of money, money, money. Remember this and profit accordingly.

Many of our creameries should throw out their old testers and put in new ones. The tester divides the proceeds of the business and is one of the most important articles of machinery in the creamery Just because it was a good machine ten years ago is no sign of its present usefulness.

Cleanly methods in the creamery beget cleanliness in the methods employed by the patrons. It "spreads."

When farmers begin to pay fancy prices for outside stock it speaks well for their intelligence and progressiveness.

We have our friends, the tin can water separators, gone? Perhaps they have all been sunk by the load fraud which they have had to carry around with them. It is about time the old fraud was bobbing up under some other name.

An interesting test of the effect of cleaning milk cans, making them germ free by the use of steam before milk is poured into them has been made in Germany. Some time during hot summer weather two milk cans were selected; one was thoroughly well cleaned in the ordinary way by scrubbing with hot water, the other was subjected to the action of steam for half an hour. In the first, the milk went sour in twenty-three hours; in the second place in 28¼ hours, and the contents of the first can were found to contain twenty-six times as many bacteria as the other. The same experiment repeated in the winter show that the sterlized milk can will keep the milk sweet for nine hours longer than the other.

His mother's death was a sad loss for Mr. Reid, but he learned that lung trouble must not be neglected and how to cure it. Quickest relief and cure for coughs and colds. Millionaire's Poor Stomach.

The worn-out stomach of the over-fed millionaire is often paraded in the public prints as a horrible example of the evils attendant on the possession of great wealth. But millionaires are not the only ones who are afflicted with bad stomachs. The proportion is far greater among the toilers. Dyspepsia and indigestion are rampant among these people, and they suffer far worse tortures than the millionaire unless they avail themselves of a standard medicine like Green's August Flower, which has been a favorite household remedy for all stomach troubles for over thirty-five years. August Flower rouses the torpid liver, thus creating appetite and insuring perfect digestion. It tones and vitalizes the entire system and makes life worth living, no matter what your station. In Work Lies Safety.

Remember my son you have to work. Whether you handle a pick or a pen, a wheelbarrow or a set of books, digging ditches or editing a paper, ringing an auction bell or writing funny things, you must work. Don't be afraid of killing yourself by overwork on the sunny side of 30 Men die sometimes, but it's because they quit at 6 p. m. and dont get home until 2 a. m. It's the interval that kills my son. The work gives you an appetite for your meals; it lends solidity to your slumbers: it gives you a perfect and grateful appreciation of a holiday. There are young men who do not work, but the world is not proud of them. It does not know their names even: it only speaks of them as "old so and so's boys." Nobody likes them; the busy world does not know that they are here. So find out what you want to be and do, and take off your coat and make dust in the world. The busier you are the less harm you will get into, the sweeter will be your sleep, the brighter and happier your holidays and the better satisfied the world will be with you.—From an unknown exchange.

David Berger, the well known Rockebury farmer, left last evening for St. Paul where he goes to see his mother who is one hundred and two years of age and in poor health. He has not seen or heard of her for nearly twenty years and recently learned of her whereabouts through an advertisement in a Scandinavian paper.

The fair given by the ladies of the M. E. church last Friday evening was a decided success both social and financial. The enterprising ladies succeeded in taking in over one hundred dollars.

The many friends of Samuel M. Deinord, now of Monroe, Washington, will be pleased to learn that Sam has become a grandfather. It sounds rather strange, but "Here's looking at you, Grandpa."

The band boys are showing commendable enterprise in cleaning out the grove near the depot. They intend to fix it up in first class shape, put in a band stand, and a lot of benches and give open air concerts this summer. May they prosper.

Lewis Larson left last Tuesday for Devil's Lake, N. D., with a couple of cars of horses and fifteen men. On Wednesday Wm. Eikhoff took about a dozen men to Crookston and sent them out to join the crew. They have already started at work on their railroad grading contract.

At the annual meeting of the fire department last Tuesday evening the old officers were re-elected as follows: Chas. Fellman, Chief; R. H. Duntley, assistant chief; A. F. Lang, secretary; B. E. Burkee, treasurer. Carl Johnson was chosen as a delegate to the state convention at Litchfield.

Seargent Christ Wiete returned last Wednesday from Fort Columbus, Washington, where he has been stationed for the past three years. He has served his full three years in the artillery branch of the service and has three months to decide whether he will go back to the service or not. Christ is visiting with old friends and has not yet decided what he will do.

Miss Eva Johnson entertained about twenty ladies at her home last Wednesday evening in honor of Miss Tessie L. Hughes, who was departing for St. Paul. A pleasant evening was spent at entertaining games. Each guest was furnished with a large piece of cardboard and required to draw a picture of some animal. The Spectator was favored with some of these drawings and we can state without stuttering that the artistic spirit displayed was something remarkable.

Climatic Cures.

The influence of climate conditions in the cure of consumption is very much overdrawn. The poor patient, and the rich patient, too, can do much better at home by proper attention to food digestion, and a regular use of German Syrup. Free expectoration in the morning is made certain by German Syrup, so is a good night's rest and the absence of that weakening cough and debilitating night sweat. Restless nights and the exhaustion due to coughing, the greatest danger and dread of the consumptive, can be prevented or stopped by taking German Syrup liberally and regularly. Should you be able to go to a warmer clime, you will find that of the thousands of consumptives there, the few who are benefited and regain strength are those who use German Syrup. Trial bottles, 25c; regular size, 75c. At all druggists A. L. Reichert.

Lewis & Clark Exposition.

It is a noteworthy fact that the Lewis and Clark Exposition is the first world's fair to be held west of the Rocky Mountains which has secured the aid of the Government.

"And it is also surprising what an interest is manifested in the Exposition by the people of the East. They see in the Exposition an opportunity to visit the Western country at a greatly reduced expenditure of money, and not only see the Exposition itself, but view the wonders of our Western scenary, and witness the great resources of the Northwest and the opportunities afforded. The Great Northern Railway passengar department has been flooded with inquiries as to the Exposition, and it augurs well for a big travel through the Northwest this year.

BATTLE IS IMMINENT

FIELD MARSHAL OYAMA MAKES PRELIMINARY MOVE IN GENERAL ENGAGEMENT.

Is Deploying Heavy Forces Against the Russians and Preparing to Begin Extensive Operations—Evident From General Linevitch's Actions That He Intends to Accept the Japanese Challenge for a Decisive Battle.

Gunshu Pass, Manchuria, May 20.—A general engagement is imminent. Field Marshal Oyama is deploying heavy forces against General Linevitch's left and is contracting his troops along the center, but his base is opposite the Russian right. It is not yet clear which wing is making a demonstration and which will deliver the main blow.

It is evident from Linevitch's preparations that he intends to accept a decisive battle.

St. Petersburg, May 20.—The war office confirms the report from Gunshu Pass that Field Marshal Oyama is on the eve of taking the general offensive and no doubt is entertained here that General Linevitch will accept battle in his present positions. The general staff believes Oyama's advance was precipitated by the doubt regarding the issue of the coming naval battle between Admirals Rojestvensky and Togo. With an unbeaten army in front of him Oyama's position might be critical if his communications with Japan were interrupted even temporarily.

IN THE PACIFIC OCEAN

ROJESTVENSKY IS BELIEVED TO HAVE GIVEN FORMOSA A WIDE BERTH.

St. Petersburg, May 22—There is an air of expectancy at the admiralty which indicates that news of importance regarding Admiral Rojestvensky's fleet is awaited at any moment. Officially no information regarding the admiral's whereabouts is volunteered, the officers making no concealment of the fact that they are not in the secret of Rojestvensky's plans, but the majority entertains no doubt that the Russian fleet is now steaming towards its ultimate destination. While there is no official confirmation of the Hongkong report that Admiral Rojestvensky's fleet has passed through the Basbee channel it is credited by those who have insisted from the beginning that Rojestvensky will give the island of Formosa a wide berth to the westward. The admiral, it is claimed here, has had ample time to reach the Pacific since he left the waters of Indo-China.

BOMB THROWER STUMBLES.

Explosion at Warsaw Fatal to a Number of Persons.

Warsaw, Russian Poland, May 19.—A workman who was trying to avoid the observation of two detectives on Miodowa street at noon stumbled on the curb of the sidewalk and a bomb which he was carrying in his pocket exploded, killing the workman, both the detectives and some persons who were passing by.

It is believed the bomb was intended for Governor General Maximovitch, who was expected to pass the spot on his way to the cathedral to attend the service in honor of the czar's birthday.

The bodies of the victims were literally blown to pieces. A cafe near the scene of the explosion was entirely demolished, all the windows in the neighborhood were smashed and a lamp post was torn out of the ground.

WORK OF A CRAZY NEGRO.

Kills One Man and Wounds Seven Others.

Ownesburg, Ky., May 23.—Bob Shaw, a negro, supposedly insane, killed one man and wounded seven in the past twenty-four hours near Waitman.

During the afternoon Shaw was terrorizing the community around Waitman and an appeal was sent to this city for help. A posse was at once formed, but as soon as they approached Shaw's house he opened fire, wounding seven persons. Later in the day Deputy Sheriff Brown volunteered to take Shaw, but was shot and instantly killed.

About 8 p. m. a mob of men and boys surrounded the house and set it on fire. Shaw remained in the burning building until the heat forced him to jump out or perish in the flames. He made a leap from a second-story window, but had hardly landed on the ground before his body was riddled with 100 bullets.

STRIKE MAY BE ENDED

PROSPECTS FOR SETTLEMENT OF CHICAGO TROUBLE APPEAR BRIGHT.

Chicago, May 23.—After a session lasting for three hours representatives of the teamsters' union and the employers' association declared at midnight that the prospects for the settlement of the strike are excellent and that the end of the trouble may be looked for at any time within the next forty-eight hours. The stumbling block in the negotiations is the declaration by the express companies that none of their striking drivers will be taken back under any circumstances. All other terms submitted by the employers to the strikers have been accepted. The managers of the express companies declared late in the afternoon that while they would re-employ none of their striking drivers they had no intention of keeping a blacklist and there would be no objection to any driver who secured a position with some express company other than the one by which he was employed at the time he struck. This phase of the strike was the only matter discussed at the conference at night and in the opinion of all present opened a way for a settlement and the negotiations will be continued.

Despite this movement for peace, the Lumbermen's association, composed of sixty-five firms, is preparing for an extension of the strike. At a meeting of this organization at night it was decided that all drivers must make deliveries of consignments to strike-bound houses. Twelve firms enforced the order Monday and between 200 and 300 of the drivers quit work. The union officials say the same thing will happen during the day if they are ordered to make deliveries to the boycotted firms.

The explosion took place in the lower galleries on the southern side of the tunnel. There were 170 men in the tunnel at the time and it is feared all have perished. Several attempts at rescue were made, but all failed, the members of the rescuing party having been overcome by the fumes of the gas. The completed portion of the tunnel was not damaged. The tunnel is being bored through the Bosruck mountain in connection with a second railway to Trieste.

HOCH FOUND GUILTY

SELF-CONFESSED BIGAMIST CONVICTED OF WIFE MURDER AT CHICAGO.

Jury Is Out Only Half an Hour and the Verdict Returned Recommends That the Death Sentence Be Imposed—Attorneys Will Ask for a New Trial, Although the Condemned Man Declares He Is Ready to Die.

Chicago, May 20.—Johann Hoch, who by his own confession is several times a bigamist, and who is charged by the police with having married at least forty women in the past fifteen years, was found guilty of murder during the day and the death sentence recommended by a jury in Judge Kersten's court. The crime for which Hoch will be led to the gallows was the murder of his last known wife, Mrs. Marie Welcker-Hoch. Hoch had been married to this woman but a few days when she became suddenly ill and died.

The day's verdict was one of the quickest on record in Cook county, the jury having reached a decision in less than half an hour. Three ballots were taken. The first ballot was unanimous as to Hoch's guilt and then a ballot followed as to the punishment to be inflicted. This ballot showed ten in favor of the death penalty and two for life imprisonment. A third ballot resulted in the twelve jurymen voting for the death penalty.

Hoch's attorneys will ask for a new trial, although the condemned man after reaching his cell declared he was ready to die and would be better satisfied if they did not make the effort.

"I wish they would hang me tonight, now that I have been found guilty," he said, "I am not afraid to die, and the sooner it is over with the better."

Hoch denied positively that he had committed any crime or had murdered a number of wives, as had been alleged, and displayed some bitterness in speaking of the matter.

WILLIAMS MUST DIE

ST. PAUL DOUBLE MURDERER CONDEMNED TO DEATH ON THE GALLOWS.

St. Paul, May 20.—The jury in the case of William Williams, tried for the murder of John Keller, and also accused of killing his mother, Mrs. F. S. Keller, at 11:15 p. m. brought in a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree. Judge Lewis immediately sentenced Williams to death. The date of execution will be fixed by Governor Johnson.

The jury retired at about 4:50 p. m. and shortly after 10 p. m. handed a written request to Judge Lewis for instructions, which he said could best be answered by reading his charge regarding murder in the first degree, murder in the second degree and manslaughter in the first degree. This was read by Judge Lewis, the jury then retired and in less than an hour returned its verdict of first degree murder.

The court then pronounced the sentence that he be taken to the jail and there confined until such time as the governor may fix, after the expiration of two calendar months, when he will be taken to the place of execution and hanged by the neck until dead.

DATE OF EXECUTION FIXED.

William Williams to Be Hanged at St. Paul Aug. 9.

St. Paul, May 23.—William Williams, convicted of murdering John Keller at No. 1 Reid court, St. Paul, will be hanged in the Ramsay county jail Aug. 9, the day after the hanging of Edward Gottschalk, convicted of murdering Joseph Hartmann, his accomplice in the murder of Christian H. Schludeldecker. The date of the execution was fixed by Governor John A. Johnson Monday, after a conference with Sheriff Miesen.

SANKEY NEAR DEATH.

Brooklyn, May 20.—Ira D. Sankey, the famous gospel singer and hymn writer, who was Dwight L. Moody's co-laborer in the evangelistic movement which aroused this country and England, is lying so seriously ill at his home on South Oxford street that those who have been in attendance upon him believe the end is near at hand.

Mr. Sankey has not been in good health since he was stricken with an affection of the eyes that gradually blinded him.

RELEASED ON $20,000 BAIL.

Third Trial of Dr. George R. Koch to Begin July 6.

Mankato, Minn., May 22.—Judge Cray has fixed July 6, in this city, as the time and place for the third trial of Dr. George R. Koch, charged with the murder of Dr. L. A. Gebhardt at New Ulm Nov. 1, 1904. Dr. Koch was released on $20,000 bail.

In fixing bail Judge Cray said the fact that juries had twice disagreed over Dr. Koch's guilt justified admitting the defendant to bail.

Frank Packard's Crookston Journal is replete with live editorials or local subjects these days, and the commercial union and several other affairs locally are handled without gloves, but with the use of unlimited capital letters. Packard is a bright writer, and the Journal is showing the results of his good work.

"One H. W. Lee" again breaks into print in last week's Thief River News, and calls everybody and everything down here hard names. Lee is especially severe on Messrs. Ford, Germo and Commissioner Farlardeau, but to those who know Lee it is but to laugh. Red Lake county has had its share of troubles, perhaps, but the greatest of all is Lee. For an all around disturber of peace and harmony brother Lee is entitled to the whole bakery, but so long as times are hard there appears to be no relief, and until such time as some of us can spare a quarter to buy him off it is presumed that we shall be forced to listen to his hot stuff occasionally sprung.

John Wanamaker, referring recently to the advantages of advertising says: "The good, sensible merchant sticks to his proposition throughout the year, never withdrawing his announcement but constantly pounding away at the public. There is only one way to advertise, and that is to hammer your name, your location, your business, so constantly, so persistently, so thoroughly, into the people's heads that if they walked in their sleep they would constantly turn their faces toward your store. The newspaper is your best friend. It helps to build up the town or community that supports you."

Secretary of State Peter E. Hanson announces that a meeting of the state drainage board will be held in Bemidji June 10th at 2 o'clock p.m. at which time plans for the proposed survey of the northwestern part of the state will be discussed. The meeting will be a public one, and all those who are interested in drainage work will be invited to attend the meeting and their suggestions will be given due consideration in mapping out future drainage work. Representatives from all northern counties of the state will be in attendance, and the session promises to be one of the most beneficial to this section that has been held for some time. At the recent session of the legislature $7,500 was appropriated for the purpose of making the survey, and John Abercrombie of Alexandria has been elected to make the topographical survey.

COMING STATE LAND SALES.

The new law governing the sale of state lands will be given a preliminary test this fall. State Auditor Iverson has announced his intention to hold a number of sales at the northern county seats, and to offer nearly 100,000 acres, which is the maximum amount that may be sold in any one year, says the Minneapolis Journal.

Lands sold this fall will be offered on a new basis entirely. Heretofore the only conditions have been the payment of 15 per cent of the purchase price at the date of sale, and 4 per cent interest each year thereafter, forty years being allowed to complete the payment. Under these terms state lands when fit for farming have sold readily and at good prices. The complaint was made, however, by farmers in new sections of the state, that speculators bought much of the land and held it for a rise, retarding the development of the locality. In answer to this complaint the legislature passed the Cole bill, chapter 299 of the session laws of 1905. This requires the contracts for land hereafter sold to contain new conditions. The purchaser, his heirs or assigns, must within five years either fence 25 per cent of the tract and convert it into pasture land cultivate 5 per cent of it, or build a house and actually reside on the tract for a period of twelve months. Proof must be filed at the end of five years, showing that one of these conditions has been complied with, or else the land will revert to the state. The act also provides that not more than 320 acres may be sold to any one purchaser.

This new law practically puts state land sales on a homestead basis except that the land cannot be secured for less than $5 an acre. Each piece is appraised before the sale, and may not be sold for less than the appraised price. Now that government homesteads are nearly a thing of the past, state land offers about the best opportunity for securing a farm with a small initial outlay.

It is true that much of the land heretofore sold has been taken by land dealers. However, as a rule, these dealers have been men who wanted to make quick sales and turn their money over every year or two, so they have hustled for buyers, and in many cases brought settlers to the land. This class of competition will be removed from the coming sales, and the bidders will be confined to neighboring farmers and homeseekers.

The sales next fall will determine whether the new law will result in as favorable prices as the state has received in the past. The auditor has fortunately been allowed money with which to advertise state lands, and with the appropriation given has started a campaign of publicity which it is hoped will bring many homeseekers from other states to bid on state lands at the sales hereafter held.

THE ANNUAL FARCE.

This is the season when annually the municipal machinery gravely unlimbers itself and goes through the farce of assessing personal property. It is the season, therefore, of general perjury and injustice, for the personal property tax is the mother of a most complicated system of petty perjury, in which almost everybody participates, of necessity, says the Duluth News Tribune.

The law requires the assessment of all personal property, tangible and intangible, at its true value. The general custom is to return tangible property at a small percentage of its real value, and intangible property not at all, except in the cases of rarely eccentric individuals, and those caught with the goods in their possession if necessary, few people shrink at swearing to their returns, but usually this is avoided. Often after one assessment has been made, the burden is put upon the assessor by inviting him in and asking him to look things over, with the assurance that there is no more property in the house than there was last year.

Undoubtedly many with tender consciences undergo a mental conflict every time they have to make a personal property return. Technically, they do wrong to make an improper return. Actually, according to general belief, they would do themselves and their families wrong to make a proper return. If a man did return his property at its full value, he would probably be the only one in his community that did, and he would therefore be assuming an unjust proportion of the taxes. From this most folks reason it out as fair enough to place the same relative valuation upon their property that others do upon theirs.

Intangible property, which is the most valuable, pays the least taxes, because it is seldom returned at all. Cash, stock, bonds, etc., should under the law be taxed as personal property but they seldom are.

Nor should they be taxed in this manner, as a usual thing. For instance, a widow is possessed of $20,000 in 4 per cent bonds left by her husband, which constitute her sole source of income. From them she receives annually interest amounting to $800, upon which she lives comfortably. Should she return them in full in her personal property list, they would be taxed at 3 per cent, and her tax would amount to $600 per year, leaving her net income out of her bonds $200, upon which she could not live. A legal tax upon her bonds would amount to confiscation. If they happen to be 2 per cent bonds, her tax would be still $600 a year and her income from the bonds $400 so that it would cost her $200 a year for the privilege of owning them.

The reasonable tax on such property as a tax upon the income they afford. Under the present state constitution such a tax cannot be levied. A year from next fall the people will have an opportunity to vote upon an amendment to the constitution that will permit a proper substitute for the personal property tax. It should certainly be adopted.

The personal property tax is an outlandish system that puts a premium on perjury, and results, by common consent, in nothing but injustice and evil.

When James J. Hill talks he says something, says the Redwood Falls Gazette. This statement is again proven by his statement before the senate committee on interstate commerce last Wednesday, when he said that there was only one safe basis on which a low rate could be made and that was a low cost of producing the transportation. The value of the service is determined by the density of the traffic, and that makes the rate vary with conditions. On the Great Northern they had to take into consideration what the country produces. When his road was built to Washington he went there and found that its greatest product was lumber. There was a rate of 90 cents per hundred on lumber to the eastern market. Lumber dealers told him that they could ship at 65 cents, if he would make the rate. He knew they could not do it, and made a rate of 40 cents and has since been shipping large quantities of lumber. This was a discrimination against lumber on the eastern end of the road where no lumber would be produced for ten years.

Fred R. Pennell, Pianist, Grand Opera House, Hot Springs, Ark., writes:

"Two years ago I came to Hot Springs to take the baths and be treated for bladder and kidney trouble. After spending two months here under the care of one of the most prominent physicians and receiving little or no benefit, I was persuaded to try Peruna. I had little faith in it, but after using one bottle I noticed a marked improvement. Three bottles entirely cured me. I can cheerfully recommend Peruna to any one afflicted as I was."—Fred R. Pennell.

Thomas M. Hicks, 1131 13th St., Louisville, Ky., writes:

"Neglected colds, irregular habits and overwork brought on serious kidney and bladder trouble. My blood seemed inflamed with poison, my stomach became entirely demoralized, a bad odor emanated from my urine, and I realized I was a sick man. The doctors dosed me to their heart's content, but I kept growing worse. Then fortune brought Peruna to my notice and I at once began to mend. I kept taking it for five months before I was completely cured. I feel now that I owe my life to Peruna and will never cease to be grateful."—Thomas M. Hicks.

S. L. Earle, Superintendent of Streets, Jacksonville, Fla., writes:

"I am a firm believer in Peruna. I find that it has been of practical benefit to a number of the men employed in the Street Cleaning Department in the city of Jacksonville. They are especially exposed to the inclemency of the weather and a number who caught cold, which later developed into pneumonia, kidney or liver trouble, were cured through the use of Peruna."—S. L. Earle, Superintendent of Streets.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Secretary of State Hanson and Auditor Iverson are deserving of the thanks of all fair-minded people for their manly stand as members of the State Drainage board in behalf of George A. Ralph, says the Princeton Union. The charges preferred against Mr. Ralph by the former public examiner were found to be devoid of truth. The present public examiner revamped those exploded charges at the bidding of his masters, thus furnishing Gov. Johnson with a pretext for opposing Mr. Ralph. Mr. Ralph is honest and competent and a better man could not have been selected for the position of engineer of the drainage board. Mr. Ralph has incurred the enmity of the Van Sant-Johnson combination of traitors and mugwumps because of his stalwart Republicanism.

Answers Charges Made Against Him In the Plummer Pioneer.

EDITOR GAZETTE:

In the Plummer Pioneer of May 6th, Julius Pleth caused to be published a long statement telling why he had caused my arrest on the charge of horse-stealing. While I was very sorry that Mr. Pleth should do all in his power to injure me by dragging my name in the newspapers as well as in court, I determined not to answer until I could back up my statements by the decisions of the court, which I knew must surely prove that I was right and Pleth was wrong.

That time has now come. In justice to myself and my friends I wish to state the real facts as they have been proven in court. About April 19th last, Julius Pleth and his hired man, Oscar Carlson, a constable, drove to my farm in Equality, and finding my team working in the field unhitched them and took them away, claiming that they had been mortgaged by F. E. Sullivan. One of this team was always mine and was never owned by Sullivan. The other had been sold me by Sullivan, and neither of them was included or described in the mortgage which Sullivan had given the Bank of Plummer. Pleth could not find the horses which Sullivan had mortgaged, and so took mine. I immediately replevied the horses, and the case was tried Tuesday of this week. I proved the horses mine, obtained judgment against the bank of Plummer for their return, and damages for their wrongful taking from me. Mr. Pleth did did not even show up at the trial, in spite of all his newspaper talk.

Now as to the horse which I was charged with stealing. About April 27th, Pleth and Carlson went to the farm of Thor Gustenson, and finding Mr. Gustenson plowing in the field, seized one of his horses, unhitched it from the plow, against his will and took it away, claiming it under the Sullivan mortgage. This was a horse which Sullivan had never owned or mortgaged, or described in any mortgage. I bought the horse at Red Lake Falls, sold it to Alex Arveson, who traded it to Gunstenson. Neither Mr. Pleth nor the bank ever owned it or had a mortgage on it or any other claim to it. Yet Pleth caused his man Carlson to swear out a warrant charging me and Gunstenson, the owner of the horse, with stealing it. Pleth had no great grudge against Gunstenson, so he was arrested and permitted to go on his own bond. But I was arrested without any warrant, thrown into jail and assaulted while helpless in the jail. Bail bonds for my release signed by the cashier of the best bank in the county were offered, but refused without any reason. News of my arrest was sent to the newspapers and reached my sick wife in the hospital at Minneapolis. Not satisfied with that, Mr. Pleth himself wrote the article I have referred to and had it published. My hearing was put off from time to time, but when it finally came up for trial at Plummer, last Monday, Mr. Pleth did not show up at all, except to come and ask if I was willing he should drop the case. But I told him in the presence of witnesses to go on and prove what he said he could prove.

Then he instructed the County Attorney to dismiss the case against both Gunstenson and myself, and it was done.

I leave the public to judge who is the guilty one.

Dated May 24, 1905.

Lewis & Clark Exposition.

It is a noteworthy fact that the Lewis and Clark Exposition is the first world's fair to be held west of the Rocky Mountains which has secured the aid of the Government.

"And it is also surprising what an interest is manifested in the Exposition by the people of the East. They see in the Exposition an opportunity to visit the Western country at a greatly reduced expenditure of money, and not only see the Exposition itself, but view the wonders of our Western scenery, and witness the great resources of the Northwest and the opportunities afforded. The Great Northern Railway passenger department has been flooded with inquiries as to the Exposition, and it augurs well for a big travel through the Northwest this year.

St. Hilaire Spectator: D. D. Horton, organizer for the Modern Brotherhood of America, has been here the past week in the interest of that order and has already secured sufficient signers to insure a lodge being instituted here in the near future. It is a fraternal order which has mutual life insurance for principal aim and although comparatively new is growing rapidly in favor. The accident and endowment features of the policies are new in mutual insurance together with the fact that ladies are admitted makes it popular, and about thirty have signified their intention of being members.

It is said that a Red Lake county school ma'am has adopted a novel and effective way of curing tardiness. She offered to kiss the first arrival at school every morning. The next morning at five o'clock a number of young men were seen roosting on the fence, and before eight o'clock all the boys both big and little were on hand and every member of the school board.

The dust storm of yesterday was one of the worse ever experienced in the valley, and for several hours in the middle of the day it was nearly as dark as twilight from the immense amount of dirt in the air. The eleectric lights were turned on for some time to accommodate the business people. The wind blew at the rate of a good many miles an hour, but so far as learned no damage resulted.

The running team held their first practice run with the hose cart Monday evening, and went through the paces like experienced hands. Crookston Times: Roadmaster E. J Regan, of the Greenbush line, who left this morning for Red Lake Falls and other points on his trackage, states that the fill at Red Lake Falls does not bother any more and that apparently the bottom of the pit has been reached. The sink hole was timbered all the way through and is in a shape now which makes it almost impossible for a slide to occur. Mr. Regan has one of the toughest pieces of track on the Great Northern Minnesota system to handle but is getting on nicely with the work.

Dr. Edward L. Hills, district manager for the Minnesota Mutual Life Insurance company, has spent the greater part of the week in the city, getting acquainted with our people and doing a little work for his company. The Minnesota Mutual is now writing one of the most liberal policies of any organization in the country, and include in their list of policy holders a large per cent of the bankers and professional men of the state. They are organized along the safest and most stable lines, and as an investment to the seeker after good insurance their policy offers everything desirable at a moderate rate. Dr. Hills is an old time physician and at one time enjoyed the distinction of being one of the leading drill masters in the fancy drill maneuvers in the United States. He is making many friends among our people and is enjoying his stay here immensely.

ROOSEVELT GAINS WEIGHT

Efforts of President and Secretary Taft to Reduce Are Without Avail.

Washington.—President Roosevelt and Secretary of War Taft are very busy trying to reduce their weight. The president weighs more than 200 pounds and Mr. Taft weighs more than 300—how much more neither one of them will tell. If the truth were known it probably would be found that Mr. Taft weighs nearly 320. The enormous chair which was built for him when he entered the cabinet and which was plenty big enough for him when he arrived from the Philippines now fits him so snugly that it is almost uncomfortable in spots.

Two years ago President Roosevelt considered that he could carry 175 pounds without marring the outline of his athletic figure. A year ago he raised the limit to 180 pounds.

Mr. Roosevelt realized that he is paying the penalty of his athletic life. Like all athletes he must either increase his exercise with his years or pile up fat, and he fears he has about reached the point where all that he can do will not save him from corpulency.

The president when he gets out into the Rockies intends to live on a frugal diet and tramp through the hills from daylight until dark.

GHOST GOES TO OLD WELL.

Would Not Perform His Stunts in the House When Posse of Neighbors Tried to Investigate.

Sioux Falls, S. D.—Many of the residents of Belford township, Sanborn county, are inclined to be terrorized by an alleged ghost. Members of the Hesdorfer family were the first to report the specter. Several weeks ago they declared that every night about midnight they heard sounds as if a log chain was being dragged over the floor of an upstairs room. They were too frightened to go up and make an investigation.

A posse of neighbors visited the Hesdorfer domain at night, but the spook would not manifest itself to them.

Now, according to late reports, the ghost has abandoned the shelter of houses and taken up its abode in an old well on a gumbo flat, which is as desolate a place as any ghost could wish for. It is related that as John Johnson, oldest son of Stiner Johnson, a prominent farmer, was driving across the gumbo flats, near Firesteel creek, he was greatly frightened by the sudden appearance of the ghost, which walked along the road just ahead of Johnson's team for some little distance, when it suddenly disappeared in an old abandoned well near the roadside.

Find $50 in Stick of Wood.

In a stick of wood 20 inches long was found $50 in currency in the woodshed at the home of the late John B. McArthur, a wealthy Marion (Ind.) money loaner, who died at his country home three miles east of Marion March 12 at the age of 91 years. In a baking powder can in the same woodshed was found $40 in currency. It is said Mr. and Mrs. McArthur possessed about $12,000 in cash a short time before they died, but members of the family have been unable to locate any part of it except the $90.

TRIO OF SLAYERS SENTENCED.

Murderers of a Boy in Saloon Holdup Go to Prison.

Anoka, Minn., May 17.—Adjudged guilty of murder in the third degree and sentenced to thirty years in state prison was the fate meted out to John Kolb and Charles Hammon for participation in the brutal murder of little Freddie King during the holdup of Mlago's saloon at Columbia Heights on Thanksgiving eve last year, while Orlin Kalderwit, the cool alleged leader of the murderous trio, convicted some days ago of murder in the second degree, was sentenced to life imprisonment, pursuant to the statutory sentence assigned for the offense of which he was found guilty.

The verdict fastening the guilt on Kolb and Hammon was returned by the jury at 6:15 p. m. after it had been out since 9:46 a. m. The three members of the notorious "bloody gun trio," guilty of the worst crime in the annals of Anoka county, were brought into court immediately and the sentences that avenge their unwarranted slaughter of an innocent boy passed.

NO DISSENTING VOICE

PRESBYTERIAN GENERAL ASSEMBLY FAVORS UNION WITH CUMBERLAND BODY.

Winona Lake, Ind., May 23.—Amid a storm of applause, without debate or a dissenting voice, the general assembly of the Presbyterian church during the day voted to reunite with the Cumberland Presbyterian body, which withdrew from the original denomination Feb. 14, 1810, thereby in effect bringing together the two largest branches of the Presbyterian faith.

MORO BAND WIPED OUT.

Americans Lose Nine Men Killed and Twenty-one Wounded.

Manila, May 19.—The Moro outlaws against whom General Leonard Wood has been campaigning have been killed in action, together with all the principals. The outlaws were supporters and followers of the sultan of Sulu. The large chiefs of the island of Jolo were not involved. The outbreak was purely an aggregation of piratical outlaws and disorderly characters of Sulu and the other islands stretching down to Borneo. The position selected by the outlaws for defense was in almost impenetrable jungles and exceedingly strong, prohibiting the use of artillery and necessitating close contact and an assault in two instances. General Wood's forces sustained a loss of nine killed and twenty-one wounded. The constabulary had two killed.

COUNCILMEN CALLED THIEVES.

Great Disorder Follows Vote on Gas Question at Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, May 19.—Amid scenes of disorder unprecedented in the annals of Philadelphia's legislative body the city council voted to lease the city's gas works to the United Gas Improvement company for a term of seventy-five years for the total sum of $25,000,000, the money to be paid in various amounts before the end of 1907.

When the vote was announced from all over the gallery came hisses and cries of "Thieves!" In clearing the gallery there were several clashes between the police and some of the spectators.

Mayor Weaver is expected to veto the bill and in that event both chambers will probably pass it over his veto.

Business Openings in the Northwest.

It seems to me that the men with a small capital can find no better opportunity for investment and for the establishment of a small business than in some one of the many growing towns of the Northwest.

The Great Northern Railway issues a booklet 'Business Openings,' which adequately and comprehensively describes the needs of the many towns along its line and contains a detailed list of the business openings afforded the man with limited means as well as the big investor. I do not know of a section of the country which offers such limitless opportunities to the man who is content to live in a new country. The fact that in nearly every state of the Northwest there is an available supply for almost every form of manufacture, offers to the manufacturer a chance to operate close to the supply of raw material.

SEEKS RICH MINING TRACT

Joliet, Ill., Man Claims 17,708 Acres Located in the State of California.

Joliet, Ill.—A fight for the possession of mining lands in California, estimated to be worth millions of dollars and running back since the days of President Lincoln, is to be renewed in congressional and court channels. Nicholas Stanton, one of the pioneer Irish residents of Joliet, a man 81 years of age, yet full of vigor, is the claimant.

Stanton is the only surviving relative of the late William McGarrahan, who purchased the mining tracts from a Mexican by the name of Gomez. The property is situated in Fresno and San Benito counties. There were 17,708 acres in the original tract. About 2,000 acres were sold by the United States government, among the large purchasers being the New Idria Mining company, which has taken millions of dollars out of the mines.

McGarrahan was an old man when squatters settled on the tract, and attempted to take it from him. He carried the fight to Washington after he had purchased the land from the Mexican. He fought for years to have the national assembly do him justice. He would get the bill through the house only to see it defeated in the senate. Again he would get it through the senate, only to meet defeat in the house. It was Abraham Lincoln who signed the patent fixing the deed in McGarrahan's name.

After years of unceasing effort, McGarrahan finally saw the bill pass both the house and the senate. It was then put up to President Benjamin Harrison, who vetoed the bill. When this news was carried to McGarrahan, the old man, broken-hearted and prostrated over what he considered a national wrong, collapsed and shortly afterward died. He had spent $200,000 in prosecuting his case, and died penniless. He was buried by charity.

A Bit Mixed.

Artist (showing his picture)—How do you like the style?

She (in confusion)—The stile? Is it a country scene, then? I thought it was a seascape.—Ally Sloper.

Accommodating.

He (fervently)—I would go through anything for you.

She (sweetly)—Well—er—let's begin on your bank account.—Puck.

THE MARAUDER.

There came a beggar to my door,
A comely little lad,
With sun-kissed hair and azure eyes,
With pensive mien, and sad.

So meek he seemed—so poor—alone,
I wept at such ill-faring—
Regardez! When he entered in
He proved a robber daring.

He barred the door, he barred the pane,
(Defenseless quite he found me),
A prisoner in my own demesne,
With braggart oaths he bound me.

He mocked my tears, he stole my heart,
With jest and gibe to flout me!
With rose-leaf strung on rose-leaf red
He wove his chains about me.

Quoth he: "Such sorry garb as yours
No thief would deign to borrow!"
He stripped me of my Cynic's robe,
Of Loneliness and Sorrow.

He found my store of Doubts and Fears,
Made loot to merry measure;
He scattered far to left and right
A hoard of doleful treasure.

He sealed my lips with kisses three,
And swore he'd stay no longer,
But though he made to loose my chains
I felt the links grow stronger.

Ay, strong as steel, these shackles sweet
I would not break nor sever—
A prisoner in my own demesne,
Love holds me fast forever.
—Meribah Philbrick-Reed, in Life.

A PORTRAIT

TWO children, a boy and a girl, stood before a painting that hung upon the wall. The boy gazed with all his soul in his eyes, dimly conscious, perhaps, of what the picture would some day mean to him. It represented a soldier mounted on a black charger, and the man's face was eager, ardent and earnest. With sword in his uplifted hand he seemed urging men to battle.

The little girl indifferently glanced at the portrait from time to time. She had seen it so many times, and then, too, patriotism had not yet awakened in her undisciplined little heart. She was proud in the thought, however, that she possessed something of absorbing interest to her new neighbor. Finally, she began to relate the story she had heard so often.

"You see, it's a really true man, and he painted himself on papa's horse. Those are the clothes he wore in battle—"

"Humph!" said the boy scornfully, looking at her with the superiority derived from his sex and his four years' seniority. "Those aren't fighting clothes, Lucile! He's on parade."

Lucile wondered vaguely what that might be and then begged him to "come and play."

They played for many a day to come, and then the boy's parents moved to another city.

Seven years later he came back for a visit. He had now attained the great age of 17 and when he had met his former playmate, who had just proudly entered upon her "teens," that long-looked-for period, he said most condescendingly:

"Why, this must be little Lucile Felton!"

Straightway Lucile felt she hated him and they spent a few weeks of turbulent companionship in strife.

"I thought you were going to be a soldier," she said one day, "like the man on horseback in the picture!"

"What's the use of being a soldier?" he laughed. "There are no wars. I'd rather be the man that painted the picture than the soldier he represents. Let's go and look at it again."

"Papa gave it away—to the man who gave him the horse."

Ten years passed before Paul Willis saw his little playmate again. It was evening of a summer day at a fashionable watering place. He had just arrived and was instantly surrounded by a group of old-time friends who claimed his attention and recognition after his years of foreign travel. Looking beyond the little group about him into the ballroom, his roving gaze was instantly caught and held by the vision of a girl with a pair of wonderful dark and deep eyes, an exquisite face and a quiet dignity in the carriage of her svelte figure.

"Who is she?" he asked of the man nearest him, and even before the answer came he knew the name would be "Lucile Felton."

"Look out!" he was warned, "Lucile cannot be accused of flirting, but she attracts all men and always turns them down."

She saw him coming across the room and knew him by the winsome brown eyes that were still the eyes of the little boy she had played with years before.

"Oh, yes!" she said carelessly, as he recalled himself to her memory. "I remember all my old playmates."

Then she turned to a man immaculate in evening dress who claimed her for the waltz.

Paul Willis stood gazing after them, all his ardor and impetuosity dampened by her nonchalent greeting. She smiled softly to herself through the waltz. The "little" Lucile Felton at 13 had at last been avenged. All the evening he watched her dancing and chatting with her partners, always gay and careless. His whole heart went out to her.

Just before the last dance he found an opportunity to speak with her alone. He was tongue-tied from this new, strange feeling.

"Are your parents well?" he finally asked abruptly. A shadow came over her face. The fan she held trembled.

"Did you not know? They died four years ago."

"Forgive me—I did not know," he said.

"And the old home," she continued, lifting saddened eyes to his, "burned down and all its contents."

She was more beautiful still with this sudden sorrow in her eyes.

"And you—where is your home?"

"I live with my sister, Mrs. Lothrop, in your home city."

Then others came up to her and he was outside the little circle.

But the next day and the many that followed showed no more of her momentary softening, and she resumed her old careless manner toward him. The season ended, and they both returned to the city, where he became a frequent caller at Mrs. Lothrop's. Always was the longing in his heart, but Lucile did not relax.

Her sister chided her one night after he had left them.

"He loves you, Lucile," she reproached.

"Oh, I don't know," said the girl, turning away her lustrous eyes. "They say he has always been sought after by women, but is never serious."

"That's what they say of you, Lucile," returned Mrs. Lothrop, accusingly.

But Lucile was humming a gay little French chanson, and made no response.

Paul Willis stood before his easel, gazing at the unfinished picture—the picture of a fair-haired boy and a perfect darling of a little girl, who were both looking up at the wall. One of his old photographs had served as his model for the lad's portrayal, and love had brought to his memory her childish face, but the picture that was to hang on the wall he could only dimly recall. The subject and the attitude of the man on the horse that had so stirred his young fancy were in his memory, but not perfectly enough to transfer to canvas.

The next day, while rummaging through the old stock of a picture dealer's he saw a small painting in antique frame that brought forth an exclamation of surprise and joy.

"Where did you get this?" he cried

"A lady sold it to me," replied the dealer. "She had met with reverses and—"

"Do you know where she got it?"

"Yes. She said the man who once owned the original of the horse in the picture gave it to her."

Willis secured the prize, and hastened to his studio, painting "the picture on the wall" with haste and skill.

It was Lucile's birthday. She was glancing with a half pleasure and half humor at the array of books, flowers and confectionery that covered the library table when a maid brought her in a note.

"There is a great, big package just come," she announced, "shall I have it fetched in here?"

"Wait!" and Lucile opened the envelope and scanned the note.

"Oh, Ethel!" she cried to her sister. "Paul Willis has sent me a picture—one he painted! Yes (to the maid) have them bring it in here and opened here."

She was not a little excited and curious. Paul was attracting notice in the world of art and to possess one of his pictures was a privilege. What would the subject be?

When the final wrappings were removed, she stood before it silent and memory-moved.

Her sister gave a little cry of pleasure.

"Oh, Lucile! I understand how he could paint you, but how could he remember that picture—the one we all loved so and we were so provoked when papa gave it away. Why, Paul was a mere child when he saw it!"

The maid now brought in a second package, a small picture, with explanatory note.

Later, when Paul Willis called, he found her still standing before the picture he had painted. He stood beside her as they had stood in their childhood, only now she was gazing intently at the picture, while his eyes were upon her.

She began to fear lest he should hear her heart-beats.

"Paul," she said tremulously, "I love it so!"

"Lucile!" he said in low, passionate tones, "Lucile, love me, too; can't you? I have loved you so long!"

"Paul," very softly, "I have loved you since the night at the ball."

"Lucile!"

He gathered her in his arms.

"But you were so cold—so indifferent—always, Lucile!" he said presently. "How could you hurt me so?"

"I was afraid," she murmured, "that you did not really care. I hoped you did, and then I remembered your tone once when you said: 'And this must be little Lucile Felton!'" His laugh was good to hear.

And the children so long separated were again united.—N. O. Times-Democrat.

VALUE OF A GOOD TEAM.

Real Economy Is Found in Using a Well-Mated and Prompt Span of Horses.

How many good farmers stop to consider the real difference in value between a good, heavy, well-mated, prompt team of horses and even an average one, not to say a poor one. Almost every day in the year the farmer has to drive some kind of a team. In fact, his outdoor life is spent largely in their company, and how much more satisfaction he can get in driving a team of horses that are not only pleasing to the eye and handle pleasantly, but one that will do vastly more work and do it better than an inferior one. Almost every piece of machinery on the farm works better when drawn by a well-mated prompt pair of movers. This is particularly true when drilling grain and planting and cultivating corn. No man can drive a drill or planter straight when one horse is lagging behind.

Generally speaking, I think our farm horses are far too light to do their work profitably and pleasantly, writes Forest Henry, in the Northwestern Agriculturist. Nearly all our farm machinery is much heavier than in the past, and requires stronger teams. We not only plow deeper, but take a wider furrow than we did 20 years ago. Our harrows are made much wider and dig better. We also do vastly more cultivating, all of which requires more horse power. Every engineer will tell you it is not only easier on an engine but less liable to accident to have an engine large enough to do its work without crowding its firebox. It is equally true with a team of horses. A team that has sufficient size to pull their load with their weight, so to speak, and that does not have to work on their nerve, will not only keep easier, but last longer and be less liable to accident than a smaller one.

While it may be well to keep one lighter team for the running about and light work, the farm horses in general should not weigh less than 1,400 pounds, and for my own use I should prefer even 1,500. I know from years of experience that it takes no more grain to feed them, and only a little more hay. A small horse may seem to do the same work nearly as easily for a few days; but he cannot hold up under it for a long stretch like the heavier one. The tendency is also to plow more shallow and to slight the work where one has a light team, when if he had a stronger one he would do it as it should be done.

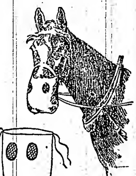
A good heavy horse will even do a good day's work if he is thin in flesh, while a light one is of little account if he gets poor. I do not mean by this that it is advisable or economical to let a work team get run down; but I have been so situated in my early farm days that I could not keep my team in condition. It would have paid me better if I could have fed them better, or done less work with them; but I then had to do the best I could, and not as I would. It is always more economical to keep an extra horse where one is situated so he can, than to overwork them.

If you have a really good, pleasant working team on the farm, do not part with them, even if you can buy another not as good for $100 less. The difference in price will not pay you. Soon your $100 will be gone, and you will never get any satisfaction in working them. Nothing on the place makes the farmer more contented (and the boys feel more like staying on the farm) than good horses to work and drive.

A MUZZLE FOR HORSES.

Good Thing to Use on the Animals Which Have Disagreeable Habits.

Horses sometimes act disagreeable when working in the orchard or when cultivating corn or grain by trying to get a mouthful of the growing crop. The best way to overcome such a habit is to muzzle the horse, says the Indianapolis News, but in doing this extreme care should be used that the horse is not injured nor seriously discommoded by the muzzle. Take heavy white canvas, such as grain bags are made from. Cut this in 18-inch lengths and wide enough to go around the jaws of the horse comfortably loose. Cut two oval airholes three by four inches, braid the edges with strong braid and make a lattice work over the opening by weaving knotted hard twine through it.



HOW THE MUZZLE IS USED.

Bind the top, add strings at the side, hem the bottom edges and it is complete.

The Dairy Bull.

It is estimated that not one dairy bull in 20 is fit to really improve a dairy herd. The fault is in not distinguishing between the twentieth bull and the other 19. Too often the twentieth one brings no higher price in the market than the others.

We Paid $100,000

For Liquozone, Yet We Give You a 50c. Bottle Free.

We paid $100,000 for the American rights to Liquozone; the highest price ever paid for similar rights on any scientific discovery. We did this after testing the product for two years, through physicians and hospitals, in this country and others. We cured all kinds of germ diseases with it—thousands of the most difficult cases obtainable. We proved that in germ troubles it always accomplishes what medicine cannot do. Now we ask you to try it—try it at our expense. Test it as we did; see what it does. Then you will use it always, as we do, and as millions of others do. You will use it, not only to get well, but to keep well. And it will save nearly all of your sickness.

Kills Inside Germs.

Liquozone is not made by compounding drugs, nor is there alcohol in it. Its virtues are derived solely from gas—largely oxygen gas—by a process requiring immense apparatus and 14 days' time. This process has, for more than 20 years, been the constant subject of scientific and chemical research.

The result is a liquid that does what oxygen does. It is a nerve food and blood food—the most helpful thing in the world to you. Its effects are exhilarating, vitalizing, purifying. Yet it is a germicide so certain that we publish on every bottle an offer of $1,000 for a disease germ that it cannot kill. The reason is that germs are vegetables; and Liquozone—like an excess of oxygen—is deadly to vegetal matter.

There lies the great value of Liquozone. It is the only way known to kill germs in the body without killing the tissues, too. Any drug that kills germs is a poison, and it cannot be taken internally. Medicine is almost helpless in any germ disease. It is this fact that gives Liquozone its worth to humanity. And that worth is so great that we have spent over one million dollars to supply the first bottle free to each sick one we learned of.

Germ Diseases.

These are the known germ diseases. All that medicine can do for these troubles is to help. Nature overcomes the germs, and such results are indirect and uncertain. Liquozone attacks the germs, wherever they are. And when the germs which cause a disease are destroyed, the disease must end, and forever. That is inevitable.

Friday of this week marks the end of the present school term of the Red Lake Falls schools, and to the Senior class of this progressive institution it marks the time of their debut into the ever changing kalediscope of existence, when they will take up the sterner duties which their happy school days have fitted them for. The work on the program for class week has been prepared with great care, and from Sunday evening until next Thursday night important and pleasing events will come fast and furious.

Good Ball Game.

The first base ball game of the season on the local grounds was played Tuesday afternoon between the high school team and a picked nine of "has beens" about town. The teams will likely meet in another contest shortly.

Lambert Lady Dies.

Mrs. Joseph Farlardeau, wife of one of Lambert's prominent farmers, died suddenly at her home in that town Sunday morning. Mrs. Farlardeau had not been ailing to any extent, and had stayed home while the balance of the family went to church. When they returned they found her dead, the attack having killed her instantly. Deceased was well and favorably known in Lambert and leaves a family of eight children to mourn her untimely death. The funeral was held from the Catholic church in Lambert Tuesday morning, the services being conducted by the Rev. Father Roy, and one of the largest crowds in the history of that town turned out to pay their last respects to a beloved neighbor and friend. The sympathy of the community is extended to the family.

POSTPONE THE HEARING.

Judicial Ditch Hearing Again Put Off.

At the hearing on Judicial Ditch No. 4 held Saturday at Bender's in Equality, some 100 homesteaders and land owners who will be affected by the waterway presented their views of the matter and as a result the hearing has been postponed until December at which time it is believed it will go through successfully. The average land owner along the proposed waterway wants work deferred until such time as the public land traversed is all final proofed by homesteaders. If the waterway is built at once a great many who would be benefitted would escape the tax because of the fact that the land upon which they are settled is still the property of the government. Engineer Ralph stated today that the ditch would undoubtedly be ordered in at the December hearing on the matter.

CHORAL CLUB CANTATA

"Phyllis" a Pretty Musical Cantata, To Be Presented By Local Talent Friday Evening, of Next Week.

The Red Lake Falls Choral Club will present the pretty musical cantata, "Phyllis, the Farmer's Daughter," at the Metropolitan opera house Friday evening of next week, June 9, and from all indications the event will be one of the most enjoyable of the season.

The club is composed of fifty members and the piece to be presented introduces the full chorus in general scenes besides the soloists and separate choruses of men and women.

The scene of the cantata is laid at the home of Farmer Meadows, a fine character, and the plot embraces a pretty love story and a thread of comedy and romance bound to please the public.

The cast of character will be as follows:

Phyllis, the farmer,s daughter, ...Miss Iza Tibbetts.
Margaret, the adopted daughter,... ....Miss Florence Dantremont.
Douglas, a young farmer,.......... ....Prof. Andrew Onstad.
Farmer Meadows,....L. A. Kaufer.
Chapleigh, a dude from the city.... ....J. Drew Marshall.

The choruses of men, women and villagers will make up the cast.

The Choral club has a large number of fine singers and their all-winter's drill has fitted them exceptionally well for the parts they will take.

The admission prices will be as follows: Reserved seats, 35c; general admission, 25c; children, 15c.

The Gazette bespeaks for the club a large attendance.

FITTINGLY CELEBRATED

G. A. R., Citizens and School Children Observe Memorial Day In Fitting Style.

Tuesday was Memorial Day and Red Lake Falls did her part toward a proper celebration of this greatest of all days to the remaining members of the "old guard."

At ten o'clock the parade formed at the city hall, and headed by the band marched to the school house where it was joined by the school children and the general parade commenced. The city officers, members of the G. A. R., school children and citizens participated, the line of march being through the main streets to the Metropolitan opera house, where the exercises of the day were held.

The choral union sang the "Star Spangled Banner" in a beautiful manner, after which Mayor Duffy welcomed the crowd and read the names of the veterans of the G. A. R. in and around Red Lake Falls. Following this Representative L. C. Simons spoke for some fifteen minutes upon the day and its importance and pleased the audience with his efforts. The choral club sang "America" with the audience joining in, after which Attorney Fred L. Farley was called upon and responded in a short talk on the day and its lessons. Prof. Chamberlain followed in a neat address, after which the band played "Yankee Doodle" and the crowd was dismissed.

The exercises were all of a strictly impromptu nature, but the program was carried out without a hitch and to the pleasure of the large crowd which gathered at the hall.

PLUMMER

(From the Pioneer.)

Henry Enderla went to St. Hilaire Saturday night and remained until Monday visiting friends.

Dr. Joseph Bolton, recently of Roseau, arrived here Wednesday and spent a few days looking the town over with a view to possibly locating here.

Joe Belaire was out from Red Lake Falls Wednesday on business.

F. E. Hunt, the Red Lake Falls hardware man, was a business visitor here during the week.

On Wednesday Nels Hakenson, of Garnes, sold out all his property by auction sale and will leave this part of the country.

Attorneys Germo and Boughton were out Monday from Red Lake Falls to look after the Seiff-Gunstenson case in the justice court.

J. S. Kotschevar was out from Red Lake Falls this week selling cream separators and incidently looking up evidence in the county seat fight.

Dr. Harry A. Oftel, of Kennedy, was a visitor with friends here Thursday. He was on his way to Fergus Falls on a business and pleasure trip.

T. A. Tase, H. A. Tessa and P. Ouam arrived Wednesday morning from Werstrand, Minn., to go out on their claims east from here. The older of the Tasn boys is an old school mate of A. Alrick's and they enjoyed a pleasant visit together for the first time in fourteen years.

Deputy sheriff G. Jarman was here Wednesday on his way to Thief River Falls having finished the posting of the necessary notices for the special county board meeting on June 5 to consider the county seat removal petition. In all thirty notices were posted and it took a lot of work by the sheriff to get the work done in time.

The engineer of the work train pulling into town shortly after daybreak yesterday morning saw a man lying on the track and stopped the train. The crew got out to investigate and found it was a drunken individual who had gone to sleep with the rail for a pillow. Had the train came along half an hour sooner it would have been a case for the coroner.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Johnson, of Garnes, are called upon to mourn the loss of their two-weeks old infant who died of blood poisoning on Monday. They brought the suffering infant into Plummer and wired to Thief River for Dr. Gambell who promptly responded but the little one was beyond medical aid dying a short time after the physician's arrival.

Andrew Ellingson yesterday loaded up his household goods and shipped them to Thief River Falls. From there he goes by steamboat to High Landing where he will start a large general store.

Ed Aubol and Henry Miller drove over from St. Hilaire Wednesday in search of an elusive artesian well digger. This was Mr. Aubol's first visit to Plummer and he liked the town and its prospects immensely being particularly well pleased with our creamery for which he predicts a great future.

Julius Pleth this week made a deal for and disposed of the Farow farm containing 151 acres adjoining Plummer on the west. The price paid was $6,000 or close to $40 per acre and it is well worth it considering improvements and location and should make an ideal stock and dairy farm. It has plenty of pasture and field land with excellent drainage to the river running water for the stock and timber enough to last a man a life time. The buildings which could not be replaced today for $1,200 will be in better shape and the land summer followed this summer and disked this fall for crop next year as it will be too late to have anything done to it this year. Considering the price paid by the railroad company for land adjoining this is a bargain and in fact is considered one of the nicest laying and best farms in Red Lake county.

Charley Fellman has invested in a "Jotebock," which is swede for an ordinary ornery-looking goat with whisker. There has been considerable speculation about what Charley was going to do with it. Some say he likes the odor, others that he bought the goat so that he would always have a cent about his clothes; again that he would use it to help start Dableu's broncho. Anyway he has the goat as you will probably find out if you get on the windward side.

The worn-out stomach of the over-fed millionaire is often paraded in the public prints as a horrible example of the evils attendent on the possession of great wealth. But millionaires are not the only ones who are afflicted with bad stomachs. The proportion is far greater among the toilers. Dyspepsia and indigestion are rampant among these people, and they suffer far worse tortures than the millionaire unless they avail themselves of a standard medicine like Green's August Flower, which has been a favorite household remedy for all stomach troubles for over thirty-five years. Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

WEAR MUCH WIRE IN SKIRT

Yards of Steel and Whalebone and Armor Plate Used in Ladies' Apparel.

London.—Fashionable women will wear during the summer of 1905 something very closely akin to that monstrosity of bygone days—the crinoline.

So large, indeed, are the quantities of wire and steel used by fashionable dressmakers in the manufacture of the new spring skirts that there is some justification for the reported return of the dreaded crinoline.

Under the skirt is an elaborate framework of wire and whalebone, very suggestive of the crinoline. This produces the full and outstanding effect now aimed at by the leading French dressmakers.

"In Paris quantities of wire and steel are absorbed in the making of all skirts of thin material," said a well known court dressmaker to a reporter.

"For a full ten inches below the waist the skirt must fit like a glove, and this effect can only be obtained by the use of a whalebone encasement.

"Nine steels—about seven and one-half feet—in the upper part of a skirt is an ordinary allowance, but in the case of plaited skirts, every plait may require to be held in place by five whalebones, and in order to accentuate the straight line from the bust to the waist, which is a great feature of the new styles, a broad band of steel is inserted in the bodice.

"A single row of whalebone at the hem, about 18 feet, insures the skirt standing out, and above this are inserted several rows of wire, the quantity varying according to the texture of the material. In the case of a thin voile or crepe de chine dress from 108 to 150 feet would be necessary."

WEDS TWO IN SINGLE DAY

Good-Looking Youth Admits the Soft Impeachment, But Pleads Lack of Memory.

New York.—According to the judges of general sessions there has never been such a strange case of bigamy brought to their attention as that of John Steffler, who pleaded guilty before Judge Newberger of marrying two women on the same day.

Steffler is a good-looking young man. He told his attorney and the court that he had no recollection of contracting either marriage and could offer no explanation of his conduct.

Judge Newberger remanded him to the Tombs for sentence, and will make an investigation into his case. When Steffler pleaded guilty he said:

"I'm married all right to these two women, but I don't know why I did it. I must have been in a trance. I don't remember anything about it."

The indictment charges Steffler with marrying Estelle Deffely August 13 last. On the evening of the same day Steffler married Hannah Ackerman.

Both of Steffler's wives were in court and intermittently denounced Steffler as a "brute." The two women sat together in the rear of the courtroom where he was arraigned.

CLEVER PLOT TO BREAK JAIL

Convict, an Electric ian, Puts Out All the Lights wit a Switch— Recaptu red.

Salem.—By means of an ingeniously contrived cut-off switch with which he controlled the lighth ng system of the prison Charlee W illamson, a trusty convict, escaped fro n the penitentiary but was recaptured before he succeeded in getting out of t own.

Williamson is an electrician serving a five-year term for forgery. He tapped the main current wire in the pump- house and put in an improvised a vitch. When ready to leave before dayl ight, Williamson shut off the lights, tie d a string to his switch lever, to which he attached a water bucket. He punctured the bottom of the bucket and dropped it into the water tank outside the building. The water slowly filled the bucket, which was weighted with lead, until it sank after a period of two hours and a half and turned on the lights again.

In the meantime Williamson scaled the penitentiary wall in a dark spot and escaped. Warden Curtis happened to be at the Southern Pacific depot, recognized the fellow as he was about to board the train for Portland and re-arrested him.

EX-MAYOR NOW A "NAVVY"

Former Executive of Des Moines Seeks Work on Streets from Officials He Had Appointed.

Des Moines, Ia.—That his family might continue to have a home to shelter them, James Brenton, ex-mayor of Des Moines, took pick and shovel and commenced work upon the public streets. Of the members of the board of public works, who had received their appointments at his hands, he asked the privilege of joining the street working gang, and the request was granted, at a salary of $2 per day.

Brenton's case has been peculiar. Uneducated, he went into politics, and was nominated and elected county superintendent of schools here. Later he was elected mayor. During his administration the mayor's office was a political storm center.

He served but one term, and went out of office with scarcely a dollar. Next he appeared as a bartender in a Des Moines saloon.

Charley Fellman has invested in a "Jotebock," which is swede for an ordinary ornery-looking goat with whisker. There has been considerable speculation about what Charley was going to do with it. Some say he likes the odor, others that he bought the goat so that he would always have a cent about his clothes; again that he would use it to help start Dahlen's broncho. Anyway he has the goat as you will probably find out if you get on the windward side

Millionaire's Poor Stomach.

The worn-out stomach of the over-fed millionaire is often paraded in the public prints as a horrible example of the evils attendant on the possession of great wealth. But millionaires are not the only ones who are afflicted with bad stomachs. The proportion is far greater among the toilers. Dyspepsia and indigestion are rampant among these people, and they suffer far worse tortures than the millionaire unless they avail themselves of a standard medicine like Green's August Flower, which has been a favorite household remedy for all stomach troubles for over thirty-five years. August Flower rouses the torpid liver, thus creating appetite and insuring perfect digestion. It tones and vitalizes the entire system and makes life worth living, no matter what your station. Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

WEAR MUCH WIRE IN SKIRT

Yards of Steel and Whalebone and Armor Plate Used in Ladies' Apparel.

London.—Fashionable women will wear during the summer of 1905 something very closely akin to that monstrosity of bygone days—the crinoline.

So large, indeed, are the quantities of wire and steel used by fashionable dressmakers in the manufacture of the new spring skirts that there is some justification for the reported return of the dreaded crinoline.

Under the skirt is an elaborate framework of wire and whalebone, very suggestive of the crinoline. This produces the full and outstanding effect now aimed at by the leading French dressmakers.

"In Paris quantities of wire and steel are absorbed in the making of all skirts of thin material," said a well known court dressmaker to a reporter.

"For a full ten inches below the waist the skirt must fit like a glove, and this effect can only be obtained by the use of a whalebone encasement.

"Nine steels—about seven and one-half feet—in the upper part of a skirt is an ordinary allowance, but in the case of plaited skirts, every plait may require to be held in place by five whalebones, and in order to accentuate the straight line from the bust to the waist, which is a great feature of the new styles, a broad band of steel is inserted in the bodice.

"A single row of whalebone at the hem, about 18 feet, insures the skirt standing out, and above this are inserted several rows of wire, the quantity varying according to the texture of the material. In the case of a thin voile or crepe de chine dress from 108 to 150 feet would be necessary."

WEDS TWO IN SINGLE DAY

Good-Looking Youth Admits the Soft Impeachment, But Pleads Lack of Memory.

New York.—According to the judges of general sessions there has never been such a strange case of bigamy brought to their attention as that of John Steffler, who pleaded guilty before Judge Newberger of marrying two women on the same day.

Steffler is a good-looking young man. He told his attorney and the court that he had no recollection of contracting either marriage and could offer no explanation of his conduct.

Judge Newberger remanded him to the Tombs for sentence, and will make an investigation into his case. When Steffler pleaded guilty he said:

"I'm married all right to these two women, but I don't know why I did it. I must have been in a trance. I don't remember anything about it."

The indictment charges Steffler with marrying Estelle Deffely August 13 last. On the evening of the same day Steffler married Hannah Ackerman.

Both of Steffler's wives were in court and intermittently denounced Steffler as a "brute." The two women sat together in the rear of the courtroom where he was arraigned.

CLEVER PLOT TO BREAK JAIL

Convict, an Electric ian, Puts Out All the Lights wit a Switch— Recaptu red.

Salem.—By means o an ingeniously contrived cut-off switch with which he controlled the lightin g system of the prison Charles W lliamson, a trusty convict, escaped fro n the penitentiary, but was recapturea before be succeeded in getting out of t own.

Williamson is an electrician serving a five-year term for forgery. He tapped the main current wire in the pump-house and put in an improvised s witch. When ready to leave before dayl ight, Williamson shut off the lights. He d a string to his switch lever, to which he attached a water bucket. He puncture d the bottom of the bucket and dropped it into the water tank outside the building. The water slowly filled the bucket, which was weighted with lead, until it sank after a period of two hours and a half and turned on the lights again.

In the meantime Williamson scaled the penitentiary wall in a dark spot and escaped. Warden Curtis happened to be at the Southern Pacific depot, recognized the fellow as he was about to board the train for Portland and re-arrested him.

EX-MAYOR NOW A "NAVVY"

Former Executive of Des Moines Seeks Work on Streets from Officials He Had Appointed.

Des Moines, Ia.—That his family might continue to have a home to shelter them, James Brenton, ex-mayor of Des Moines, took pick and shovel and commenced work upon the public streets. Of the members of the board of public works, who had received their appointments at his hands, he asked the privilege of joining the street working gang, and the request was granted, at a salary of $2 per day.

Brenton's case has been peculiar. Uneducated, he went into politics, and was nominated and elected county superintendent of schools here. Later he was elected mayor. During his administration the mayor's office was a political storm center.

He served but one term, and went out of office with scarcely a dollar. Next he appeared as a bartender in a Des Moines saloon.

RUSSIAN FLEET IS ANNIHILATED

JAPANESE OBTAIN OVERWHELMING VICTORY IN ENGAGEMENT AT SEA.

DOZEN WARSHIPS SUNK OR CAPTURED

BALANCE OF BROKEN FLEET ENGAGED IN DESPERATE RACE FOR REFUGE.

ADMIRAL NEBOGATOFF A PRISONER

MORE THAN THREE THOUSAND RUSSIANS CAPTURED BY JAPANESE.

In the great naval battle fought Saturday and Sunday in the straits of Korea the Japanese obtained a complete and overwhelming victory. Late advices showed Rojestvensky's fleet, composed of all his most effective and powerful ships, was completely shattered. According to the latest information two Russian battleships, one coast defense armorclad, five cruisers, two special service ships and three destroyers were sunk and there were captured two battleships, two coast defense armorclads and one special service ship.

Rojestvensky's flagship escaped badly damaged and with other vessels of his broken fleet is being pursued by the victorious Japanese. Rear Admiral Nebogatoff, however, was captured, with 3,000 other prisoners. It seems probable that in their crippled condition other Russian vessels will fall into the hands of the Japanese before they can reach Vladivostok.

While London rumors say that several Japanese vessels were lost Admiral Togo officially reports that his squadron was not damaged. A number of Russian vessels still remain near Shanghai, but it is evident that as a fighting force the great fleet has been destroyed.

REPORTS FROM TOGO

TERSELY TELL OF THE BATTLE IN WHICH RUSSIAN FLEET WAS DEFEATED.

Tokio, May 29.—Reports from Admiral Togo at the Japanese headquarters:

First report; received morning, May 27—Immediately upon the receipt of report that Russian squadron was in sight, our combined squadron started for attack. Weather is fine today, but with heavy seas.

Second report; received night, May 27—Combined squadron attacked Russian squadron today near Okinoshima (southeast of Tsushima) and defeated it, sinking at least four ships and inflicting heavy damage upon others. Damage to our ships is insignificant. Our destroyer and torpedo flotillae delivered attack after sunset.

Third report; received Monday, May 29—Main force of our combined squadron continued pursuit from May 27 until May 28 near Lincourt Rocks (northeast of Okinoshima), encountered a group consisting of Nicholai (battleship), Orel (battleship), Senynyin, Aprexin and Izumurud. Izumurud fled, while remaining four vessels surrendered. No damage to our ships.

Told by Captured Russians.

According to statements of prisoners vessels sunk in engagement, May 27, were Borodino (battleship), Alexander III. (battleship), Zemtchug and three other ships. Rear Admiral Nebogatoff and a number other Russians taken prisoners. The following damages suffered by enemy in addition to those given above since commencement of battle as reported:

Commanders not under immediate command of Togo and by observation stations:

Sunk—Admiral Nachimoff, Dimitri Donskoi, Svietlana, Admiral Usakoff, Kamchatka, Irutsch and three destroyers.

Captured — Vladimir Monomach, foundered after capture. One special service ship, whose name unknown, and one destroyer captured.

Russian losses definitely known so far may be classified as follows:

Two battleships, one coast defense ship, five cruisers, two special ships, three destroyers were sunk; two battleships, two coast defense ships, one special service ship, one destroyer were captured.

It is not yet clear whether three vessels as stated by prisoners to have been sunk are included or not in the above list. There are more than 1,000 prisoners besides 2,000 taken by the main force of the combined squadron.

The naval engagement is still in progress, so that it will take some time before the final results can be known STRUGGLE IS HOPELESS.

French Press Advises Russia to Make Best Peace Possible.

Paris, May 29.—The late dispatches of the Associated Press showing the crushing nature of the Russian naval defeat have led to the comment that Russia has played her last card and must bring the war to a close. The semi-official Temps makes an urgent appeal on the subject, voicing the sentiment of the allied nation that Russia should abandon a struggle which has become hopeless and make the best peace possible. The paper says Admiral Rojestvensky was the last hope and his defeat leaves Japan master of the sea without any further chance of the Russian navy or army achieving a victory.

WILL HASTEN PEACE.

Opinion of Jap Victory in Leading Financial Centers.

New York, May 29.—Advices received from London and other leading Continental financial centers by the local bankers were all of the opinion that Japan's decisive victory would hasten peace.

Reports that the government at Washington had signified its willingness to act as mediator in the event of peace proposals were current and added to the hopeful feeling in financial circles that the end of the war might be looked for.

PEACE NEGOTIATIONS

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT STARTS THEM ON LEARNING OF JAPANESE VICTORY.

Washington, May 30.—Quick to realize the far reaching effect of Admiral Rojestvensky's disastrous defeat in the Korean straits and in keeping with his promise announced a long time ago to bring the belligerents in the far East in direct negotiations at the proper time, President Roosevelt at night received by special appointment Mr. Takahira, the Japanese minister, and a conference followed the greater part of the evening. Mr. Takahira called at the White House about 9 p. m. and was immediately received. Early in the day the minister called with the information of the battle given out at the legation. Sir Henry Mortimer Durand, who has just returned from England, will lunch with the president Thursday, when the whole situation will be considered. Count Cassini, the Russian ambassador, said he expected to see the president before the week is over, and Baron Sternberg, the German ambassador, who was a caller at the Russian embassy during the day, where he remained in conference for some time with the ambassador, is constantly in touch with the president, and on account of his intimate acquaintance with President Roosevelt he is at liberty to call any time. Baron Sternberg is maintaining a discreet silence.

OPPOSITION WITHDRAWN.

Organization Republicans End Fight on Mayor Weaver.

Philadelphia, May 29.—Israel W. Durham, "organization" leader, has issued the following statement:

"I have advised my friends not to oppose the confirmation of Colonel Sheldon Potter as director of public safety or A. Lincoln Acker as director of public works if their names are presented to the select council."

This move foreshadows the withdrawal of the opposition of Durham and associates to the mayor for the present at least.

ATLANTIC WINS RACE

AMERICAN YACHT CROSSES FINISH LINE FIRST IN TRANSATLANTIC CONTEST.

The Lizard, Eng., May 30.—The American yacht Atlantic, Captain Robert Barr commanding, finished first in the great transatlantic race for the cup offered by the German emperor. Not another competitor was in sight when the queenly American racer crossed the finish line south of the Lizard light at 9:15 p. m., to the boom of a gun from the German cruiser Pfeil, the stakeboat. The Atlantic proceeded for Cowes by way of Southampton intent on beating the record.

The Atlantic made an average of 10½ knots since leaving Sandy Hook. The record sail for one day was 341 knots on May 24, which probably beats anything hitherto achieved.

FOUR PERSONS DROWNED.

Their Boat Capsized While They Were Trying to Cross a Mill Pond.

Springfield, Mo., May 29.—Fred Lee, Frank Gray, Miss Lou Rhodes and Miss Sarah Gates, all of this city, were drowned in the James river, near here during the day. They were members of a picnic party which went to the river on a fishing excursion and their boat capsized while they were trying to cross a mill pond.

FOR LONG STRUGGLE

LABOR UNIONS OF CHICAGO ARE NOW ENGAGED IN MAKING PREPARATIONS.

Employers Assert They Will Make No Concessions to Teamsters and Are Confident of Winning the Strike. Over Seven Thousand Police and Deputy Sheriffs Doing Guard Duty and Protecting Nonunion Men.

Chicago, May 29.—That the labor unions are of the belief that the strife between capital and labor will be a long one was demonstrated at the meeting of the Chicago Federation of Labor during the day when arrangements were made for holding a strike demonstration on July 5. On this date a monster parade of the strikers and the affiliated unions will take place. At the day's meeting each union affiliated with the central body was represented by three delegates. The strike situation was discussed in all its details and the sentiment of the meeting was that the teamsters should continue the fight until the seven express companies offered some sort of a compromise. The officials of the express companies are still obdurate in their declaration that no concessions need be looked for from their side, so the matter of settlement through this channel seems as remote as ever.

With over 7,000 police and deputy sheriffs detailed on strike duty, the employers declare that during the present week they will be able to convince the strikers that any further continuation of the fight will be suicidal to the teamsters' union.

Conditions Nearly Normal.

"In the next few days we will have all the help needed to get business back to a normal basis," said Superintendent Reed of the Employers' Teaming association. "During the past week we secured over 1,500 drivers from cities and towns outside of Chicago and there are several hundred more en route. Three hundred of these men are expected to arrive here in the morning from the northern part of Wisconsin and Minnesota. They are principally lumbermen and river drivers and will be assigned to the lumbermen's association. With the 150 drivers already engaged by the lumbermen this additional force will put the lumbermen in fairly good shape again.

"The State street stores and the other business houses that became involved in the trouble at the beginning have practically enough men to handle all their wagons, so it is only a question of police protection that concerns us now."

In the lumber district, which is feared more than any other part of the city, many of the saloons, which have been made the headquarters of the striking teamsters, were closed Sunday by the order of Mayor Dunne. Police kept crowds from congregating on the streets.

STATE TICKET NAMED

OHIO REPUBLICAN CONVENTION MARKED BY GREATEST OF HARMONY.

Columbus, O., May 25.—In a convention almost devoid of striking features and notable chiefly for the unanimity which prevailed the Republicans of Ohio completed the choice of party candidates for the fall elections and adopted a platform of principles covering leading national and state issues. The ticket named has been known, with only one exception, for several months and for lieutenant governor the contest was so quiet that all opposition was withdrawn and every candidate was nominated by acclamation. General Harris, the candidate for second place, held the same position during the late William McKinley's two terms as governor. The ticket named is as follows:

Governor, Myron T. Herrick; lieutenant governor, Andrew L. Harris; judge of the supreme court, William C. Davis; attorney general, Wade Ellis; state treasurer, W. S. McKinnon; member of board of public works, William Kirtley.

MARTIAL LAW IN FORCE.

Troops Directed to Restore Order at Warsaw.

Warsaw, Russian Poland, May 27.—Governor General Maximovitch has issued a proclamation directing the troops to restore order and to use their arms without hesitation to this end and giving notice that all persons arrested in connection with disturbances will be tried by courtmartial.

Strong patrols of cavalry and infantry are parading the city and all the public buildings are guarded by troops.

BOMB THOWN AT CARRIAGE.

Governor of Baku, Caucasia, Assassinated in Usual Manner.

Baku, Caucasia, May 25.—The governor of Baku, Prince Nakachidze, was assassinated at 3 p. m. by a bomb which was thrown at his carriage. A lieutenant who was accompanying the governor and a bystander were also killed by the explosion and the coachman is believed to have been fatally injured.

Breathes there one with soul so dead who never to himself hath said, "I'll pay, before I go to bed, the debt I owe the printer?" There are some, we know full well, who never such a tale can tell; but they, we fear, will go to, well, the place where there's no winter.

A question that is just now agitating the minds of leading republicans of the state is upon what the representation in the next republican state convention shall be based, whether the basis should be the vote for R. C. Dunn or for Theodore Roosevelt, says the Cass Lake Times. While the former would be the only just proposition, it seems likely that the vote for Roosevelt will be taken as the basis. The vote for Dunn was so small in Minneapolis that in a convention based on it the flour city would be "small potatoes" indeed, and a great howl is going up in consequence. And now it is up to the leaders to decide who are the true-blue republicans of Minnesota, the democrats who voted for Roosevelt or the republicans who voted for Johnson.

In a column of about as weak excuses as would be possible to invent, Alex A. Sweaas last week tried to explain to the voters why Thief River Falls flunked so completely in her first offer to the county. Mr. Sweaas uses lots of space, but boiled down to what he really says you could express their reasons for refusing in about four words. He goes on to tell that it was the action on the part of Red Lake Falls that caused them to refuse to stand by their agreement, but when they made their offer there was no stipulation, Mr. Sweaas stating that he would post the notices required by law free of all expense to the county. He never had the slighest notion in the world of making good his assertions, and now that his offer has proven a boomerang he crawls behind a weak defense in trying to square his home town with the people. The fact that Red Lake Falls did this or that did not cost Red Lake county one solitary cent, while Thief River's refusal to carry out their part of the contract will amount to several hundred dollars to the tax-payers. Isn't this a most excellent illustration of what they are doing? They offer a free court house to the county, against the law, too, but after the county seat was moved they would say that some one at Red Lake Falls had kicked and that the people would have to build a handsome new county building to keep the records in. They are laying for you, voter, and are already congratulating themselves that they have you sufficiently blinded so that any dirty action on their part will go unnoticed.

John Eastman says that Thief River Falls would send a big delegation to any town in Red Lake county for a fourth of July celebration—Red Lake Falls excepted. John evidently forgets the two excursions to Thief River Falls' fair during the last two years, when Red Lake Falls sent them 350 one year and almost 500 another, to help make their fair a success. He also forgets that Crookston wanted the reservation land sale, and would have got it had it not been for the intervention of Red Lake Falls' citizens in behalf of Thief River Falls. He probably also forgets how he shouted so loudly about how grateful the people of the up-river city felt at the action of the people here in behalf of their town at that time. Red Lake Falls has not invited anyone to celebrate with them, but if Thief River insists that the line be drawn we can undoubtedly reciprocate a little later in the year. It is extremely poor policy for the people of any county to divide themselves and refuse to take part in any affair of one or the other side, but Thief River Falls has certainly started to show that this is what she intends to do. The sole ambition of the gang up-river is to get the whole business, and then tell the balance of the county to go to the dickens.

John Eastman's Thief River News has on several occasions in the past few months taken pains to tell the people of the county that Red Lake Falls was in the habit of having fires and that everything here was apt to be set on fire. Perhaps John didn't mean it, but a report was issued by the state auditor this week which shows up John's argument to a nicety. Cities having fire departments are allowed $200 annually and a per cent of all insurance policies paid during the year in addition, and while Red Lake Falls drew only the $200 provided for by law, Thief River got something over $500 as her share, $300 being realized on the per cent of insurance paid on fire losses there during the year. John will probably explain to you, reader, how Red Lake Falls has more fires than his town but gets only about half as much from the state.

A GREAT PROBLEM.

Shall the Mail Order Houses Get All the Business or Not?

The nation is face to face with great economic questions, one of the greatest of which is the centralization of capital in commercial and industrial enterprises. Otherwise stated, shall the American nation consist of a few or many individual dealers?

You own a farm of 160 acres. For this farm you have worked hard; you have sacrificed pleasures and comforts during a period of twenty to thirty years. The farm is now yours; it is paid for, clear of all encumbrance; the old mortgage has been lifted. More than that, you have a comfortable house and well constructed barns and buildings and good neighbors. You had expected to make it your home for the remainder of your life. But just when you think you have everything arranged comfortably a capitalist comes your way, he likes that section of the country and has his agents buy up 10,000 acres around you. Your old neighbors are inveigled into selling out and move away. The capitalist who purchased their farms wants yours; you decline to sell and he makes it unpleasant for you. Your old neighbors are gone, there is no need of the town where you have done your trading. We submit the question: Which is better for you, a community of farmers under the old conditions, or the new condition with yourself and the neighbor(?) of the 10,000 acre farm? Which is better for your neighbors? Which for the nation?

One mail order house in Chicago received in a single day day one fifth of the entire business mail of that city. When that fact is known, and also that single and individual catalogue houses sell annually $25,000,000 to $50,000,000, you can plainly see that the distribution of merchandise is centering rapidly in a few hands. How long at this rate, will it be until prices on merchandise will be marked up and marked down just as oil is? If you patronize mail-order houses you are fostering a monopoly by building up the large catalogue house. Every order you send away to a mail-order house contributes a share to the success of a monopoly. You are feeding a monopoly and while you do this, local enterprises go hungry for patronage. The country does not need more 10,000 acre farms; it does need more 40 to 160 acre farms The country does not need ten monstrous mail-order houses to do all the business; but it does 100,000 small merchants.

What is the responsibility of the citizen who helps to develop a monopoly? Is he contributing to the stability and perpetuity of the republic?—Chicago Dry Goods Reporter.

WILL BUILD EAST LINE

N. P. Surveyors Working West On Survey From M. and I Road at Blackduck.

That the N. P. railway company intends to build a line from Red Lake Falls to Blackduck is again impressed upon the minds of northern Minnesota residents by the fact that there is a crew of surveyors at work running a line eastward towards the head of the lakes. At the present time the engineers are working in the vicinity of Nebish, south of Red lake, westward, with this city as their objective point.

State Senator Swedback, of Bemidji, one of the best authorities on railroad matters in northern Minnesota, stated yesterday that there was no doubt in his mind but that the N. P. really intended to extend its line from Red Lake Falls eastward to Blackduck. He was not prepared to quote any official of the road as stating that this was the case, or say that he had any inside information regarding the intention of the company, but gave his opinion simply from personal observations of what the company has already planned in the way of railroad building throughout this section of the state.

The N. P. have long since contemplated such a line, and in view of the fact that the opinion has prevailed that the Soo would some day build east it is figured that the N. P. intends to be first on the ground.

The extension would open an elegant new stretch of territory and would give the N. P. an outlet to the west, which would make a large demand for the wood and timber of the country over east.

A party of N. P. officials were here last week, looking over the ground carefully and while they were not talking for publication it is apparent that there is something in the wind.

Successful Home Treatment.

Dr. Hartman's Cure for Female Diseases—A Generous Offer to Women.

Invalid Women are Applying by Thousands for Dr. Hartman's Free Home Treatment by Letter.

MRS. J. P. COADY, Treasurer of the Ivy Leaf Club, 1,702 6th Avenue, Council Bluffs, Iowa, writes:

"Peruna is no experimental medicine. I have used it off and on now for three years. At that time I was cured of irregular and painful menstruation. Since that time I have taken it for indigestion or whenever I felt overworked and in need of a tonic, and I have always found that it was of great benefit to me. I am therefore pleased and happy to say a word in its praise and shall gladly indorse it to my friends."—Mrs. J. P. Coady.

Miss Hattie Grace, 25½ West 46th St., New York, writes:

"Peruna has changed me from a fretful, irritable, nervous woman into a healthy and a happy one. Nothing seems to worry and to fret me any more. Since early womanhood I suffered with bearing down pains and nervousness. I was thin and worried, but Peruna restored me. Those who knew me before cannot understand the change, but I can sum it all up in the blessed word, Peruna."—Hattie Grace.

Mrs. Elizabeth Ferguson, No. 181 51st St., Brooklyn, N. Y., President West Brooklyn Audubon Society, writes:

"I am pleased to tell what a blessing Peruna has been to me. Several years ago my constitution seemed broken down and I cared little whether I lived or died. I had taken so much medicine that the sight of a bottle made me sick. I had read about Peruna curing women, and I thought perhaps it would help me. I bought a bottle and before it was finished I felt better. I kept on taking it, and after three months' faithful use I was a well woman and able to do the work and undergo the strain of younger days."—Elizabeth Ferguson.

In view of the great multitude of women suffering from some form of female disease and yet unable to find any cure, Dr. Hartman, the renowned gynecologist, has announced his willingness to direct the treatment of as many cases as make application to him during the summer months without charge.

The treatment will be conducted by correspondence. The doctor will prescribe all medicines, applications, hygienic and dietary regulations necessary to complete a cure. The medicines prescribed can be obtained at all drug stores. This offer will hold good only during the summer months. Any woman can become a regular patient by sending a written statement of her age, condition of life, history and symptoms of her derangements.

All cases of female diseases, including menstrual irregularities, displacements, ulcerations, inflammations, discharges, irritation of the ovaries, tumors and dropsy of the abdomen, should apply at once and become registered as regular patients. All correspondence will be held strictly confidential.

As is well known, Dr. Hartman is the president of The Hartman Sanitarium, an institution which has a department devoted exclusively to the treatment of female diseases. He is thus brought to see thousands of such cases every year, the most of whom return to their homes to be treated by correspondence. The principal remedy he relies upon in such cases is Peruna, which every woman should have who has any affection of this kind. Those wishing to become patients should address Dr. S. B. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio.

No one knows better than Dr. Hartman how much the women suffer with diseases peculiar to their sex. No one knows better than he does how many of them suffer with such diseases. Patiently, hopefully, wearily, and often silently, they eke out a miserable existence, year after year.

No martyr in poetry or heroine in romance makes a more touching appeal to human sympathy than the woman burdened with the cares of a family trying to carry the extra load of some tormenting and ever present female disease.

Dr. Hartman's sympathy for such is unbounded, and his willingness to help them limited only to his power.

Climatic Cures.

The influence of climate conditions in the cure of consumption is very much overdrawn. The poor patient, and the rich patient, too, can do much better at home by proper attention to food digestion, and a regular use of German Syrup. Free expectoration in the morning is made certain by German Syrup, so is a good night's rest and the absence of that weakening cough and debilitating night sweat. Restless nights and the exhaustion due to coughing, the greatest danger and dread of the consumptive, can be prevented or stopped by taking German Syrup liberally and regularly. Should you be able to go to a warmer clime, you will find that of the thousands of consumptives there, the few who are benefited and regain strength are those who use German Syrup. Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound of imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Rev. Nicol Weds.

An event in which much interest is taken at Thief River Falls as well as other valley towns, was the marriage of Miss Rebecca Woodbridge Van Cleve of Minneapolis to Mr. James Houden Nicol, pastor of the Presbyterian church of Thief River, which was solemnized last Wednesday evening in the Andrew Presbyterian church in Minneapolis. Some five hundred guests were present, and the church was beautifully decorated with palms, foliage and ferns. The ceremony was performed by the pastor of the church, Rev. C. F. Hubbard. The maid of honor was Miss Elizabeth Yerxa and the best man was Rev. Robt. C. Young of Lisbon, N. D., a seminary classmate of Mr. Nicol's. At the conclusion of the ceremony the bride and groom received the five hundred guests in the church parlors, and later the bridal party and relatives partook of a supper at the bride's home. Mr. and Mrs. Nicol left for a wedding trip to New York City and will visit as well Chicago, Buffalo, Rochester and Auburn, They will be at home in Thief River Falls the middle of June, where they will remain until their final departure for Syria where they take up work under the Board of Foreign Missions.

His View of County Seat Matter.

St. Hilaire Spectator: H. C. L. Stoll, of Joliet, Illinois' who has considerable Red Lake county land in this vicinity, writes us the following:

"I see by your paper the controversy between Red Lake Falls and Thief River Falls to remove the county seat and would suggest, as it would cause considerable expense and perhaps a long time before it is finished and more or less ill feeling arise, why can not these good citizens come together say since you want it and we want it and we cannot very well agree, why not make it unanimous and locate the county seat at St. Hilaire, and admit that this is the best location, being more centrally located in the county and more convenient to all people concerned and the two towns would conclude it is in the right place after all and we are all friends. Don't you think so?

Yours truly.
H. C. L. Stoll.

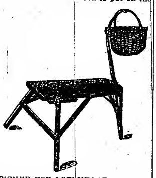
HANDY PICKING STOOL.

Device Which Will Prove of Great Service in the Orchard During Picking Time.

Our illustration shows what is called a "go-devil" or picking stool. It is all made of basswood except the front leg, upon which the basket hangs. This is made of a buggy or cart shaft, which can be had from any hardware store. The platform is 4 feet long, 15 inches broad and 1⅜ inch thick. The corners are sawed off, and the ends made double thickness, to allow two tag screws on each leg, and are thoroughly braced. The small brace on the under side is iron, with two screws at each end. A small iron hook is put on the under side of the "crane's-bill" to hang the basket on. The spread of the hind legs is four feet and four inches, and from the hind to the front leg is five feet nine inches.



PICKER FOR LOW-HEADED TREES.

The stool is three feet high. To get up catch the thing by the neck with one hand and put one foot on the horizontal brace near the hind leg, and with a little effort you are mounted on something that will not fall over, as three legs always adjust themselves to the ground even if on a slope. Place either end of the stool up or down, and you and it are all right. This is my own invention so far as I know, and it is the best thing to pick apples from up to nine to eleven feet high, that I have ever seen or thought of. I have a young orchard of 1,200 trees, eight years old last spring, from which the fruit was picked almost entirely with these stools, very rapidly and without any danger of mutilating the branches. We do not use any stepladders in the orchard. We abandoned them many years ago as neither safe nor satisfactory. The stools and the ladders are all that we use to get in reach of the fruit.

FEMALE WEAKNESS

5421-2 Congress St.
Portland, Maine, Oct. 17, 1902.

I consider Wine of Cardui superior to any doctor's medicine I ever used and I know whereof I speak. I suffered for nine months with suppressed menstruation which completely prostrated me. Pains would shoot through my back and sides and I would have blinding headaches. My limbs would swell up and I would feel so weak I could not stand up. I naturally felt discouraged for I seemed to be beyond the help of physicians, but Wine of Cardui came as a God-send to me. I felt a change for the better within a week. After nineteen days treatment I menstruated without suffering the agonies I usually did and soon became regular and without pain. Wine of Cardui is simply wonderful and I wish that all suffering women knew of its good qualities.

Wilhelmina Snow
Treasurer, Portland Economic League

Periodical headaches tell of female weakness. Wine of Cardui cures permanently nineteen out of every twenty cases of irregular menses, bearing down pains or any female weakness. ART OF RIDING BELOVED OF ROOSEVELT POPULAR HERE.

FINE WORK OF POLICEMEN

Millionaire and Girl of Ghetto Have Like Aims—Interesting Group of Slum Workers—A New Profession.

NEW YORK.—Agnes Mulhall, known locally and lovingly as "Bossy" Mulhall, her sister, Lucille, a girl of 19, and the two younger Mulhall children are expected to show in New York this week the tricks of the hard-riding plainsmen, who herd cattle for profit. New York is going to give them a rousing welcome. "Cowgirls" will be a novelty.

There isn't a city in the country where good riding is better appreciated or more often practiced. Among 4,000,000 tenderfeet there is room for many horsemen to leaven the mass. I don't mean the graduates of the riding schools alone, though these in their English fashion ride securely enough, "working their passage" by rising to the trot. The polo players are another element, the fox-chasers another. Theodore Roosevelt broke an arm riding to hounds with the Meadowbrooks years ago, and I do not know that he ever suffered so severe an accident upon the plains. The hunters use hard little pads by way of saddles, very different from the roomy Mexican saddle of the plainsman.

The best riders of New York are the mounted park policemen and the centaurs that guard Fifth avenue and its thronged crossings. Some men can do some things, other men other things. The mounted police can catch runaway horses. Lariats are barred by the conditions, but they ride down the bolting horses, warning people out of the way as they go, and in 19 cases out of 20 stop the horses before serious damage is done. Nothing finer is done by city servants; perhaps nothing as fine except the work of the firemen and of the nurses in the pest hospitals. The horses contribute. Some of the experienced mounts of the park force would not fetch large sums at Tattersall's, but they are perfectly trained, will stand at attention where they are left, as long as their masters desire, and take part in their duties as keenly as a polo pony takes to the game.

The Spring Romances.

IN the spring a reader's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love—to judge by the amount of attention the newspapers have paid to the betrothal of young J. G. Phelps Stokes and Miss Rose Pastor, a typical child of the Ghetto. Miss Pastor is really typical, in spite of her unusual intellect, because she has won her education through almost incredible privations, which have left their traces upon her in a slender physique. She is also of pronounced Hebraic features, and her beauty is that of the spirit and the intellect, not the blushing way of average girlhood. At 50 she should resemble George Eliot.

"That's Mr. Stokes, standing on the lower stair," a lady said at a crowded East side reception. It was Mr. Stokes, but not standing on the stair. He is fully six feet three in height and very slender, and among the rather small denizens of the East side he looks tall indeed. He also is of a type. It is the type which has furnished the reformers and enthusiasts of all ages. His face might remind one of features as different as those of medieval Savonarola or of modern Bishop Whipple, the "Indian bishop." He is a millionaire, a member of a family that has furnished four state governors to New England, and that has been prominent in finance in New York for two generations. He is a relative of Ed. Stokes, the bad boy of a former generation of the family, whose famous duel with "Jim" Fisk over a pair of Josie Mansfield's rubbers standing on a certain doormat will not soon be forgotten. Young Stokes has business cares, is president or director in a company or two of financial consequence. But his heart is in the slums. No man can look at him and doubt it.

Miss Pastor is as single-hearted. She has within the past two weeks written a great deal of matter for the newspapers, which, of course, seek such contributions because of her momentary prominence. With her, however, there is no thought of self-advertisement.

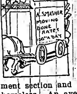
A Quartette in the Slums.

AT the recent dinner to Jane Addams, of Chicago, given in Clinton hall, Miss Pastor and Mr. Stokes sat at table with Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hunter, the latter Mr. Stokes' sister, and, like him, very rich. These four met in their work. Hunter is an Indiana boy, not an ascetic, like Stokes, but strong, insistent, a man of affairs, a fighter. He won his spurs as a social investigator in Chicago, and is now one of the best authorities in the country upon problems of poverty, his recent book upon the subject being a mass of hard-won information. He was in his bachelor days head worker of the University Settlement. To-day he and his wife are living in a pretty little tenement among thousands of other tenements that are not at all pretty in a slum neighborhood. Into similar quarters will Mr. and Mrs. Stokes go—a notable quartette.

I am the more inclined to insist upon the devotion of such people because the profession of settlement worker has become of late so very professional. The first workers were practically all amateurs. Sometimes an exceptionally valued worker who happened to be poor in this world's goods was allowed free board to permit him or her to continue the work. To-day nine out of ten of the workers in the largest settlements are as frankly professional as any other teachers. Boys going through college go into the work because they like gymnastics or because they can get free room rent and free board. After graduation men and women alike are salaried as workers; I have even known cases where settlement work has been looked upon as a resource by those for whom ordinary teaching was thought to be too difficult. In ten years the situation has in this respect entirely changed. Very likely the professionals do their work a great deal better than the volunteers did. But you are not called upon to admire too greatly their sacrifices—when they have made none—nor their privations—when they suffer none.

Hence I find such cases as Mr. Stokes' interesting. They carry me back to the old days when such people as Charles B. Stover and "Jimmy" Reynolds and Miss Wald were the type of workers in the social settlement, as they are still the type of its best product.

May Moving Day.



THE May moving habit of all New York about this time every year seems ridiculous until you reflect that all New York cannot help it—and then it still seems ridiculous.

A bridge approach is cut through a tenement section and 5,000 persons are homeless. An avenue is extended and 250 residences are torn down. The great depots of the Pennsylvania and New York Central are planned, and 50 acres of land covered almost solidly with houses must be cleared. Parks are to be opened, streets closed. Whole sections of the city have so changed that old residents can no longer find friends or even casual acquaintances about them without learning new languages to speak.

Does anybody still read or remember the "Ragged Dick" stories of Col. Alger? Dick boarded in Mott street when he engaged in the bootblack business. I know a young man of purest New England parentage who was born in Mott street, where for 20 years there have been nothing but Chinamen and their white associates. No wonder May moving is busy!

On an average all New Yorkers move every second year. That makes a flitting of about 1,000,000 persons every spring, and about as many more scattered through the rest of the year. They range from the poorest to the richest. The Alfred Vanderbilts have lived this winter in a hired flat. So has "Charley" Schwab, the steel man. So do bank presidents, actors, clergymen, railroad presidents. Where a man does not own his home he finds more frequent occasions for moving.

If the people who are moving this month could be ranged in one long procession they would make a parade of 50 miles in length in file of 20 abreast spaced only five feet apart. Their goods and chattels arranged upon two-horse trucks would make a single-file procession from New York to Omaha. And some of the people move their goods upon wheelbarrows and hand-carts at that.

Even the Equitable Must Move.

FOR years the home office of the Equitable Assurance society has been one of the sights of New York. Why, it is ten stories high! When I came to the city the instruments of the United States weather bureau were perched upon this dizzy height. Now with 20 and 30-story buildings all about, it looks low and squat, and the directors begin to face the necessity of rebuilding. Ten-story buildings are now called "tax-payers."

The Equitable building may be worth $10,000,000 or more including its site. Or rather the site is worth that and the building little in addition. The Lawyers' club installed upon two floors at the top was one of the pioneers of the downtown club idea in the city. To this day there is no more splendid place of marble fittings and magnificence.

This building is a monument to the memory of a strong man, the late Henry B. Hyde. Whatever difficulties his idolized company may have got itself into since his death, Hyde built to last everything that he touched. It is a thousand pities that such work should have to be torn down and pried apart. The fate of the Equitable building—once the show place of the city, now doomed to be torn down that it may rise upon the site more resplendent than ever, is it symbolic of a [illegible] rebuilding needed in the company? I wonder!

ARRANGEMENT OF HOGPENS

Practical Plan Which Has Been Tried by One Farmer with Success.

The great difficulty in planning a hog-house is to get it so that it will be dry and clean. In this plan, 16x20 feet, I have four sleeping—or nest—pens, and four feed pens; close partitions between them, except passageway between the nest pen and the feed pen, explains John M. Jamison, in the Rural New Yorker. Each feed and nest pen is to be 5x6 feet, and the alleyway 4x20 feet. The building should stand east and west, with pens on south side, and alley on north side, and have a yard on south side as large as desirable. I would make a double doorway at two of the partitions, and make the doors so they will close tight. As arranged, the sows can make their nests in corners away from doors, and the wind will not blow on them when the doors are open. The pens next to the alley can be used to feed in, when the weather is bad, and when good, the feeding can be done in lots outside. The more feeding done inside, the more work required to keep the house clean.

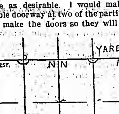

DIAGRAM OF HOG PEN.

I would lay the floor with cement concrete, making the alley floors level, but the pen floors I would slope from the south wall towards the alley, about three inches in the 12 feet. This will tend to cause all water to flow towards the alley, and keep the nests and feed stalls comparatively dry. The bedding from the nests, when soiled, can go into the lots or alley, just as the feeder wishes, when he cleans out the stalls. The yards should be kept clean by throwing in straw, or other coarse material. Over this floor plan the builder can put such building as suits him best; a shed in form, the roof sloping one way, or a comb roof. In either case, if he wishes, a room for bedding and feed above the pens. The building should be located on an elevated point of ground, so the water will flow away from it in all directions, and the roof spouted, to keep water from making it wet about the building. Make doors at the ends of the alley. If the doors are cut in half, it will often be an advantage in airing out the pens. There should also be plenty of windows on the south side, for sunshine is a very important factor in the health and comfort of swine.

THE BEST HOG TROUGH.

With Slats Across the Top It Will Keep the Hogs from Lying in Them.

I have tried all kinds of hog troughs and like best the one shown here, writes an Illinois farmer to the Farm and Home. It can be made of two boards for water, swill or grain, is stout and durable, is not liable to burst when water freezes in it. The boards should be 2x12, and 16 feet long is a good length; 1x12-inch boards make a very good trough, but are not so durable as two-inch. The slats across the top keep the hogs from lying in the trough when it is filled with water in hot weather.

THE LIVE STOCK.

Study the individual needs of each cow and supply those needs.

Keep the horse judiciously shod and exercised.

Be cheerful—help to inspire the other fellow too.

Some cows would be better ones if they were fed more.

It is the steady, quiet horse that can do the biggest day's work when it is hot.

You can change the quantity of milk by the feed, but the quality is born with the cow.

A strong, well-grown sow may be bred to farrow at one year, but a small one should not be bred until 10 or 12 months old.

Chaff and loose straw dropping through the cracks of an ill-constructed ceiling are a constant source and cause of dust during milking. The ceiling of the stable should be as tight as your house.

Many a stable of four or more horses, if intelligently mated and driven, would do better work and do it easier. An old horse mated to a young one, a heavy horse to a light one, a slow horse to a fast one, often causes trouble, which might easily be avoided by a little foresight and judgment in the matter.

The Horse to Reject.

Reject a horse with toes turned in or out. The twist generally occurs at the fetlock. Toes turned out are more objectionable than toes turned in. When toes are turned out the fetlocks are generally turned in, and animals so formed are very apt to cut or bruise. Both, however, are weak formations.

CLOSELY-PENNED FOWLS.

The Best Results Not Obtained from the Chickens Which Have to Be Confined.

I have found by large experience that it is not advisable to pen up fowls unless they have to be penned, writes an Indiana correspondent of a farm journal. Closely penned fowls are generally deprived of many of the things fowls should have to enable them to do their best work. Usually the green stuff in the yard is so small in quantity that it soon disappears altogether. I have a lady friend who was very anxious to keep hens. She had a house built for them, about ten by ten feet in size, and a yard about as wide as the house, and 30 feet long. She bought four beautiful White Rocks and a rooster. How pretty they looked in the yard, bright with green grass! If she had but been content with the little flock, she might have been keeping hens yet.

But alas! She thought if 80 eggs a month were such a help, 400 eggs a month would be far better, so she bought 20 more fowls of the same breed. That made a flock of 25. How the grass did disappear from that yard! By midsummer not a green thing was left there. When the fall rains began, even the roots of the grasses that had made up the texture of the sod had disappeared, having decayed in a few weeks after the tops were killed. The birds spattered around in a lake of mud. How they did look, covered with mud from foot to wing.

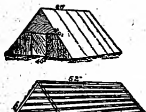
Their mistress no longer took her visitors out to see them. Her enthusiasm had died out, and she gave the fowls as little attention as possible. Another month, and they had disappeared. The lady said she had got tired of keeping chickens, "they are so dirty."

Now, if my friend had retained her little flock and at the same time retained that bit of green grass, she would not have become disgusted. Looks count for a great deal.

COOPS FOR HEN AND CHICK

An A-Coop, Boarded Tightly at the Back and Part of Front Is Best for Spring.

A handy coop and run for hen and chicks is shown in the cut. This is an A-coop, boarded tightly at the back and part of the front so as to afford protection in early spring. An A-shaped run the width and height of coop and of any length desired can be used to give the hen greater liberty.—Farm and Home.



HEN COOP AND RUN.

THE DEPTH OF FRAMES.

For Comb-Honey the Divisible Brood Chamber Hive Is Probably the Best.

While all are agreed as to the desirability of keeping bees on movable frames, there seems to be a great diversity of opinion regarding style and depth of same.

Movable frame hives may be divided into two classes as far as general principles go. One is known as the divisible brood chamber, and the other as the non-divisible, or single chamber hive. As all hives and fixtures about the apiary should be of one style and size, the beginner ought to weigh well this hive problem before marrying himself to any particular one. He will find that changing from one to another is an expensive proceeding. The style or depth best for any certain locality can be ascertained only by being on the spot and studying conditions.

Whether comb or extracted honey is to be produced also has a great deal to do with it. If extracted honey is to be produced, a frame as deep, or deeper than the "L" will most probably be best. If honeycomb is the object, the divisible brood chamber hive would probably suit better. Consider these points well before proceeding.—Midland Farmer.

DURABLE HIVE STAND.

One Made Out of Drain Tiles Proves the Most Satisfactory—Easy to Make.

Stands are convenient to keep the hives off the ground. Four drain tiles set three or four inches in ground and leveled and packed well around with earth, will make one of the cheapest and best stands. They hold the hive up, provide no place for mice or moles and one can easily mow around them, says Farm and Home. Put a board up in front of an alighting board and the thing is complete. Bricks set on end in the ground would be nearly as good and cheaper.

To keep up the stamina of the flock it is considered a good policy to mate old males with pullets, and cockerels with old hens.

Millionaire's Poor Stomach.

The worn-out stomach of the over-fed millionaire is often paraded in the public prints as a horrible example of the evils attendant on the possession of great wealth. But millionaires are not the only ones who are afflicted with bad stomachs. The proportion is far greater among the toilers. Dyspepsia and indigestion are rampant among these people, and they suffer far worse tortures than the millionaire unless they avail themselves of a standard medicine like Green's August Flower, which has been a favorite household remedy for all stomach troubles for over thirty-five years. August Flower rouses the torpid liver, thus creating appetite and insuring perfect digestion. It tones and vitalizes the entire system and makes life worth living, no matter what your station. ROAD HOISTS TEAMS.

DEVICE CARRIES WAGONS UP A STEEP INCLINE.

Novel Engineering Scheme, Which Relieves Overworked Horses, Is in Operation at Cleveland, O. —Electricity the Power.

Cleveland, O.—A novel and important invention, the first rolling roadway ever built, has been completed and placed in operation in Cleveland. By means of it teams with heavy loads are carried up a 20 per cent. grade—forward 120 feet and upward 65 feet—in four minutes or less. Thousands of spectators have witnessed this interesting sight, while at the same time numerous representatives from other cities, and even from Europe, interested in the various problems of transportation, have watched its operation with interest.

In Cleveland, as in many other cities, the wagon route for a large volume of heavy traffic is necessarily up several steep grades. The city proper is upon an elevation and the docks and several of the principal railroad depots are at the foot of long inclines, over which several streets lead. On Factory street, the site of the first roadway, the incline for many years has been traversed by heavily laden teams, which climbed the grade at a snail's pace, and with great difficulty. At the same time it has never been possible to haul as heavy loads up this incline as could be hauled were the start made from the top of the hill.

Under the new regime the team draws its load to the foot of the rolling roadway and is carried to the top without any effort at all on the part of the horses. In addition to the saving of labor on the part of the horses and the saving of time to the owner of the vehicle, it is believed that there will be a noticeable saving in blacksmith's bills. The loads hauled in this manner are fully equal to those possible upon a level road. Horses soon become used to the invention; in fact, few of them frighten, even on the first trip.

The rolling roadway is a great endless belt, which is operated by means of electric power, and which weighs 99 tons. It is the invention of Col. Isaac D. Smead, of Cincinnati, who worked nearly three years on the drawings before they were even seen by others. The rolling roadway is considered a wonderful piece of engineering. About four months are required to build such a roadway. Nearly 100 men were employed on the one in Cleveland.

At the top of the hill there is a small tower. It is from this point that the electric power is applied. When the wagons have been clamped to the roadway at the start the man in the tower is notified by means of an electric signal, and the roadway begins to move at the rate of some four miles an hour. Once at the top of the hill and upon the level, the machinery stops and the clamps holding the wagon are loosened. Ten vehicles can be placed upon the roadway at one time. The daily capacity is about 600 vehicles. A toll of from 10 cents to 25 cents is charged, dependent upon the weight of the load. For foot passengers two cents toll is charged. However, while the tests were being made vehicles and foot passengers were carried free.

HORSE ON SNOWSHOES NOW

Swede Mail Carrier in Wyoming Has Steed Equipped for Heavy Travel.

Saratoga, Wyo.—Uncle Sam has to overcome many difficulties in winter time to supply mining camps in the mountains with mail. The town of Dillon, which is supplied tri-weekly from this place, is at an altitude of 9,000 feet. Up to the 1st of February the mail contractor managed to keep the trail open for sledges, but there came such a snowfall at that time that sleds had to be abandoned and the mail carried on snowshoes.

The contractor has secured the services of a Swede who has a horse which he has taught to travel on snowshoes, and from this time on the horse will draw a specially constructed handsled, capable of carrying from 100 to 200 pounds. This will enable the people of Dillon to get small packages of express and other light matter along with their mail. The difficult portion of the road is about four miles in length on the top of the divide, where the snow is very deep.

FIND CASH BURIED BY REDS

Pot Containing $2,000, Supposed to Have Been Left by Indians, Unearthed in Texas.

Mount Pleasant, Tex.—T. A. Ledhetter has dug up a pot containing nearly $2,000 in gold coin 20 miles north of here. The coin is all United States money except one or two pieces, which are either Spanish or Mexican coins.

Years ago an old Indian stated that some kind of a treasure had been buried near where Ledhetter made his find, and parties made a search for it at that time, but were unable to find anything and gave up the search. Several trees near the place had Indian marks on them. The money is in a good state of preservation.

Forty Skeletons in Cave.

News has been received from the Vancouver island coast of the discovery by prospectors of a cave on the seashore between Quatsino sound and San Joseph bay, at the north of Vancouver island, in which 40 skeletons were found. The prospectors found most of the skeletons intact. Some of the skulls were broken. It is possible that the cave was the burial place of an Indian tribe.

We Will Buy

A 50c. Bottle of Liquozone and Give it to You to Try.

We want you to know about Liquozone, and the product itself can tell you more than we. So we ask you to let us buy you a bottle—a full-size bottle—to try. Let it prove that it does what medicine cannot do. See what a tonic it is. Learn that it does kill germs. Then you will use it always, as we do, and as millions of others do.

This offer itself should convince you that Liquozone does as we claim. We would certainly not buy a bottle and give it to you if there was any doubt of results. You want those results; you want to be well and to keep well. And you can't do that—nobody can—without Liquozone.

We Paid $100,000

For the American rights to Liquozone. We did this after testing the product for two years, through physicians and hospitals, after proving, in thousands of different cases, that Liquozone destroys the cause of any germ disease.

Liquozone has, for more than 20 years, been the constant subject of scientific and chemical research. It is not made by compounding drugs, nor with alcohol. Its virtues are derived solely from gas—largely oxygen gas—by a process requiring immense apparatus and 14 days' time. The result is a Liquid that does what oxygen does. It is a nerve food and blood food—the most helpful thing in the world to you. Its effects are exhilarating, vitalizing, purifying. Yet it is a germicide so certain that we publish on every bottle an offer of $1,000 for a disease germ that it cannot kill. The reason is that germs are vegetables; and Liquozone—like an excess of oxygen—is deadly to vegetal matter.

There lies the great value of Liquozone. It is the only way known to kill germs in the body without killing the tissue, too. Any drug that kills germs is a poison, and it cannot be taken internally. Every physician knows that medicine is almost helpless in any germ disease.

Germ Diseases.

These are the known germ diseases. All that medicine can do for these troubles is to help Nature overcome the germs, and such results are indirect and uncertain. Liquozone attacks the germs, wherever they are. And when the germs which cause a disease are destroyed, the disease must end, and forever. That is inevitable.

NEW MEAT SHOP.

George Sauer, Competent Butcher, To Engage In Business.

Red Lake Falls is again to have two meat shops, George Sauer having made arrangements to open a new market in the building formerly occupied by F. X. Calier, and will make his bid to the public either the latter part of this or the first of next week.

Mr. Sauer has been in the employ of Messrs. Groshong & Blake for several years, and is a first class butcher and good fellow. He will employ Louis Berthiaume, who is also well known as a competent man, and the two will go after a share of the business of the city.

Mr. Sauer proposes to make his shop modern and up-to-date and by fair treatment and best goods to be obtained he asks that the public give them at least a fair part of their business.

Red Lake Falls should be able to support two good meat shops nicely, and from indications they will have two of the best establishments of this kind in the valley.

Success to the new enterprise.

SCHOOL DAYS OVER

Class of '05 of The Red Lake Falls High School Graduates With High Honors.

Surrounded by beautiful decorations of ferns and potted plants, amidst a profusion of beautiful decorations of class colors, and to a vast assemblage of admirers and friends, the class of 1905 of the Red Lake Falls High School bade farewell to their school duties last Monday evening, in a commencement program of great interest and untold merit. Every available post, pillar and railing of the spacious Metropolitan opera house was artistically draped with class colors, while the stage presented the appearance of a beautiful flower garden, hanging over which were many pretty and artistic decorations in class colors, and a large colored "1905" brilliantly illuminated. Sitting among this beautiful picture, the class of 1905 presented an appearance long to be remembered by the vast assemblage as one of the most beautiful ever looked at.

The exercises began with a stirring march by the local orchestra, and to demonstrate that the evening's entertainment would be one of the most pleasing ever held in the Metropolitan opera house the orchestra outdid themselves in the style and snap of the music, and had the crowd in a high spirit of expectancy when they finished their first number. Rev. Father Fayolle delivered a pleasing invocation, when Miss Blanche Berthiaume, the salutatorian of the class of '05, stepped forward and after greeting those present in behalf of the class, delivered an interesting oration entitled "Mothers of the Great" which was well received by the audience. Miss Rose Sutter followed and gave the class history in entertaining style, the people showing their appreciation of her efforts by liberal applause. Michael Connaughty followed with an oration on "The Opportunities Offered to Young Men of Today" and in a forceful argument demonstrated many points showing where the young man who does not succeed is all to blame. Miss Lillian Nauman, the class poet, gave a class poem entitled "More Beyond" which showed careful preparation and marked ability. J. Drew Marshall spoke for some little time with "What Next" as his topic, and dwelt upon the great advancement and many improvements made during the past quarter of a century. He went into the future to considerable extent and was given marked attention and appreciation by his hearers. Miss Iza M. Tibbetts followed with the "Class Prophecy" and the audience was held in rapt attention while Miss Tibbetts painted a pretty word picture of the future of the class of '05. Her prophecy was given in verse, and was one of the best efforts of the evening. Mrs. E. H. Chase then sang the beautiful soprano solo "Answer" and was obliged to respond to an enthusiastic encore. Miss Margaret Kaus was next on the program with a pleasing oration on "Heroism in Common Life." Her paper showed much work and careful thought and was well received. Miss Mayme Linnihan spoke on "The Power of Music" and her efforts were given high consideration by the audience. Miss Clara Marchaud read the "Class Will" a humorous conglomeration of jollies and boquets. Her paper was very good, and the people showed their appreciation of her work. Valedictorian Ralph E. Healy finished the class part of the program in a splendid oration on "The Industrial Manager" and followed it with a touching farewell to the public, school board and class members. Prof. Chamberlain presented the diplomas, which were the most beautiful ever seen here, and spoke at some length on the importance of the step taken by the class at this time. Rev. H. W. Knox pronounced the benediction, and while the orchesta rendered stirring music the friends of the young people crowded onto the stage to extend congratulations and the graduation exercises of the class of '05 were a part of history.

The class was composed of ten of the brightest young men and ladies of the city, who go forth into the world capable of doing themselves and their parents proud by their bearing and conduct. The Gazette with a host of other friends and admirers extends to the class of 1905 the best of good wishes for a long life and highly successful career.

Can't Donate Hall

Attorney General Rules That Thief River Council Exceed Their Authority In Offering to Rent City Building.

CHAS. E. BOUGHTON,
Attorney-at-Law,
Red Lake Falls, Minn.,
May 27, 1905.

HON. E. T. YOUNG, Atty-Gen.
St. Paul, Minn.

Dear Sir:

Can the City Council of a city legally give to the county authorities a lease of its City Hall to be used as a Courthouse, for the term of ten years, at a nominal rent of one dollar per year, the said City Hall being a building of the value of several thousand dollars, and now used by the city for city offices and fire department? An early answer will oblige,

Yours truly,
CHAS. E. BOUGHTON,
City Attorney of Red Lake Falls, Minn,

Office of the Attorney General,
St. Paul, June 6th, 1905.

MR. CHAS. E. BOUGHTON,
Attorney at Law,
Red Lake Falls, Minnesota.

Dear Sir:—In your favor of the 27th ultimo you submit to this office the following query, to-wit: "Can the City Council of a city legally give to the county authorities a lease of its City Hall to be used as a Court House, for the term of ten years, at a nominal rent of one dollar per year, the said City Hall being a building of the value of several thousand dollars, and now used by the city for city offices and fire department?"

I have the honor to advise you that the City Council has no authority to lease a City Hall or other public building in the manner indicated in your question. A City Council has only the powers granted to it by the Legislature and the Legislature of this state has not yet seen fit to grant to City Councils a power to lease public buildings to the Municipality.

Yours truly,
R. A. STONE,
Assistant Attorney General.

Several Minneapolis papers commented on the above order Wednesday saying that Mr. Young's ruling means that Thief River Falls CANNOT OFFER their City Hall for court house purposes either at a nominal rent or free. They have absolutely no power to donate the use of the building they have claimed they would give to the county at a rent of $1 per year, and the ruling of the attorney general puts a decisive quietus on the loud holler they have made. This settles the matter of a court house for all time to come, Red Lake county has at present a better court house than the building they offered, but even were this not true there can be no excuse for the people wanting to change now, as a vote for Thief River would mean a vote to bond the country for $50,000 for a court house, while the taxpayers would put up the cash.

NEW MAN AT HELM.

Harry B. Healy Steps Out of Furniture Partnership.

John C. Wander, of Spring Hill, this state, arrived here Saturday last and immediately took charge of his interest in the furniture business, formerly in the name of Anderson & Healy. Mr. Wander succeeds Harry B. Healy, who has been interested in the firm for a couple of years.

Mr. Wander comes recommended as a first class business man, who will assist Mr. Anderson in keeping the "Leader Store" at the front, and he will be given a hearty welcome to the business circles here. All his life has been spent in the business world, and he is capable to enter work with a knowledge of what he is doing.

Mr. Healy has not yet decided what he will do, and his friends here are offering up silent prayers that he will remain with us. No young man in the community enjoys a greater respect or confidence than Harry, and should he decide to stay here the news will be gladly received.

The Gazette wishes the firm of Anderson and Wander unbounded success, and hopes that their business may flourish like the proverbial green bay tree.

Card of Thanks.

We desire to extend our heartfelt thanks to the many kind friends and neighbors who came to our assistance so readily during the last sad rites over the body of our beloved daughter. Especially do we appreciate the kindly offices of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Bourdon, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bourdoa, Mrs. John Drier and Rev. H. W, Knox as well as all the little schoolmates of the deceased.

PETITION GETS JOLTED

Commissioners Decide That Irregularities Are Apparent In Giving Notice of Intention.

The board of county commissioners met here Monday to take action in regard to the petition for removal of the county seat from this city to Thief River Falls, and after spending a day listening to arguments and taking evidence, passed a resolution declaring that the notices of intention to circulate the petition for removal were not properly posted; that the petition was circulated by some fifty or sixty parties while only eight signed the notice, and as a result of these irregularities refused to further consider the matter, and denied the motion for a special election. Wm. Erb, a resident of Deer Park township immediately served a notice on them from Judge Watts, commanding them to meet on the 20th inst., to reconsider and take decisive action on the petition as a whole, or show cause why they should not do so. This means, undoubtedly, that the move was made to test the legality of the commissioners' action and it is likely that the matter will be fought through the courts for several years before it is settled.

Thief River Falls as the aggressor in the county seat fight has so far accomplished nothing but the piling up of a lot of expense on the taxpayers, and from indications their actions in attempting to hog everything will mean the expenditure of a great deal more before they are done. Red Lake county people were satisfied that the county seat should remain here indefinately, but Thief River Falls neither respected their wishes or desires and forced the people at large to put up the costs while they took the glory. It is to be hoped that the action of the supreme court of Minnesota will result in killing their petition, as they could never get the people to sign another one after the way they have conducted their fight so far.

Rural School Consolidation

By Chas. Moller, Terrebonne.

The greatness and prosperity of a nation depends upon the intelligence of its citizens. This is especially true in a republic. In seeking an educational institution the people demand the very best to be had.

Should we find any weakness in our present system we should not hesitate to throw it out. The welfare of the people of the nation demand that school officers should remove and abolish those defects which time, experience and circumstances have shown to exist. They should not be contented to continue along the same lines or pursue the same methods as their forefathers, until they feel confident that the present methods and the present system fill the requirements. That a certain system has been continued for a long time is no evidence that it is the only, or even the best system.

In looking over the history of the last twenty years, we find that an extraordinary progress has been made along almost every line of human action. In the organization of our common school system used in this state and county we can see but very little difference from those systems which were organized in 1870 in the New England States.

Has our common school system arrived at such a state of perfection that it cannot be improved? If not then we have neglected to keep it up to the standard of other lines of progress.

The town unit school system was the ancient system of New England. The classic school law of Massachusetts, enacted in 1748 ordered that the towns should form schools on their reaching a certain number of house holders. Connecticut and other New England provinces followed the example of Massachusetts. The original New England town was a small concentration of people and was well adapted to this system. As the settlement spread from the original center it became convenient for families at a distance to establish new and smaller schools. At first these existed merely by private suffrage. In 1879, however, they were legalized by law. In speaking of this law, Horace Mann says: "I consider the law of 1879, authorizing towns to divide themselves into districts the most unfortunate law on the subject of common school laws ever enacted in this state."

This faulty district system has spread into a great majority of the states today. But we find the New England states that were first to adopt it are likewise leading in abolishing it. In Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts and New Jersey we find it no more. In Connecticut, Rhode Island, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Indiana, Michigan, Iowa, Wisconsin, Minnesota, South Dakota, Florida, Washington, California and a great many other states, we find some form of consolidated schools, side by side with the old system. From all these states the reports are decidedly in favor of the consolidated system. Considering how much better the consolidated system is than the district system it is not a little strange that its progress has been so slow.

In our present system, the district system, we find many defects. We should ever be on the watch for these and try to remove them. The fact that our present system was good enough a generation ago does not prove that will fill the requirements of the future. New conditions have arisen. Competition has become more keen. In order that the children of the present time may have the same opportunities as their parents, it is absolutely necessary that they should receive a proportionate degree of better school facilities than those of their parents.

In this county we attempt at present to maintain 77 distinct and seperate schools. Does it not seem plain to you that the result must necessarily be a great many weak and expensive schools? Are you satisfied in scattering your efforts along educational lines? Would it not be better to so arrange our school system, that the greatest amount of good can come to the greatest number of people for the amount of money invested?

It is well to look into the question with care before rendering an opinion. It is well also to be conservative, and not be in too great haste, in adopting new ideas. But we must not make the mistake of the Chinese and allow this conservatism to prevent all progress because of being satisfied with present conditions.

In investigating this question all personal feelings should be laid aside. It should be considered from all points of view without prejudice. Especially when it is recommended by thousands of learned fellow citizens from other states.

One evidence that our rural school system is faulty is the fact that the average country pupil does not remain in the country school after reaching the seventh or eighth grade. It has been and still is the custom for pupils in the country who are ready to enter those grades, to leave the rural school to attend a graded school in some town. In some cases where they have relatives residing in town they leave earlier in the grades to reside with these town relatives to attend the graded school. Again we find parents selling or renting their farms, and moving into town for the sole purpose of letting their children attend the graded school. All children are not blest with these town relatives, and these opportunities for attending the graded school in town. Neither are all parents in such position as to be able to hire board for their children in town. The result is that the average country pupil leaves school at an age when he is best fitted to take up school work to prepare him for the struggle of life. A graded school in the country to which he could have access would enable him to continue without leaving home. Now the question is: How can this be accomplished?

Consolidation of rural schools answers this question. By this system graded schools can be organized in the country and country children can have the privelege of attending without leaving home and going to some town. And it is not in all cases that this change has the best results for the country children. Not every boy and girl who comes fresh from the country with good health and pure morals is able to retain these blessings under the changed conditions in town. They have not been prepared for it: they have grown up under different surroundings and the new life may not be the best for them. The country is the ideal place for the graded school, with its simplicity of manners and dress, the ruggedness of its life, the peace, quiet and contentment of its homes, its formation of good habits, its absence of vice, its opportunities for physical development and its making of men and women of clear consciences. All these are items which argue for rural life and the rural school.

There is a tendency, or rather there has been, on the part of some of our rural population to think think their work less dignified than work in town. The average farmer did not sufficiently "magnify his office." So when able to educate one of his sons he would send him to college to study for the law, medicine, divinity or to to fit him for some department of an imagined higher life in town. To the old style farmer science had not yet made the revelations which have transformed agriculture and shown it to afford gratifications of the highest order to intellect and ambition.

But the transforming influence of the new agriculture is being felt today in every state. It has endowed farming with such facinations that not only do the farmer's sons, when fairly brought in contact with its wonderful agencies, show an increasing tendency to remain on the farm, but multitudes of city youth are attracted to field and garden and forest. The graduate of the modern agricultural school finds himself the peer and more in intellectual equipment of the graduate from the ordinary college.

Formerly the tendency was to educate the boy from the farm. Now the tendency is to reverse this state of affairs. Since a great many boys derive all their education in a country school the subject of agriculture should receive due attention. Unfortunately it is almost entirely neglected in the average country. There are a great many reasons for this among which are the limited enrollment, lack of time, shortness of school terms, etc. If graded schools were established in the country this subject could easily be given the time and attention it ought to have. Then the country boy would be learning something that would insure him a greater chance for attaining a competence than the average city youth.

The question of school consolidation stated simply, is whether or not it would be better to unite small, single room, isolated country schools into graded or semi graded schools and to carry the children to and from the latter at public expense. It is conceded by state and county superintendents and other administrative officers everywhere that the most rational solution of the rural school problem lies in thus combining these small isolated schools into larger ones and transporting the children.

Regarding the wisdom of the plan, experience has shown the following points in favor of consolidation, as set forth by State Superintendent Olsen: 1st. It allows more time for recitations.

The chief difficulty in a country school where a considerable number of pupils is enrolled, or more strictly speaking, where all the grades—from the primary to the eight—are represented, lies in the lack of time for recitations. Allowing but four recitations for each grade this would amount to from twenty-eight to thirty-two recitations in a single day! Contrast this if you please with the number of recitations required of a teacher in a graded school.

2nd It makes larger classes, permitting desirable classification and grading of pupils.

By a regular system of graduation from one class and from one room to another, schoolwork is given a more distinctive aim and more tangible rewards are offered pupils.

3rd. It enables school boards to employ teachers especially adapted to certain kinds of work.

This is an age of specializing. Some teachers are best adapted for primary work while others possess qualities which fit them for upper grade work. Some may have especial ability in mathematics, others may have an aptness for reading and its allied branches. Very seldom do all combine in the same person. In a school where only one teacher is employed it is obvious that some grades or some branches of study will be slighted. In a graded school employing more than one teacher it could be so arranged that each teacher would get the work for which she is best fitted. Music could then be taught in country schools.

4th. It opens the doors to longer terms of school as well as to schools of higher grade; to better appointed school houses, heated, lighted and ventilated on more sanitary plans, affording conditions that insure health of pupils; to better equipment of apparatus and books. All these naturally follow, the concentration of people, wealth, interest and effort.

5th. It economizes in the purchase of text books, libraries and needed apparatus. It follows that one school of several rooms can be better provided with these working tools for a stipulated sum of money than half a dozen separate schoolhouses.

One good well appointed four room building will meet the needs of at least six school districts. It is plain that it will be cheaper to maintain the four room building than six separate buildings. Only four teachers need be employed instead of six.

6th. It makes efficient supervision possible. A principal can be employed to organize and direct the work along definite lines, and the county superintendent can devote more time to each school. A competent superintendent is valuable according to the extent of his acquaintance with the teachers and school officers.

The county superintendent has not time nor opportunity to impress his ideas fully upon a hundred teachers and three or four hundred school officers.

7th. It increases attendance, prevents tardiness, quarreling and improper conduct on the way to and from school.

When a pupil is doing irregular fragmentary work in a class by himself it is so easy for him to remain absent for the slightest excuse. There is no competition. When he comes back he can take up the work where he left off. It does not mean much to him. In a larger class which progresses each day he can be made able to feel a distinct loss for a day's absence. With a responsible driver tradiness is entirely unknown. There is no swearing, fighting or vulgar languagt nor imporper conduct along the road. All of which is conducive to better morals.

8th. It is better for the health of the children, they being less exposed to wet feet and clothing and the ills resulting therefrom.

9th. It incidently promotes the "good roads" movement and makes easy the daily distribution of mail thruout the district.

10th. Petty local jealousies are lost in the larger schools, neighborhood difficulties are less liable to occur, and the burdens of taxation will be more evenly distributed.

11th. It adds the stimulating influence of large classes with the resulting enthusiasm arising from keener competition and more active rivalry with classmates

Prof. Hinsdale in regard to this says, "Once more the interest and enthusiasm of pupils and teachers depend directly upon the number and ability of the pupils present. For the majority of children individual instruction or anything closely approaching it is not to be commended. Children need the inspiration of numbers. You can, as a rule no more make a good school out of a dozen children than you can make a strong galvanic battery with one or two pairs of plates."

12th. To many it affords association with others whose lives are less restricted than their own,—a distinct gain in school grace and personal culture. The narrow environment of many country school pupils may be appreciated by reflecting that in Minnesota there are 136 schools enrolling fewer than ten pupils, and 1,117 schools enrolling fewer than twenty pupils.

State Superintendent Jones of Indiana says:

"The great evil of the small rural school lies in its nonsocial character. It is wholly unable to furnish each of its pupils that educative influence that comes from association with many of the same age and same degree of advancement; it cannot have in many classes enough of honest and helpful competition to establish standard to which many a bright pupil would raise himself, and fail therefore to bring from him that supreme effort which develops and ennobles, and which comes only from vigorous contest with his fellows. The humdrum and monotony of a recitation in a one pupil class is discouraging to both pupil and teacher. Not only is the mental work in school thus impaired but the lack of enough pupils to organize a game on the school yard prevents necessary exercise and tend to make morbid, selfish and pessimistic all who live in its atmosphere,—the deadly quiet and inactivity of the small school kills the spirit."

The small country school offers no educational feature for the boy; it holds for him no advancing interest to counteract the allurments outside of school life. The consolidated school, with its better equipment and larger attendance, will hold the pupils because it gives them an opportunity to see what there is for them to do. As has elsewhere been mentioned in this article instruction could be given in agriculture, thus planting in the boy a love for his home and the farm. Under this system the farm becomes the ideal place to bring up children, enabling them to obtain the advantages enjoyed in our centers of population and yet to spend their evenings and holidays in the country "under the constant tender care of father and mother, in contact with nature and plenty of work, instead of idly loafing about town."

It is to be regretted that one of the chief drawbacks to this movement is the fear that it will cost more than the old system.

Whether the expense will be greater or less depends wholly upon local conditions. Where the schools are small so that the teaching force may be materially reduced the expense will lessen. Where the schools are now drawing special state aid and are so large that the number of teachers cannot be reduced, the expense will remain much the same plus the expense of transportation. Experience however has shown that the daily cost of the pupils' schooling has been decreased, where this system has been employed, even though there has been a slight increase in the school tax.

But we should not allow the standard of dollars and cents to govern us too exclusively in a question of such vital importance as the education of our children, and our public schools. The question should not be, How cheap? but, How efficient?—not How may the saving of a few dollars be effected? but, How may boyhood and girlhood be expanded into manhood and womanhood of the very highest type, well equipped mentally, morally and physically to appreciate and perform honestly, faithfully and intelligently, every duty of life to enjoy those highest recreations most helpful to enter and possess the rich heritage to which the twentieth century falls heir; to construct ideal homes, ideal society, an ideal nation?

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound of imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

The president also authorized the statement that no other change in the personnel of the cabinet was likely to take place in the near future. KING ALFONSO IN ENGLAND.

Spectacular Effects of Reception Are Spoiled by the Weather.

London, June 6.—Alfonso XIII., the young king of Spain, was welcomed to England during the day with the most elaborate of ceremonies, every detail of which was supervised by King Edward himself. Never in the case of reception of a national visitor has greater attention been paid to detail or more careful preparation made for a magnificent display. If only the weather had been propitious the reception probably would have been the most brilliant ever accorded a foreign visitor to England. A deluge of rain at Portsmouth and at London, however, marred all the spectacular effects.

Red Lake Falls Gazette

L. A. DAUTREMONT, PROPRIETOR
SAM S. HAISLET, EDITOR AND MANAGER

Published weekly. Thursday evening. Entered as second-class matter in the post office at Red Lake Falls.

Official Paper of Red Lake County.

Official Paper of Red Lake Falls.

Subscription, $1.00 per Year

That removal petition is a good deal like Rojestvenski's Russian fleet just now.

Thief River's newspapers will now proceed to dwell upon how Red Lake Falls is wicked and vile, and that all kinds of crookedness is used every day in the year. They will forget, however, that they live in a a decidedly glasy glass house themselves, and if the people will look carefully into the matter they can easily satisfy their minds that the aggressors in the fight have the axe to grind.

The 'steemed Thief River Press is respectfully referred to the opinion of Attorney General Young given elsewhere in this paper. Mr. Young says that Thief River Falls or or any other city to please the Press) cannot donate or rent a public building to a county for court house or any other purpose. The Red Lake Falls papers may be "amusing" Bro. Press, but they sometimes come near guessing the truth.

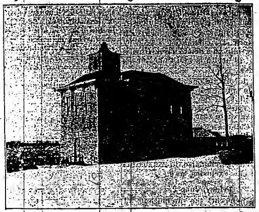
The Elk River Star News, commenting on Frank Eddy's chances for the state senatorship, a re election to congress or for the governorship, remarks that "since Frank has got into the editorial harness there is no limit to the heights his ambition may carry him." The editorial harness has proved a "get-there-quick" paraphernalia among the politically ambitions, but the fraternity was not only turned down on all the legislation it asked for and plucked of ten thousand dollars on the publication of the laws, but it is now in a fair way to be turned down on the annual excursion. Individually some of the editors have done pretty well in politics, but, collectively, they remind one of the farmers' movement says the Midway News.

LANDMARK LOWERED BY LIGHTNING'S WORK

Washington School Building In This City Barned To The Ground Early Monday Morning—Lightning Strikes The Belfry And Building Is Soon a Mass of Flames.

The clanging of the fire bell at two o'clock Monday morning aroused the people to the fact the fire fiend had visited us, and while a terrific rain and wind storm was raging at the time the streets were soon filled with excited townspeople, anxious to discover how near to their own homes and loved ones the dreaded fire was. By the time the people got out, however, all fears were put to rest, as it was discovered that the old Washington school building was burning, the belfry and whole top story being on fire as a result of a stroke of lightning.

The fire department immediately got out with the apparatus and made a chase across the river through the driving rain, not with any hopes of saving the doomed structure but to be on hand in case the fire should spread. The wind was blowing a perfect gale, but the rain put out the flying cinders as fast as they lit, and no danger of the fire spreading entered the minds of the people. The department got into working order and saved the large pile of wood and several outbuildings and within a couple of hours form the time the alarm was turned in the building was a mass of smoldering ruins.



The Washington school building was a landmark in Red Lake Falls. Standing on one of the prettiest of our picturesque hills it has been visible for many miles setting forth the fact that Red Lake Falls looked carefully after the education of our young generation, and making a familiar scene to the residents. The building was built in 1885—twenty years ago—and has done service as a school house constantly since that time. During the past few years only the grade work overflowing from the Lafayette school has been taught there, and while it has been crowded the old school has stood the test of time valiantly. All of the books and apparatus was destroyed, to the amount of $1205.92, with insurance on the contents at $1000. The building was insured for $4750, and while the loss to the district will be considerable a newer and more modern structure will rise from the ashes to take its part in the future development of this section.

The school board met Tuesday evening and while nothing definate was decided upon it was the general opinion that plans and specifications should be immediately called for on both frame and brick structures, and if the cost is not too great it is probable that a pretty brick school house will replace the old one. It is the intention of the board to have the work commence immediately so that the new building can be furnished in time for the commencement of work in the fall.

CELEBRATE ROYALLY

New Town of Brooks to Observe St. John's Day.

Red Lake county's hustling new town of Brooks is arranging to celebrate St. John's Day—June 24—in royal style, and large posters were printed at The Gazette office this week giving the particulars.

They have arranged for a good program of sports, etc., among which will be a ball game between Plummer and Brooks, horse races, etc. A grand bowery dance will be held all day, and the crowds entertained in a first class manner.

Red Lake Falls will likely send a large delegation to help Brooks do things up right.

A HOT MEETING.

Settlers in New Town of Clover Leaf Discuss the Buying of Road Grader.

Thief River News: The newly elected officers of the town of Clover Leaf met at the residence of Joseph Duchamp last Saturday evening and qualified. The first business to be discussed was the purchase of a grader and was the cause of dividing the newly organized township into two factions.

Joseph Duchamp, who for years ruled Numedal with an iron hand, espoused the cause of purchasing the grader in long and convincing arguments. His eloquence, however, did not have the desired effect upon some of the sturdy settlers of the town, and after Joe had poured forth all the arguments that he could think of between 7 o'clock Saturday evening and 5 o'clock Sunday morning he grew impatient. He ejected two of his most obdurate listeners from his audience by force and the remaining part of his audience went home in a peaceful manner. The grader has not yet been bought and a special election may be held.

A Slight Error.

The Gazette made a slight error in the write up of Joseph Laurent's farm figures a couple of weeks ago. We reported that he sold 363 bushels of barley at $370.75, when it should have read flax. Mr. Laurent was in town yesterday and said that some people had questioned the truth of the report as to the amount of money he had realized, but that he was ready to back his figures for money or chalk. Mr. Laurent has shown conclusively that Red Lake county farming pays, and his success has been widely commented upon. He has the required ability and determination to win, and that he has been able to make as good a showing as he has should be a matter of pride to every resident of the county.

Matrimonial Market Moving.

June, the month of roses and weddings, has started out to keep up the record and Clerk Perrault has issued a half dozen licenses to wed to Red Lake county young couples this week. The month is young yet, and from the good beginning it is evident that a great many young people of the county will take advantage of the popular June and become united for better or for worse. The following licenses have been issued since last Saturday: Engebret K. Olson, of Chippewa county, to Miss Emma Firsand, of Red Lake Falls township; Gust Mostrom, to Ida Hanson, both of River Falls; Algot M. Edstrom to Rosetta Gigstad, both of St. Hilaire; Ole Jaranson to Edna Estella Jebbe, both of Thief River Falls; Carlsten Simonson to Lucy Roe, both of St. Hilaire.

Brilliant Entertainment.

The music class instructed by Sister Cecilia of St. Joseph's school, gave a recital at the opera house Tuesday evening. The program as published in last week's Gazette was rendered in a highly pleasing manner and the large audience was captivated by the excellence of the training shown in the performance of the young people. The hall was crowded to the doors.

Three points were given to first place, two to second and one to third, and the result at the finish was 47 points for Red Lake Falls and 13 for Fertile. The contests were all clean and hotly contested, but the Red Lake Falls boys easily proved their superiority in all but the weight events. Fertile's participants were smaller and younger than our boys, but did good work just the same. The sport was highly enjoyed by the crowd.

An Enjoyable Banquet.

The Junior class of the high school entertained the members of the classes of '04 and '05 at a banquet in the assembly room of the high school building last evening, and as usual at these affairs everyone enjoyed themselves to the fullest measure. The local orchestra was present and furnished excellent music to add cheer to the event. The usual program of feasting, toasting and merrymaking was carried out, Prof. Chamberlain acting as toastmaster, and round the table loaded with things to tempt the palate several pleasant hours were spent. The Sophmore class officiated as waiters at the table, and did the work like experienced hands. The Junior banquet was one of the most enjoyable of the many pleasant class week events, and will long be remembered by those participating.

Ayer's

Why is it that Ayer's Hair Vigor does so many remarkable things? Because it is a hair food. It feeds the hair, puts new life into it. The hair cannot keep from growing. And gradually all the dark, rich color of early life comes back to gray hair.

"When I first used Ayer's Hair Vigor my hair was about all gray. But now it is a nice, rich black, and as thick as I could wish." — MRS. SUSAN KLOPFENSTIEN, Tuscumbia, Ala.

CALUMET Baking Powder

Food prepared with Calumet Baking Powder is pure and healthful, and is free from Rochelle salts, alum, lime and ammonia. A wonderful powder of unequalled strength.

Trust Baking Powders sell for 45 or 50 cents per pound and may be identified by this exorbitant price. They are a menace to public health, as food prepared from them contains large quantities of Rochelle salts, a dangerous cathartic drug.

Crookston Times: William Eickoff, the St Hilaire ditch contractor, in the city today on business, says the ditch business this summer is greatly handicapped by the rains of the past few weeks. The big Nielsville ditch, upon which Mr. Eickoff now has his men at work, is filled up with water so that work is impossible and before the rain this morning work was about to be resumed after a lengthy delay. The rain today makes a still greater delay unavoidable.

A good story has just leaked out on Commissioner Dan Shaw of Thief River Falls. The incident occured at the January meeting of the board in this city, and was a demonstration of Dan's ability to stand up for the rights of the people. At this meeting Auditor Ford presented a bill for "ribbons for typewriter," and Dan at once raised an objection. He talked forcibly against allowing the bill, and ended by saying that while he didn't know the typewriter, and she was undoubtedly a fine girl that the county was under no obligations to buy her clothes. Dan's co-members of the board promised secrecy but the story has finally come out and is too good to keep.

The Gazette is informed that a bevy of beautiful Red Lake Falls maidens took an impromptu ride on the N. P flyer the other evening, but that they swore all witnesses to secrecy and thought they were safe from discovery. It seems that they boarded the train to bid a friend farewell and when the train started they paid no attention to it, thinking that the usual stop would be made at the platform. Instead of stopping, however, the conductor signalled for the engineer to get out of town, and then laughed at the discomfiture of the maidens. They were carried to the Great Northern crossing a mile south of town, and when they arrived home at seven o'clock after their mile walk a more hungry and forlorn set of girls has never been seen. While the girls will undoubtedly wonder how The Gazette knows so much, we can vouch for the truth of the story, as our wireless telegraph correspondent is on the alert for "scoops" in the news line.

Rural School Consolidation

By Chas. Moller, Terrebonne.

The greatness and prosperity of a nation depends upon the intelligence of its citizens. This is especially true in a republic. In seeking an educational institution the people demand the very best to be had.

Should we find any weakness in our present system we should not hesitate to throw it out. The welfare of the people of the nation demand that school officers should remove and abolish those defects which time, experience and circumstances have shown to exist. They should not be contented to continue along the same lines or pursue the same methods as their forefathers, until they feel confident that the present methods and the present system fill the requirements. That a certain system has been continued for a long time is no evidence that it is the only, or even the best system.

In looking over the history of the last twenty years, we find that an extraordinary progress has been made along almost every line of human action. In the organization of our common school system used in this state and county we can see but very little difference from those systems which were organized in 1879 in the New England States.

Has our common school system arrived at such a state of perfection that it cannot be improved? If not then we have neglected to keep it up to the standard of other lines of progress.

The town unit school system was the ancient system of New England. The classic school law of Massachusetts, enacted in 1718 ordered that the towns should form schools on their reaching a certain number of house holders. Connecticut and other New England provinces followed the example of Massachusetts. The original New England town was a small concentration of people and was well adapted to this system. As the settlement spread from the original center it became convenient for families at a distance to establish new and smaller schools. At first these existed merely by private suffrage. In 1879, however, they were legalized by law. In speaking of this law, Horace Mann says: "I consider the law of 1879, authorizing towns to divide themselves into districts the most unfortunate law on the subject of common school laws ever enacted in this state."

This faulty district system has spread into a great majority of the the states today. But we find the New England states that were first to adopt it are likewise leading in abolishing it. In Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts and New Jersey we find it no more. In Connecticut, Rhode Island, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Indiana, Michigan, Iowa, Wisconsin, Minnesota, South Dakota, Florida, Washington, California and a great many other states, we find some form of consolidated schools, side by side with the old system. From all these states the reports are decidedly in favor of the consolidated system. Considering how much better the consolidated system is than the district system it is not a little strange that its progress has been so slow.

In our present system, the district system, we find many defects. We should ever be on the watch for these and try to remove them. The fact that our present system was good enough a generation ago does not prove that will fill the requirements of the future. New conditions have arisen. Competition has become more keen. In order that the children of the present time may have the same opportunities as their parents, it is absolutely necessary that they should receive a proportionate degree of better school facilities than those of their parents.

In this county we attempt at present to maintain 77 distinct and seperate schools. Does it not seem plain to you that the result must necessarily be a great many weak and expensive schools? Are you satisfied in scattering your efforts along educational lines? Would it not be better to so arrange our school system, that the greatest amount of good can come to the greatest number of people for the amount of money invested?

It is well to look into the question with care before rendering an opinion. It is well also to be conservative, and not be in too great haste, in adopting new ideas. But we must not make the mistake of the Chinese and allow this conservatism to prevent all progress because of being satisfied with present conditions.

In investigating this question all personal feelings should be laid aside. It should be considered from all points of view without prejudice. Especially when it is recommended by thousands of learned fellow citizens from other states.

One evidence that our rural school system is faulty is the fact that the average country pupil does not remain in the country school after reaching the seventh or eighth grade. It has been and still is the custom for pupils in the country who are ready to enter those grades, to leave the rural school to attend a graded school in some town. In some cases where they have relatives residing in town they leave earlier in the grades to reside with these town relatives to attend the graded school. Again we find parents selling or renting their farms, and moving into town for the sole purpose of letting their children attend the graded school. All children are not blest with these town relatives, and these opportunities for attending the graded school in town. Neither are all parents in such position as to be able to hire board for their children in town. The result is that the average country pupil leaves school at an age when he is best fitted to take up school work to prepare him for the struggle of life. A graded school in the country to which he could have access would enable him to continue without leaving home. Now the question is: How can this be accomplished?

Consolidation of rural schools answers this question. By this system graded schools can be organized in the country and country children can have the privelege of attending without leaving home and going to some town. And it is not in all cases that this change has the best results for the country children. Not every boy and girl who comes fresh from the country with good health and pure morals is able to retain these blessings under the changed conditions in town. They have not been prepared for it: they have grown up under different surroundings and the new life may not be the best for them. The country is the ideal place for the graded school, with its simplicity of manners and dress, the ruggedness of its life, the peace, quiet and contentment of its homes. Its formation of good habits, its absence of vice, its opportunities for physical development and its making of men and women of clear consciences. All these are items which argue for rural life and the rural school.

There is a tendency, or rather there has been, on the part of some of our rural population to think think their work less dignified than work in town. The average farmer did not sufficiently "magnify his office." So when able to educate one of his sons he would send him to college to study for the law, medicine, divinity or to to fit him for some department of an imagined higher life in town. To the old style farmer science had not yet made the revelations which have transformed agriculture and shown it to afford gratifications of the highest order to intellect and ambition.

But the transforming influence of the new agriculture is being felt today in every state. It has endowed farming with such facinations that not only do the farmer's sons, when fairly brought in contact with its wonderful agencies, show an increasing tendency to remain on the farm, but multitudes of city youth are attracted to field and garden and forest. The graduate of the modern agricultural school finds himself the peer and more in intellectual equipment of the graduate from the ordinary college.

Formerly the tendency was to educate the boy from the farm. Now the tendency is to reverse this state of affairs. Since a great many boys derive all their education in a country school the subject of agriculture should receive due attention. Unfortunately it is almost entirely neglected in the average country. There are a great many reasons for this among which are the limited enrollment, lack of time, shortness of school terms, etc. If graded schools were established in the country this subject could easily be given the time and attention it ought to have. Then the country boy would be learning something that would insure him a greater chance for attaining a competence than the average city youth.

The question of school consolidation stated simply, is whether or not it would be better to unite small, single room, isolated country schools into graded or semi graded schools and to carry the children to and from the latter at public expense. It is conceded by state and county superintendents and other administrative officers everywhere that the most ratio al solution of the rural school problem lies in thus combining these small isolated schools into larger ones and transporting the children.

Regarding the wisdom of the plan, experience has shown the following points in favor of consolidation, as set forth by State Superintendent Olsen: 1st. It allows more time for recitations.

The chief difficulty in a country school where a considerable number of pupils is enrolled, or more strictly speaking, where all the grades—from the primary to the eight—are represented, lies in the lack of time for recitations. Allowing but four recitations for each grade this would amount to from twenty-eight to thirty-two recitations in a single day! Contrast this if you please with the number of recitations required of a teacher in a graded school.

2nd. It makes larger classes, permitting desirable classification and grading of pupils.

By a regular system of graduation from one class and from one room to another, schoolwork is given a more distinctive aim and more tangible rewards are offered pupils.

3rd. It enables school boards to employ teachers especially adapted to certain kinds of work.

This is an age of specializing. Some teachers are best adapted for primary work while others possess qualities which fit them for upper grade work. Some may have especial ability in mathematics, others may have an aptness for reading and its allied branches. Very seldom do all combine in the same person. In a school where only one teacher is employed it is obvious that some grades or some branches of study will be slighted. In a graded school employing more than one teacher it could be so arranged that each teacher would get the work for which she is best fitted. Music could then be taught in country schools.

4th. It opens the doors to longer terms of school as well as to schools of higher grade; to better appointed school houses, heated, lighted and ventilated on more sanitary plans, affording conditions that insure health of pupils; to better equipment of apparatus and books. All these naturally follow, the concentration of people, wealth, interest and effort.

5th. It economizes in the purchase of text books libraries and needed apparatus. It follows that one school of several rooms can be better provided with these working tools for a stipulated sum of money than half a dozen separate schoolhouses.

One good well appointed four room building will meet the needs of at least six school districts. It is plain that it will be cheaper to maintain the four room building than six separate buildings. Only four teachers need be employed instead of six.

6th. It makes efficient supervision possible. A principal can be employed to organize and direct the work along definite lines, and the county superintendent can devote more time to each school. A competent superintendent is valuable according to the extent of his acquaintance with the teachers and school officers.

The county superintendent has not time nor opportunity to impress his ideas fully upon a hundred teachers and three or four hundred school officers.

7th. It increases attendance, prevents tardiness, quarreling and improper conduct on the way to and from school.

When a pupil is doing irregular fragmentary work in a class by himself it is so easy for him to remain absent for the slightest excuse. There is no competition. When he comes back he can take up the work where he left off. It does not mean much to him. In a larger class which progresses each day he can be made able to feel a distinct loss for a day's absence. With a responsible driver tradiness is entirely unknown. There is no swearing, fighting or vulgar languagt nor imporper conduct along the road. All of which is conducive to better morals.

8th. It is better for the health of the children, they being less exposed to wet feet and clothing and the ills resulting therefrom.

9th. It incidently promotes the "good roads" movement and makes easy the daily distribution of mail thruout the district.

10th. Petty local jealousies are lost in the larger schools, neighborhood difficulties are less liable to occur, and the burdens of taxation will be more evenly distributed.

11th. It adds the stimulating influence of large classes with the resulting enthusiasm arising from keener competition and more active rivalry with classmates

Prof. Hinsdale in regard to this says, "Once more the interest and enthusiasm of pupils and teachers depend directly upon the number and ability of the pupils present. For the majority of children individual instruction or anything closely approaching it is not to be commended. Children need the inspiration of numbers. You can, as a rule no more make a good school out of a dozen children than you can make a strong galvanic battery with one or two pairs of plates."

12th. To many it affords association with others whose lives are less restricted than their own,—a distinct gain in school grace, and personal culture. The narrow environment of many country school pupils may be appreciated by reflecting that in Minnesota there are 136 schools enrolling fewer than ten pupils, and 1,117 schools enrolling fewer than twenty pupils.

State Superintendent Jones of Indiana says:

"The great evil of the small rural school lies in its nonsocial character. It is wholly unable to furnish each of its pupils that educative influence that comes from association with many of the same age and same degree of advancement; it cannot have in many classes enough of honest and helpful competition to establish standard to which many a bright pupil would raise himself, and fails therefore to bring from him that supreme effort which develops and ennobles, and which comes only from vigorous contest with his fellows. The humdrum and monotony of a recitation in a one pupil class is discouraging to both pupil and teacher. Not only is the mental work in school thus impaired but the lack of enough pupils to organize a game on the school yard prevents necessary exercise and tend to make morbid, selfish and pessimistic all who live in its atmosphere,—the deadly quiet and inactivity of the small school kills the spirit."

The small country school offers no educational feature for the boy; it holds for him no advancing interest to counteract the allurments outside of school life. The consolidated school, with its better equipment and larger attendance, will hold the pupils because it gives them an opportunity to see what there is for them to do. As has elsewhere been mentioned in this article instruction could be given in agriculture, thus planting in the boy a love for his home and the farm. Under this system the farm becomes the ideal place to bring up children, enabling them to obtain the advantages enjoyed in our centers of population and yet to spend their evenings and holidays in the country "under the constant tender care of father and mother, in contact with nature and plenty of work, instead of idly loafing about town."

It is to be regretted that one of the chief drawbacks to this movement is the fear that it will cost more than the old system.

Whether the expense will be greater or less depends wholly upon local conditions. Where the schools are small so that the teaching force may be materially reduced the expense will lessen. Where the schools are now drawing special state aid and are so large that the number of teachers cannot be reduced, the expense will remain much the same plus the expense of transportation. Experience however has shown that the daily cost of the pupils' schooling has been decreased, where this system has been employed, even though there has been a slight increase in the school tax.

But we should not allow the standard of dollars and cents to govern us too exclusively in a question of such vital importance as the education of our children, and our public schools. The question should not be, How cheap? but, How efficient?—not How may the saving of a few dollars be effected? but, How may boyhood and girlhood be expanded into manhood and womanhood of the very highest type, well equipped mentally, morally and physically to appreciate and perform honestly, faithfully and intelligently, every duty of life to enjoy those highest recreations most helpful to enter and possess the rich heritage to which the twentieth century falls heir; to construct ideal homes, ideal society, an ideal nation?

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

SUCCEEDS PAUL MORTON.

Charles J. Bonaparte to Become Secretary of the Navy.

Washington, June 1.—President Roosevelt during the day authorized the announcement that Charles J. Bonaparte of Baltimore would be appointed secretary of the navy to succeed Paul Morton, who earlier in the day stated he would retire July 1 to take charge of the plans for the construction of the New York subway system for operation in connection with the surface lines. The president also authorized the statement that no other change in the personnel of the cabinet was likely to take place in the near future. Secretary Shaw already has indicated his intention of retiring from the cabinet, probably next February. Rumors of the retirement of Attorney General Moody have been published, but it is understood to be his intention now to continue in the cabinet for a year and a half, and perhaps longer.

KING ALFONSO IN ENGLAND.

Spectacular Effects of Reception Are Spoiled by the Weather.

London, June 5.—Alfonso XIII., the young king of Spain, was welcomed to England during the day with the most elaborate of ceremonies, every detail of which was supervised by King Edward himself. Never in the case of reception of a national visitor has greater attention been paid to detail or more careful preparation made for a magnificent display. If only the weather had been propitious the reception probably would have been the most brilliant ever accorded a foreign visitor to England. A deluge of rain at Portsmouth and at London, however, marred all the spectacular effects.

Judge William Watts this week handed down his decision in the case of Asa Paine vs. the town of Gervais, which was tried here last fall. The suit was for the purpose of collecting interest on bonds given the N. P. railroad in 1886, and at the time of the suit the town set up the claim that the bonds were invalid and refused to pay the interest. Judge Watts holds that such is not the case and that the bonds are valid and the interest payable. An appeal may perhaps be taken before the case is settled.

The statement of the condition of the First State Bank of Red Lake Falls is printed elsewhere in today's Gazette. This popular bank continues to make substantial gains in their volume of business, and their statement published today will compare favorably with any like institution in the northwest. We Offer $1,000

For a Disease Germ That Liquozone Can't Kill.

On every bottle of Liquozone we offer $1,000 for a disease germ that it cannot kill. We do this to assure you that Liquozone does kill germs.

And it is the only way known to kill germs in the body without killing the tissues, too. Any drug that kills germs is a poison, and it cannot be taken internally. Medicine is almost helpless in any germ disease. It is this fact which gives Liquozone its worth to humanity; a worth so great that, after testing the product for two years, through physicians and hospitals, we paid $100,000 for the American rights. And we have spent over one million dollars, in one year, to buy the first bottle and give it free to each sick one who would try it.

Acts Like Oxygen.

Liquozone is not made by compounding drugs, nor is there any alcohol in it. Its virtues are derived solely from gas—largely oxygen gas—by a process requiring immense apparatus and 14 days' time. This process has, for more than 20 years, been the constant subject of scientific and chemical research.

The result is a liquid that does what oxygen does. It is a nerve food and blood food—the most helpful thing in the world to you. Its effects are exhilarating, vitalizing, purifying. Yet it is an absolutely certain germicide. The reason is that germs are vegetables; and Liquozone—like an excess of oxygen—is deadly to vegetal matter.

Liquozone goes into the stomach, into the bowels and into the blood, to go wherever the blood goes. No germ can escape it and none can resist it. The results are inevitable, for a germ disease must end when the germs are killed. Then Liquozone, acting as a wonderful tonic, quickly restores a condition of perfect health. Diseases which have resisted medicine for years yield at once to Liquozone, and it cures diseases which medicine never cures. Half the people you meet—wherever you are—can tell you of cures that were made by it.

Germ Diseases.

These are the known germ diseases. All that medicine can do for these troubles is to help Nature overcome the germs, and such results are indirect and uncertain. Liquozone attacks the germs, wherever they are. And when the germs which cause a disease are destroyed, the disease must end, and forever. That is inevitable.

MADE NO SUCH RULING

Thief River Papers Try To Twist Up Ruling of Attorney General Young In Court House Matter.

The Thief River Press came out with a half-column on last week's front page telling that Attorney General Young had ruled that the city council of Thief River Falls could offer their city hall for court house purposes.

This yarn was sprung to off-set if possible the real ruling of the Attorney General in regard to the matter, which was printed in The Gazette last week and which was to the effect that the Thief River Falls city council CANNOT offer their city hall or any other public building either free or at a rent of $1 per year to the county. The ruling came in a letter signed by the assistant attorney general, and in response to a letter from Charles E. Boughton, of this city. The ruling was as simple as day, and the attempt of the Thief River papers to off-set it with a purported telegram from St. Paul will not by any means convince the voters that the Attorney General has not ruled against the up-river city.

The offer of the building was merely a bluff to begin with, as some taxpayer could easily put in an objection and knock the whole thing in the head, and then the public would have to put up the cash to erect a set of county buildings.

SUCCESSFUL PRODUCTION.

"Phyllis, the Farmer's Daughter" Pleases the Public.

Monday evening of this week the Red Lake Falls Choral Club presented "Phyllis," a delightful operatic cantata, for the benefit of the public, and while the audience was not large it was appreciative and showered the participants with generous applause.

The scene of the play was laid at the home of Farmer Meadows, impersonated by L. P. Berthon, and his part was one of the leading roles and was decidedly well carried out. The heroine, Miss Iza Tibbetts, as "Phyllis" handled her part splendidly, as did Miss Florence Dautremont as "Margaret," Prof. Onstad as "Douglass" and J. Drew Marshall as "Chapleigh." The chorus was very good, and the piece was arranged so that this feature of the club was given prominence and on every occasion acquitted themselves admirably.

The receipts were about $45, which pays the expenses and leaves a nice little balance in the club treasury.

WANTS NEXT MEETING

Committee Soliciting Financial Support In Order To Make a Bid For Next Year's Tournament.

A committee of firemen have interviewed the buisness people this week soliciting financial support in order to make a bid for the Northwestern Minnesota Firemen's Tournament association meeting next year, and while nothing is yet announced it is stated that they have already secured nearly sufficent money to warrant them in making a bid for the tournament.

The bringing of this meeting here would be a great thing for Red Lake Falls, as a crowd of several thousand people would be entertained for four days, and while it takes considerable money to support it, nevertheless it is one of the best possible advertisements for a town and the committee should have hearty support in their rounds.

There is no certainty that it can be secured for next year, as several of the leading valley towns are after it, but if the business men come to the front with liberal donations of cash the delegates can make a hard fight for the plum and will undoubtly land it.

Evangelists Not Coming.

Rev. H. W. Knox received a letter Monday informing him that the lady evangelists, Misses Anna Smith and Nellie Reed, had been obliged to give up coming here this week, having been called elsewhere. They had intended to be here to speak Thursday, Friday and Sunday, but were obliged to give up the meetings for some time to come.

STATE DRAINAGE BOARD

New Society Formed at Meeting In Bemidji This Week.—Next Convention to be Held At Crookston.

As a result of the state drainage board meeting last Saturday the state of Minnesota has a drainage league, the purposes and objects of which are to promote the drainage of the northern portion of the state, convey to the minds of southern Minnesota legislators the importance of the work and prepare for the passage of a big appropriation bill at the next session of the state legislature thereby.

Messrs. A. D. Stephens of Crookston, H. G. Hayes, of Bemidji, A. G. Barnard, of Cass Lake and Cole of Walker were named at the meeting of the drainage board and interested citizens of this portion of the state as members of an executive committee to have in hand the convention which is to be held in Crookston upon the first Tuesday in August. Invitations will be extended to the county commissioners of every county in the state to send five delegates and it is expected that fully five hundred people will attend the meeting at Crookston.

B. S. Bennett who attended the meeting at Bemidji has arrived home and reports the meeting at Bemidji as a very successful affair, largely attended and very enthusiastic. The speeches made by prominent people of northern Minnesota were filled with good suggestions as to the proper method of procedure to adopt to secure a greater amount of good to Northern Minnesota and its people as well as increase in value the state land holdings throughout this section of the state. The topographical survey ordered by the last legislature is merely a beginning upon an extensive system of state drainage which will undoubtedly result from the movement started Saturday and to be carried out in Crookston further in August.

The object of the league organized will be to urge upon southern representatives and senators in the state legislature the need of drainage in the northern portion of the state; to protest against certain regulations regarding dams maintained on the upper Mississippi river, which are said to have resulted in the overflowing of lands above the points where the dams are located and the drying up of lands situated below, and to attempt to secure legislation appropriating larger sums of money for drainage work than have heretofore been voted by the legislature.

About 300 representative men of northern Minnesota were present, including senators and representatives from every district and delegations from business men's clubs in various towns and cities were in attendance at the Bemidji meeting.

A June Wedding.

St. Hilaire Spectator: On last Wednesday afternoon at the residence of K. O. Gigstad occured one of the prettiest weddings that St. Hilaire has seen for a long time in the marriage of Rosetta Beatrice Gigstad to Algot M. Edstrom. The bride was charmingly attired in a cream colored crepe de chene gown and was attended by Huldah C. Gigstad and Agnes Edstrom as bridesmaids. The groom was attended by Mr. Fred Dahl and Mr. G. T. Hultgren, of Chicago.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. I. T. Aastad, and Miss Josephine Gigstad played the wedding march. About forty relatives and friends sat down to a six o'clock wedding supper at which time there were toasts and expressions of good will wishing health, happiness and prosperity to the happy couple. The bride is a young lady who has grown to womanhood in our village and has hosts of friends who admire her many virtues and kindly character. The groom has won many warm friends during his three years' residence here and we think all will unite with The Spectator in wishing the newly wedded pair an abundant prosperity.

Mr. and Mrs. Edstrom will take up their residence at Hazel and will be at home to their friends after June 15th.

PRETTY HOME WEDDING.

Zaiser-Eickhoff Nuptials Held At Crookston Yesterday.

Crookston Journal: The home of Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Eickhoff on Front street was the scene of a very pretty wedding Wednesday afternoon whereby their daughter, Dorothy Elizabeth was united in marriage to Arthur Frederick Zaiser of Red Lake Falls. The rooms were beautifully decorated with palms, ferns, similax and cut flowers. The color scheme of the front parlor being green and white and that of the back parlor pink and green. The bride and groom stood under an arch artistically made of similax and snow-balls, while the beautiful ring ceremony was performed by Rev. Ward of the First Presbyterian church of this city.

The immediate relatives of both families were present to witness the ceremony. The brides maid was Hannah Eickhoff and Helmuth Zaiser, the groomsman. As the strains of Mendelshonn Wedding march pealed forth played by Henrietta Zaiser, four little flower girls entered the room followed by the wedding party. Marguerite, Lola, Baby Risch and Cecil McCaffery acted as flower girls and each was carrying a profuse boquet of Brides roses.

Dora looked very charming in a white silk Egyptian Tissue trimmed with point lace, and carrying a large boquet of brides roses. Her traveling gown was a dark blue cecilian cloth with hat to match.

Following the ceremony an elaborate wedding dinner was served which was enjoyed by all present. Many useful and costly presents were received by the young couple showing the good wishes of their many friends.

The young people were escorted to the evening train by a large number of their friends upon their departure for points in the east. They will visit Chicago returning by way of the Twin Cities from where they will go to Portland Oregon.

Our good wishes go with her where ever she may go.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound of imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness(caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Furious Fighting.

"For seven years," writes Geo. W. Hoffman, of Harpor, Wash., "I had a bitter battle, with chronic stomach and liver trouble, but at last I won, and cured my diseases, by the use of Electric Bitters. I unhesitatingly recommend them to all, and don't intend in the future to be without them in the house. They are certainly a wonderful medicine to have cured such a bad case as mine." Women's Column.

Brighten up the little things about the house with a few touches of paint, stain or enamel. It's surprising how this cheers up a home.

In Iceland men and women are in every respect political equals. The nation, which numbers over 70,000 people, is governed by representatives elected by both men and women.

A Dentist recently ordered a Philadelphia society woman to stop smoking because she was ruining her teeth by the excessive use of cigarettes. Couldn't hurt her brain because she didn't have any.

If you are annoyed by and endless succession of pimples take out of your daily bill of fare pork and veal, all fried foods and rich pastry, hot breads and sweets and make a point of eating salads and greens.

According to the government statistician of New South Wales, when a woman marries at the age of 20 she may expect to have five children, at the age of 28 three children, at the age of 32 two children, and at the age of 37 one child.

The gospel of happiness is one that every woman should lay to heart What it means to a man to come home at night to a cheerful wife no one but he who has had to fight the hard battle of life knows. If he is prosperous is an added joy; but it is in misfortune that it shines like a star in the darkness A complaining wife can kill the last bit of hope and courage in a sorely troubled heart, while a cheerful one gives new courage to begin the fight over again.

Millionaire's Poor Stomach.

The worn-out stomach of the over-fed millionaire is often paraded in the public prints as a horrible example of the evils attendant on the possession of great wealth. But millionaires are not the only ones who are afflicted with bad stomachs. The proportion is far greater among the toilers. Dyspepsia and indigestion are rampant among these people, and they suffer far worse tortures than the millionaire unless they avail themselves of a standard medicine like Green's August Flower, which has been a favorite household remedy for all stomach troubles for over thirty-five years. August Flower rouses the torpid liver, thus creating appetite and insuring perfect digestion. It tones and vitalizes the entire system and makes life worth living, no matter what your station. Torture of a Preacher.

The story of the torture of Rev. O D. Moore, pastor of the Baptist church, of Harpersville, N. Y., will interest you, He says, "I suffered agonies, because of a persistent cough, resulting from the grip. I had to sleep sitting up in bed. I tried many remedies, without relief, until I took Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds which entirely cured my cough, and saved me from consumption." Worth Reading.

In all the Baking Powder "Wars" that have been intermittently waged in the last twenty years, there is one point that has been over-looked by the belligerent makers of these goods. Rival manufacturers have contented themselves with accusing their competitors of making an unwholesome product. The question of keeping quality, and, therefore, efficiency in raising bread, the only purpose for which baking powder is used, appears to have been generally ignored. There are many powders which, when fresh, and the can is first uncovered, will do fairly good work, but after standing for some time on the pantry shelf, the powder becomes so weak as to be almost worthless as far as raising bread is concerned. This is especially true in the case of the so called "Phosphate" powders, which, were it not for this fatal defect, would be satisfactory baking powders. The unsuccessful attempts to overcome this fault of the "Phosphate" powders has enlisted the services of more chemists and cost more money than the solution of any other problem connected with the raising of bread. The makers of these "Phosphate" powders raise a great cry about the wonderful healthfulness of their product, but what matters all this if the powder will not fulfill the only object for which it is purchased? The housewife to whom economy is an object will avoid these "Phosphate" powders.

Climatic Cures.

The influence of climate conditions in the cure of consumption is very much overdrawn. The poor patient, and the rich patient, too, can do much better at home by proper attention to food digestion, and a regular use of German Syrup. Free expectoration in the morning is made certain by German Syrup, so is a good night's rest and the absence of that weakening cough and debilitating night sweat. Restless nights and the exhaustion due to coughing, the greatest danger and dread of the consumptive, can be prevented or stopped by taking German Syrup liberally and regularly. Should you be able to go to a warmer clime, you will find that of the thousands of consumptives there, the few who are benefited and regain strength are those who use German Syrup. Trial bottles, 25c; regular size, 75c. At all druggists A. L. Reichert.

HOBO IDLE 104 YEARS

OLDEST TRAMP ON EARTH RETURNS TO GOTHAM.

"Old Simon," Pious Wanderer, Finding Jerusalem Too Slow to Die In, Comes Back to New York with Proud Boast.

New York.—"Old Simon," Sem Samke Hersh, or, as his American citizenship certificate records his name, Simon Harris, the centenarian tramp and most pious man in America, is back in his old place in the Norfolk street synagogue.

Until recently his friends supposed that "Old Sim" was in Jerusalem, whither he went nearly two years ago to die. He became tired of waiting to attain the object of his pilgrimage, and surprised his friend, L. Melzer, 4 Atlantic avenue, and his daughter, Mrs. Fred Brock, 73 Columbia street, Brooklyn, by walking in upon them. He had just arrived on the Philadelphia from Cherbourg.

By reason of his years, his piety and the extent of his rambles, Simon Harris, known to everybody on the East side, is the most remarkable tramp down on the books.

He himself says he is 97, but the records of the societies which have assisted him and the public records at Bialystok, Russian Poland, where he was born, show the patriarch to be 104 years old.

It is one of his proudest boasts that he never did a day's work in his life. He was about 60 years old when he walked from Bialystok to Hamburg and induced the packet company to give him passage to America. He became a religious tramp, starting penniless. By way of Panama he reached California, where he became, 44 years ago, an American citizen. He came back to New York afoot, and was three years on the way.

He returned to Russia, where his wife had died before he first sailed for New York. He brought back with him his only child, Rachel, now Mrs. Brock. He next made little jaunts into Central America, Brazil, Chili and Peru, returning through Central America, Mexico and Texas.

After spending about five years on the East side, passing most of his time in prayer in the synagogue, he started for Palestine, sailing for Tripoli and tramping through Africa, Egypt, Siberia and China. He came back again by way of Russia.

Always wearing his yermenke, or praying cap, "Old Simon" spent many a night in the synagogues praying that the soul of some departed friend, over whose body he kept vigil, should keep on toward Heaven and that his grave should be light. Two years ago he decided to go again to Jerusalem, this time to die in the Holy City. He started with $200, while the societies have sent him ten francs a month.

"Old Simon" says he found Jerusalem "slow," with "little much" business doing there. He spent all his time praying in the oldest synagogue in the city—a temple 1,900 years old.

When he tired of the "dead town" the American consul, Selah Merrill, gave him a letter, and he came back by way of Joppa, Marseilles, Paris and Cherbourg. Early the other morning he worshiped in a private synagogue at 77 Columbia street, Brooklyn. "Old Simon's" voice is firm and his mental faculties keen. He read without spectacles a Hebrew newspaper.

"I was sick until I was 40 years old," said he "and then I began to get strong. Palestine is too little good. The United States is the best place. Whisky I like, not too much; a little. I am particular what I eat when I have nothing. If I have everything to eat then I am not particular."

OPIUM SMOKING AS A CURE

Specialist Says "the Pipe" Will Check Cancer, Nervousness, and Many Other Afflictions.

London.—Visions of opium dens and Chinamen are called up by the announcement that a pyrolithic institute has been opened, whose method of cure is "the opium pipe."

The institute, however, which is in Red Lion square, Holborn, is opened for medical purposes only. It is under the direction of a well-known medical specialist, who yesterday stated that he believes opium can stop laryngeal cough; that it can stop the pseudo-asthmatic attacks of patients afflicted with chronic emphysema more immediately than can chloroform or ether, and that it can counteract idiopathic nervous sleeplessness, beneficially affect spasmodic and convulsive affections of the nervous system, as well as valvular heart disease, asthma and neuralgia.

Moreover, its effects on "colds" he believes to be marvelous, while the specialist says that he has himself used it for years in cancer cases and succeeded in checking the disease.

Match for the Tartar.

Gen. Kuropatkin has at last hit upon the most deadly of all war engines, the automobile; but instead of employing it for his own purposes of command he should man it with a chauffeur and send it actively against the enemy. One good automobile properly operated will do more destruction than all your artillery. If it comes to an issue of the Red Devil versus the Russ—heaven help the Russ!

Different War Medicines.

Russia says that the Japanese won their battles because their army surgeons administered fighting pills to the soldiers. Then Russia is suing for peace because the French financiers have administered fighting bills to the autocrat's ministers in St. Petersburg.

PRESIDENT BRINGS RUSSIA AND JAPAN TOGETHER TO DISCUSS PEACE.

Official Notification of Acceptance Brought to the White House by Representatives of the Belligerent Powers—Place and Time of Meeting of the Plenipotentiaries Not Yet Definitely Agreed Upon.

Washington, June 13.—Official assurance that the president's efforts to bring Russia and Japan together to discuss peace will be crowned with success was brought to the White House during the day by Count Cassini, the Russian ambassador, who called by appointment and in the name of Emperor Nicholas formally accepted the president's "offer of good will."

The following official statement regarding the conference was issued at the White House:

"Ambassador Cassini has called to express the Russian government's assent to the president's proposition, and to state that they would appoint plenipotentaries to meet the plenipotentaries of Japan to discuss the question of peace. The place of meeting is at present being discussed."

During the past two weeks the president's efforts have been directed toward bringing the belligerents into amicable contact on the basis of a mutual agreement to consider terms of peace. This he has finally accomplished. It remains now for the belligerent powers to name their plenipotentiaries and agree upon a time and place for them to meet to discuss terms and to negotiate a treaty of peace. These details are now under consideration with a bright prospect that such minor differences as may exist will be resolved within a few days.

Japan First to Accept.

Japan was the first of the two powers to indicate its acceptance of President Roosevelt's proposition. The formal response to his identical note of Thursday last was received from the Japanese government Saturday. Informal assurances of acceptance of the president's suggestion were received from the Russian government a little later; but the assurances from St. Petersburg were not of the same definite character as had been received from Tokio. Early in the day Ambassador Meyer at St. Petersburg informed this government that Russia had accepted the president's proposition and would name representatives with plenary powers to meet plenipotentaries of Japan. While satisfactory, the response of Russia was not in the same definite form as that of Japan. It had been the expectation of the president to publish to the world the replies of the two governments to his identical notes, but under the circumstances this could not be done.

The place of meeting of the plenipotentaries of the two governments has not been finally selected. In the arrangement of this detail and others of like importance, President Roosevelt is acting as an intermediary between Russia and Japan.

As soon as the arrangements for the peace conference are completed definitely an armistice will be agreed upon and the great armies in Manchuria will lower their bayonets pending the formal negotiations of a permanent treaty of peace.

END OF AUTOCRACY

FIRST SESSION OF RUSSIAN PARLIAMENT TO BE HELD IN SEPTEMBER.

St. Petersburg, June 12.—The Russian experiment in parliamentarism will begin in September. The Associated Press is now in a position to make this positive announcement. The emperor has already given his approval to the scheme now being finally but formally reviewed by the council of state for a legislative body consisting of a lower house and an upper house, with power to formulate legislation, discuss the budget, interpellate ministers, etc., but reserving in the emperor's own hands the final authority. The elections will take place during the coming summer. Although the scheme clings with desperation to the essence of autocracy it marks the beginning of the end. The die once cast there can be no retreat and the quasi-parliamentary regime which will be inaugurated will prove to be only a transitory bridge over which absolutism must cross to constitutionalism. Peace and a constitution appear simultaneously on the Russian horizon. The proclamation of parliament either in the form of a manifesto or as a ukase will be promulgated within a few days.

British Submarine Boat Lost.

Plymouth, Eng., June 9.—Submarine "A 8" was lost off the breakwater here during the morning. Three explosions are said to have occurred on board before she foundered. She had on board eighteen officers and men, including her regular crew and men who were in training. Fourteen of the number were drowned. The others were picked up.

MAY DIE A NATURAL DEATH.

Teamsters' Strike at Chicago Likely to Meet Such an End.

Chicago, June 13.—The teamsters' strike has come to the stage where it will die a natural death unless new life in injected into it by the strikers. During the past twenty-four hours nothing of any importance whatever has developed, neither side to the contrary having made any aggressive move. According to the employers involved in the trouble they have succeeded in getting their business almost back to normal conditions and that in a very short time the strike will be a forgotten incident with them. The teamsters are doing absolutely nothing in the strike, not a move being made either for peace or a spread of the difficulty. It is up to the strikers to make some move, as to allow things to run along as they are now doing it strengthens the employers' position, as the few men necessary to complete the full working force of drivers by the business houses involved in the trouble are being steadily lessened.

The new June grand jury during the day began an investigation of the alleged charges of bribery in connection with the strike which were left unfinished by the last grand jury.

REACHES HIGH POINT

SERIOUS FLOOD AT LA CROSSE, WIS., HAS PROBABLY ATTAINED ITS ZENITH.

La Crosse, Wis., June 13.—What is believed to be the crest of the floods due to the rise of the Mississippi river and its tributaries was reached during the day when the river stood 12.4 above low water mark, a rise of a foot since Saturday afternoon. The dikes forming part of the system of bridges crossing the Mississippi here is barely holding out with the water within a few inches of the top, another rise of a few inches meaning that it will go out. Four more factories which had been operating with difficulty were compelled to close during the day and the flood has been extended further in the residence district. Thousands of head of livestock pastured in the lowlands along the rivers have been drowned, the rise coming so suddenly that they could not be rescued and being held back by fences from swimming to higher land.

SEVERAL PERSONS DROWNED.

Floods in Iowa and Illinois Result in Loss of Life.

Burlington, Ia., June 13.—Traffic on the St. Louis, Keokuk and Northern railroad between Burlington and Keokuk is still blocked by washouts.

Many thousands of dollars damage was caused by floods in this part of Iowa and in Illinois. Several people are reported drowned, but no names have been learned.

KILL PULAJANE CHIEF

AMERICAN TROOPS SLAY DAGUHOB AND FORTY OF HIS FOLLOWERS.

Washington, June 10.—The secretary of war has received the following cablegram from General Corbin at Manila:

"Brigadier General Carter reports Captain Stacy, with eighty men of Company E, Twenty-first infantry, and the Thirty-eighth company, Philippine scouts, surprised main camp Pulajanes June 4 fifteen miles southeast of Catubig. Daguhoh, Pulajane chief, and forty Pulajanes killed; six captured. Arms and valuable records also captured. None killed on our side; two wounded, doing well. Daguhoh's death does away with most troublesome fanatic on the island of Samar. Operations being carried on in support of and in conjunction with civil authorities."

HOST WINS HIS POINT.

Insurance Law Changed So as to Compel Surplus Distribution.

Madison, Wis., June 13.—The senate at night concurred in the bill of Commissioner Host to require old line (mutual) life insurance companies to distribute their surpluses among policyholders not less frequently than once in five years.

This remedies the law of 1871, which Commissioner Host contended required distribution, but which the Equitable resisted and the supreme court held to be technically defective. This law will affect $40,000,000 held by various companies for policyholders in Wisconsin, and some $348,000,000 in the country at large.

FRANK G. BIGELOW IN PRISON.

Former Milwaukee Banker Taken to Federal Penitentiary.

Leavenworth, Kan., June 12.—Frank G. Bigelow, the former Milwaukee banker, was brought to the United States penitentiary at Fort Leavenworth, at 7:40 p. m. John Speciate, a counterfeiter under a five-year sentence, was brought along as a fellow prisoner with Bigelow and they were in charge of Andrew Johnson and Charles Kelley, deputy marshals.

Bigelow pleaded guilty at Milwaukee Saturday to an indictment of ten counts charging violation of the national banking laws and was sentenced by Judge Quarles to ten years in prison.

REPUBLIC OF NORWAY

MAY BE THE ULTIMATE RESULT OF THE PRESENT CRISIS IN THAT COUNTRY.

King of Sweden and Danish Royal Family Opposed to Placing Prince of Either House on Throne Declared Vacant by Norwegian Storthing. Russia and Germany Refuse Recognition of Norway's Independence.

Copenhagen, June 10.—All hope that King Oscar or Crown Prince Gustava will yield to the request of the Norwegian storthing to place a prince of the house of Bernadotte on the throne of Norway has now disappeared, according to a high authority.

The Danish royal family has also set the stamp of disapproval on the acceptance of the throne by a Danish prince.

It is understood that arrangements are actually being made for a national convention in Norway, and this, it is believed, will inevitably result in the declaration of a republic.

According to well informed persons here, Russia and Germany will refuse to recognize the Norwegian government until King Oscar consents to the disruption of the union. Strong efforts are being made to secure similar action by other governments, including that of Denmark, and it is stated that these efforts are meeting with encouragement.

King Oscar is quoted as saying that he would avoid war at any cost.

DEPOSES KING OSCAR

NORWEGIAN PARLIAMENT VOTES IN FAVOR OF DISSOLVING UNION WITH SWEDEN.

Christiania, Norway, June 7.—The storthing during the day declared the union between Norway and Sweden under one king to be dissolved and that the king has ceased to act as king of Norway.

The storthing further empowered the present state council to act as a government of Norway until further notice and to exercise the power heretofore appertaining to the king.

An address to the king was adopted declaring that no ill feeling was entertained against him, his dynasty or the Swedish nation and asking him to co-operate in the selection of a young prince of the house of Bernadotte to occupy the throne of Norway.

M. Michelsen, the retiring premier, accepted in behalf of the government the "honorable and difficult task with which the storthing has entrusted it."

The dissolution of the union between Sweden and Norway has been pending for some time and had its growth in the desire, which grew stronger as time passed, for the establishment of separate consular systems for the two countries.

King Oscar recently vetoed at Stockholm the measure presented to him by the council of state providing for separate consular representation and the Norwegians maintained that the king by so doing and partly by his absence from Norway had suspended his rights and duties as king of Norway.

RIKSDAG IS SUMMONED.

Swedish Parliament to Meet in Extraordinary Session June 30.

Stockholm, June 10.—King Oscar decided at a meeting of the council during the day to summon the riksdag for an extraordinary session June 30. The crown prince was present at the sitting, which had before it the resolution of the Norwegian storthing, which the premier denounced as revolutionary.

The resignations of the ministers of Sweden and Norway at Copenhagen, Rome and Madrid were tendered by telegraph and accepted.

OLD FLAG HAULED DOWN.

Emblem of Union Replaced by Tricolor Throughout Norway.

Christiania, June 10.—The Norwegian tricolor was hoisted during the day over Akershus fort and throughout the country in place of the union flag. The substitution was attended by great ceremony at the fort, where the members of the storthing and 30,000 people were assembled. The garrison was paraded in front of the quarters of the commandant of the fort, who read the resolution of the storthing dissolving the union with Sweden.

RED LAKE FALLS MILLING CO.

It is not strange that Page fence will stretch up smoothly over hills and down through ravines. It is made to do it, and it is simply putting into use one of the innate properties of its coiled wire. It is elastic.

It is not strange that short kinks or bends in wire cannot supply this elasticity like a coil or spiral. If they could, why haven't the manufacturers of spring balances, or of car springs used a kinked, crimped or other shaped metal than a coil. Probably the reason is that kinked or crimped metal will not let out and take up, will not shorten and lengthen like a coil spring.

Further, why do you suppose that high-carbon stock is always used for springs' unless it is because low-carbon stock will not make a spring. Low-carbon stock is much the cheaper.

Hair springs in watches are made of only a little higher carbon stock than Page-Wire is made of, in fact, there is not much more difference between the proportion of carbon in Page-Wire and watch-spring wire, than there is between the fence wire generally in use and that which we use for all the horizontal wires in Page fences.

Red Lake Falls Gazette

L. A. DAUTREMONT, PROPRIETOR
SAM S. HAISLET, EDITOR AND MANAGER

Published weekly, Thursday evening, and entered as second-class matter in the post office at Red Lake Falls.

Official Paper of Red Lake County.

Official Paper of Red Lake Falls.

Subscription, $1.00 per Year

Governor John A. Johnson was at Crookston the other day and will speak at several places in southern Minnesota next week. Governor Johnson is busy laying the wires for the battle of his life next year, but unless the Republicans show early signs of getting closer together than they are now, Mr. Johnson has no cause for worry.

In the last issue of the Gully Sunbeam, published at Gully, in Polk county, Messrs. Hunt & Singer, its editors, announce that they will move their plant to Highlanding, this county, to commence the publication of a paper about July 1. Editor Hunt is well-known in this county and his new venture will without doubt prove highly sucessful.

John Eastman's echo—the Plummer Pioneer—takes the same stand as John in regard to the school house burning here last week. It is too bad that two such unquestionable geniuses as these should have to waste their ability in Red Lake county. Either one would make a first-class editor of the Saturday Blade, and it seems a shame to deny them their honors due.

John Eastman is said to aspire to a seat in the Minnesota legislature, and those who know say that he will shy his caster into the ring next fall. John is anything but a successful political worker and stands about as much show of going to the legislature from this district as be does of going to heaven. Better be satisfied to run your home town, John, and leave politics alone awhile yet.

As was expected the Thief River Falls papers blamed Red Lake Falls because their petition was not allowed to stand and go on to state where this city refused to be square and numerous other accusations. Just why the actions of the commissioners should be construed as a Red Lake Falls move is not made plain, though of conre the up-river sheets would desire to make it appear as such. Every member of the board took oath to perform their duty fair and impartially, and because they found irregularities it is not Red Lake Falls' fault. It is true that the counsel for this city used all fair means to bring to the commissioners' notice the many faults of the petition, but had the case been reversed Thief River Falls would have done likewise. In every county seat fight carried on in the state both sides have strained every legal point before allowing matters to come to a head, as by making the parties to the fight conform strictly to the letter of the law is the only way that the people can hope to get justice. The commissioners deserve credit for refusing to allow an illegal petition to stand, regardless of which side presents it.

In Mad Chase.

Millions run in mad chase after health from one extreme of faddism to another when, if they would only eat good food; and keep their bowels regular with Dr. King's New Life Pills, their troubles would all pass away. Prompt relief and quick cure for liver and stomach trouble 25c at W. A. Schreiter's drug store guaranteed.

MAY BE STRICT.

Settlers on Eleven Towns May Have to Comply With the Law.

Special Agent Layman, of the Crookston land office, was out on the reservation recently examining homesteaders who were making final proof regarding their residence and cultivation upon their lands.

At present the land office officials are very strict in the matter of residence and cultivation, and, unless the law is in all ways complied with, no final receipt is issued. Mr. Layman either examines the witnesses or visits the land to find out if all the requirements are lived up to. Asked if the requirements would be as strictly enforced against residents living on the eleven towns as they are against those living on other government land, Mr. Layman said that he was not prepared to say. The law was the same, he said, and, unless the department of the interior instructed that a more lenient course be adopted, the settlers on the eleven towns would be required to make as good a showing as do settlers on free government land.

New Confectionery Store.

W. T. Spillane is fitting up the south half of the Duffy building this week, and will open up a fruit and confectionery store within a few days. He intends to keep a strictly up-to-date place and will try and please the public by handling the best of everything the market affords.

Meehans Sell Out.

Thief River News: James Meehan, Jr., the first of the week received word from Mississippi to the effect that the railroad, sawmill and pine interests owned by P. & J. Meehan had been sold to Pennsylvania parties. The consideration was $330,000.

After the Messrs. Meehans had sold out their saw mill and pine interests here they went to Mississippi and have been very fortunate in their investments down there. They will quite likely invest a large amount of their money again in Mississippi pine, but it is not known whether or not they will build another saw mill there.

Mail On Great Northern.

Commencing Tuesday morning the Great Northern passenger again brings the mail to this office and from now on can be depended upon to be on time. Since the service was changed to the N. P. the patrons of the office have enjoyed better service then before, but now that the Great Northern has changed running time it was thought advisable to have the mail brought that way. The change is beneficial to the public at large.

Rate to Blackdnak.

On account of the Firemen's Tournament at Blackduck June 20, 21, 22, 23, the Great Northern will sell round trip tickets to Bemidgi at $1.35. Tickets on sale June 19.

Summer Health and Comfort.

The season of hot weather is a trying time fur most every one, particularly the housewife, upon whom depends in large measure the well being and good nature of her family. Hot weather health and comfort is discussed, with many practical recommendations by Isabel Gordon Curtis in the July Delineator, the paper being a chapter in "The Making of a Housewife." Other seasonable suggestions are given in "A Snow Ball Luncheon," illustrated; "Milk as a Food," "Fruit Fantasies," and "New Ways of Serving Strawberries," containing the recipes for many refreshing Summer camp and house-furnishing ideas are other features of this number of the magazine and are of particular interest for their timeliness.

Distinct Innovation.

A distinct innovation will be inaugurated this season by the Northern Steamship Company which operates the magnificent steamships the "Northwest" and "Northland" on the Great Lakes and which sail between Duluth, Chicago and Buffalo. Heretofore the service on these boats has entirely been European plan but this year it has been arranged to place in effect an American plan service on both the "Northwest" and "Northland". The first sailing of the "Northwest" from Duluth will be June 27th and the "Northland" from Chicago June 24th.

Oscar Holden, at Your Service.

Fosston Thirteen Towns: Friday morning when he left for Crookston it was Oscar H. Olsen; Saturday morning, it was Oscar Holden who returned, the same body and soul, but bearing a new name.

This somewhat unusual action upon the part of Mr. Holden was not brought about through any sentiment, likes or dislikes—or necessity, but was taken for purely business reasons and convenience. Prominently identified in trade as a member of the firm of Larsen, Carpenter & Co., he necessarily has a large personal correspondence and the fact of the name "Olsen," or "Olson," being as common as it is in this locality caused him much inconvenience and unpleasantness at times through accidental interchange of mail, and in other ways the mistakes that were sure to occur, added inducement for him to make the change.

He appeared before Judge Wm. Watts in district court chambers Friday and went through the formalities whereby he became legal possessor of the name "Oscar Holden," by which he will henceforth be known.

A bull moose about two years old and weighing 1,200 pounds dashed down the hillside into Duluth one morning last week and fell to the ground in the East End residence district. He was unable to rise and expired two hours later.

Broken down in health because of too close application to art study and discouraged because her illness had forced her to give up her work Miss Emma Wolfe, a student at the Minneapolis School of Fine Arts, committed suicide by drinking carbolic acid.

Minnesota is experiencing a wave of municipal reform. Governor Johnson is receiving from three to five letters a day from residents of cities, counties, villages and townships complaining of mismanagement of the affairs of the municipalities and asking for an investigation.

John Dammond, a farmer living eight miles from Glencoe, who was to have been married Wednesday morning, committed suicide by hanging shortly before the hour set for the wedding. His bride to be was Miss Dora Walters, a neighbor's daughter, whom he had known from childhood. No reason for his rash act is known.

There will be some extensive improvements made in the South St. Paul Union stock yards within the next few months. At a meeting of the company it was voted to expend $138,000 in improvements and extensions during the coming year. The growing volume of business makes it imperative that the company have larger facilities to handle stock.

BLACK-DRAUGHT STOCK & POULTRY MEDICINE

This great stock medicine is a money saver for stock raisers. It is a medicine, not a cheap food or condition powder. Though put up in coarser form than Thedford's Black-Draught, renowned for the cure of the digestion troubles of persons, it has the same qualities of invigorating digestion, stirring up the torpid liver and loosening the constipated bowels for all stock and poultry. It is carefully prepared and its action is so healthful that stock grow and thrive with an occasional dose in their food. It cures hog cholera and makes hogs grow fat. It cures chicken cholera and roup and makes hens lay. It cures constipation, distemper and colds in horses, murrain in cattle, and makes a draught animal do more work for the food consumed. It gives animals and fowls of all kinds new life. Every farmer and raiser should certainly give it a trial.

It costs 25c. a can and saves ten times its price in profit.

"FROM IN THE WET WOODS."

Here where the woods are wet,
The blossoms of the dog's-tooth violet
Seem meteors in a miniature firmament
Of wildflowers, where, with rainy sound and scent
Of breeze and blossom, soft the April went;
Their tongue-like leaves of umber-mottled green,
So thickly seen,
Seem dropping words of gold,
In visible syllables of a magic old.
Beside them, near the wahoo-bush and haw,
Blooms the hepatica;
Its slender flowers upon swaying stems
Lifting pale, solitary blooms,
Starry, and twilight-colored—like frail
gems,
That star the diadems
Of sylvan spirits, piercing pale the glooms—
Or like the wands, the torches of the fays,
That light lone, woodland ways
With slim, uncertain rays:
(The faery people, whom no eye may see,
Busy, so legend says,
With budding bough and leafing tree,
The blossom's heart o' honey and honey-
sack o' the bee,
And all dim thoughts and dreams,
That take the form of flowers, as it seems,
And haunt the banks of greenwood streams,
Showing in every line and curve,
Commensurate with our love, and intimacy,
A smiling confidence or sweet reserve.)

A Smooth Fortune Teller

AS A DISTINCTLY superior person Amelia Jennings has long earned the respect and admiration of her friends rather than affection. There are not wanting those who declare her decidedly more lovable for the recent chastening experience that proved her intrinsic humanity to herself.

As a distinctly superior person Amelia long felt in duty bound to scoff at the touch of superstition inherent in almost all human beings. While every other member of the office force has at some time confessed to having visited a soothsayer of some order, Amelia has sat in the seat of the scornful. Wherefore every other member of the office rejoiced greatly when, the other day, the gypsy woman roped her in.

Things have not been going quite so smoothly as usual for Amelia of late. The night before the gypsy woman called she had quarreled with her fiance; that morning she had broken her glasses; the neuralgic twinges that have racked her all winter were in full session; at noon the office manager found two flaws in her ordinary perfect work.

"You not very happy, you not very healthy, you awful mad," remarked

"I TELL YOU THAT FOR NOTHING."

the gypsy, approaching her desk just as the door closed behind the manager's assistant, the last to leave the office for luncheon. "I tell you that for nothing. For a quarter I get you back you luck."

Amelia stoutly declares the power that induced her to yield was nothing short of hypnotic. The gypsy demanded the "loan" of a second quarter to cross her second palm with; of a third with which to make mysterious passes about her victim. Then she began operations with the "two woman enemies; the dark one is jealous of you" story so ludicrously familiar to most people not distinctly superior. To the fascinated Amelia, however, the tale was entirely new.

"Tie two knots in this string," next commanded the gypsy, producing a coarse blue thread. "Now say after me: 'Good luck, I call you; bad luck, I lose you; go!'"

Amelia found herself meekly obeying.

"If you wicked woman," the gypsy smilingly informed her, "I fix it so those two enemies die on you. But you good woman, so I just lose them. For some ladies, I charge $5, $10, much money. Very little for you. Now lenda me more quarter an' some bill-money, so I build up you luck.'

Opening the palm into which she had shut the bit of blue thread, she showed the knots quite absent.

"Gif me, lenda me the bill-money next you heart," she continued, as Amelia, duly impressed, protested that she had no "bill-money" about her. So the erstwhile superior young woman, more impressed, unpinned the five-dollar bill she habitually carries in the front of her blouse for emergency necessities, and allowed it to be closed with the fourth quarter, in a corner of her handkerchief.

The handkerchief corner was knotted with the blue thread that had suffered the mysterious untying. Then the handkerchief was firmly closed in Amelia's own palm.

"Now, you say after me: 'My love, come back; my enemies, go; pain and misery leave me; happy I will be,'" again commanded the gypsy, her black eyes and white teeth flashing.

Amelia, wondering but still submissive, again meekly complied.

The gypsy caught her hand, pressed it against her own breast, then kissed and conveyed it to her forehead.

"Now," she said, tossing it from her in dramatic fashion, "you bad luck gone, lost; you good luck come near you; you misery-pain all come into my body. You be well, happy, all right.

"Keep that handkerchief near you, keep it secret, do not open the knot, tell no one. If you untie it or tell the secret you break the charm.

"In two days all will be well with you. You marry, have fine trip, fine house, fine servants, all this summer. Some time I see you again."

Then she slipped from the office, just as the manager, his assistant, the other stenographer, the bookkeeper and a bill clerk came back in a body. Simultaneous sight of the smiling gypsy and of Amelia's furious blushes told the whole story. There was a shout of laughter, amid which Amelia, in dignified silence, sought her hat and coat. Before donning them, however, she attempted to wipe her hot cheeks with the knotted handkerchief and the bill clerk exploded.

"If the dago woman hasn't worked the 'build up your luck' dodge on our wise and saintly Miss Jennings!" he cried.

"How much did you put in the handkerchief.." queried several voices in unison, thus proving Amelia by no means the first office victim.

"Five dollars and a quarter," admitted Amelia, too nervous and excited to recognize the wisdom of silence. "But it's all there!"

The bill clerk, amid another peal of laughter, took the crumpled handkerchief and untied it. Then he spread it out before the amazed and indignant Amelia.

Not a penny was in sight.

"Of course she palmed the money," they all explained, comfortingly; "she saw you were easy. The money never went into the handkerchief at all."

Then Amelia, remembering that the gypsy had also omitted to return the two extra quarters "loaned" for the "building up" process, sank into a chair weakly and all but cried on the other stenographer's shoulder. The other stenographer, generously forgetting Amelia's contemptuous strictures concerning her own previous fortune-telling experiences, endeavored to console the drooping girl.

"Time to get to work, everybody," said the assistant manager, kindly diverting the general attention, and Amelia, who daily "keeps office" while the rest of the office force goes out to luncheon, went off in search of her own midday meal. Hot, strong coffee and beefsteak put renewed courage in her, and all afternoon she bore up bravely under the slow fire of laughing "hits" and comments. But the thought of a gypsy, a quarter or a five-dollar bill is still potent to set her cheeks burning, and it is doubtful if Miss Amelia Jennings will ever be quite so distinctly superior again.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Great Horseradish Town.

The village of Baiersdorf, which has the reputation of raising the finest horseradish in Europe, is about 22 miles south of Bamberg, on the line of railroad to Nuremberg. Horseradish is cultivated almost exclusively on about 1,335 acres of the moist grounds of the valley of the river Regnitz. The average yearly yield amounts to about 55,000 hundredweight (6,050,000 pounds), which represents a value of $120,000. Most of the product is exported to Austria, the Netherlands, Switzerland and France.

The visitor to the underground city "farm" is lighted through the former wine vaults by a lantern. HOME-MADE BROODER.

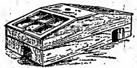
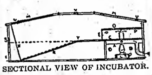
Description of One of Simple Construction Which Is Said to Do Good Service.

The accompanying pictures and condensed descriptions are furnished by C. E. Beare, Trumbull county, Ohio, to the Ohio Farmer. Fig. 1 shows the outside of the brooder. Fig. 2 is a cross section. Heat is supplied by lamp, L, over which is suspended an inverted box, A, with a galvanized iron bottom, and having openings in its sides for ventilation. An inch above the sheet iron is a platform, C, on which the chicks are placed. The space between forms the hot-air chamber, B. Fresh air is supplied by shaft, H, passing into the chamber, B, where it is heated and rises through a warm air pipe, F, into the brooder pen, P, P, where it is partially confined by the cover, D, which may be adjusted to suit the size of the chicks. About the edge of D is hung a woolen curtain, E, notched so that the chicks may run in and out. The warm air finally finds an outlet through the ventilators, V, V, V, in the roof, M, M. Platform C is hinged at T, so that the portion R may be raised or lowered by cord, N. When raised it is supported by the spring, S. It is important that this slope be inside rather than outside the brooder, as the chicks are invited by the open door, and when this leads them to the bottom of the slope they will generally find their way up. If the slope is outside they may fail to find the entrance. Raising the slope gives a double floor space and plenty of room inside the brooder on bad days. Have a thermometer in brooder. Start chicks at 95 degrees and gradually reduce to 90, 85, 80 degrees, with less heat as they grow older.



THE INCUBATOR.



SECTIONAL VIEW OF INCUBATOR.

HENS FOR HATCHING.

Plymouth Rocks Are Undoubtedly the Best Sitters and Mothers.

In spite of the fact that incubators and brooders have been brought to a great state of perfection, the old hen will still be used on most farms. The hen is a more skillful producer of chicks than is the incubator in the hands of the average man and woman. Where only a few fowls are kept and only a few chicks are desired the hen will still hold her popularity. We believe that where the farmer desires to keep a good-sized flock of hens, and to raise yearly in excess of 100 chicks, the incubator should be used. But we realize the fact that on millions of our farms just enough fowls are kept to consume the scraps from the table.

The hens for setting purposes must come from some of the breeds that have not had the maternity instinct bred out of them. We would not think of selecting any of the Leghorn breeds for setters. Probably there is no breed that produces better setters than the Plymouth Rocks. But in selecting a fowl for this work, preference should be given to those that are light in weight, as the heavy fowls both break eggs and trample chicks to death. We have found the lighter weights to give most excellent satisfaction. While they cannot cover so many eggs as the larger fowls, they will bring more chicks to maturity.

CACKLES AND CROWS.

The hen is the friend of the small capitalist.

The hen is still a leader as a money maker on a small scale.

The farm boy and the farm girl should each own a flock of fowls.

Everybody interested in raising poultry should own an incubator.

An incubator raises more hens, consequently more eggs, which makes more money.

Separate the fowls into small flocks of 25 to 30, putting the hens by themselves and dividing the pullets. You can then feed them better and get more eggs.

For incubating purposes care should be exercised to make sure that a large proportion of the eggs are fertile. It will also pay to candle the eggs after they have been in the incubator for a couple of days, removing the eggs that are not fertile.

Small Egg Producers Infertile.

Contrary to general impression, the fewer eggs a hen lays the more are they likely to be infertile, if we can judge anything from experiments carried on at the Maine station. There an attempt was made to breed downward in egg yield as well as upward. The experimenters were surprised at finding an unlooked-for obstacle, namely, the infertility of the eggs from hens producing the fewest.

SURFACE DRAINAGE.

How a Farmer May Study Condition and Secure Better Results from His Crops.

On an average, about one-fourth of the rainfall passes off the surface without entering the soil. This surplus water becomes an important factor in the farm management. Allowed to collect, as it rushes down the slopes, it is liable to cut the soil and carry away the best portions, and on the flats it may remain so long that it will suffocate the crops. In trying to avoid these results every farmer becomes an engineer, and his success with crops in certain locations depends in no small degree upon his skill in controlling the water.

In former times, before the practice of underdrainage was carried to the success that it now is, much dependence was placed upon surface-ditches, and flat lands were regularly plowed and cultivated in "land-beds." They were plowed the same way every time, and it was a common thing to see the elevated lands a foot or two higher than the water-furrows between. Underdrains cannot altogether do away with the usefulness of these land-beds on flat clay lands, as in times of heavy rainfall the water cannot reach the drains fast enough, and the level soil will puddle and subsequently bake. Surface drains are frequently useful auxiliaries to the underdrains to carry off the surplus water quickly. As a substitute for covered ditches, a bold system of land-beds will frequently help matters on flat meadows. The "lands" may be made not over eight or ten yards wide, and the middle furrows cleaned out after cultivation is finished.

On no crop is it so important to guard against stagnant water on the surface as winter wheat. On such spots it is very apt to winter-kill. In plowing flat land the dead furrows should be left in such an arrangement as to carry the water off from the "sags" and the level stretches. If the surface is somewhat uniform, it may be plowed in "lands" lying in the direction of the drainage, each middle furrow then acting as a surface drain. When the surface is not uniform it may be expedient to plow in two systems, so that the dead furrows of each shall favorably drain either section. In addition to plowing in lands, it may be sometimes necessary to strike a few furrows with the plow after the crop is planted. I have seen this simple expedient do effective service on a flat piece of ground. It is necessary to clear the furrows with a shovel where they may be clogged by the imperfect action of the plow or at intersections.

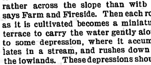
With the use of grain drills and other wheeled machinery water furrows are avoided as much as possible, but there remain many situations where they are of the greatest use. While their operation is superficial, they are of great help in removing the surplus water in times of heavy rainfall. The idea is to get the water off the crops before it does damage. With hillside fields the reverse of this policy holds. There the object is to retard the flow of water so that it will not furrow and gully the land. Terracing is simply surface drainage to prevent washing on hillsides.

It is a bad practice to plow sloping land up and down the slope if it can be avoided. When washy hillsides are plowed at all they should be plowed deeply, so that the loose earth may absorb a large portion of the surplus water. Then the crop, if it is one that is to be cultivated, should have the rows rather across the slope than with it, says Farm and Fireside. Then each row as it is cultivated becomes a miniature terrace to carry the water gently along to some depression, where it accumulates in a stream, and rushes down to the lowlands. These depressions should always be left in grass or sod to prevent gullying. The surface water from the uplands, when disposed there so as to do no damage, very frequently causes trouble in the adjoining lowlands, where it spreads out to drown land already oversupplied. The evident remedy here is to cut a surface ditch to intercept the water and carry it out of the way.

HOME-MADE SUBSOIL PLOW

Very Serviceable and Practical Utensil for Use After Field Is Plowed.

A very serviceable and practicable subsoiler may be constructed with but little work. The beam and handles are the same as any other plow stock. The two uprights which support the plow point can be made from pieces of old wagon tire, each two feet long. The point bar should be about the same length and about two inches square from one upright attachment to the other. The front end should be made with good steel well tempered and drawn to a point which is best if made wide and flat. The uprights are attached to the beam by stirrups or clamps made of three-quarter-inch iron rod. The front upright should be sharpened on its front side, which will assist in cutting the old roots and thick clay.



HOMEMADE SUBSOILER.

This plow will break the bottom of a furrow made by any two-horse breaking plow, says Farm and Home. If made for one-horse it should be constructed lighter and need have but a single upright. It is especially adapted to loosening up sod which has become very solid from long tramping.

IS A WAR EXPERT

PRESIDENT WATCHES CLOSELY ARMY AND NAVY MATTERS.

HOW HE IMPROVED GUNNERY

Instrumental in Having New Bayonet and Sword Adopted in the Army—Effort to Secure War Data from Japanese Proves Futile.

WASHINGTON.—President Roosevelt finds time in all the multitude of big state questions and international problems that pour in upon him to give a good deal of attention to the details of various branches of the public service. He is an enthusiastic army and navy man, and everything pertaining to the personnel or equipment of those branches is of intense interest to him. There is not an expert in the navy who watches more closely the performance of battleships and cruisers in their maneuvers and the records made by their gunners at target practice. He is well acquainted with the technical part of gunnery, and the reports of the performances of the various ships are sent to him as soon as received, and he reads them with eagerness and discrimination.

When Mr. Roosevelt was assistant secretary of the navy, he did more to advance the efficiency of the men behind the guns than anyone connected with the service for years. On several occasions he accompanied the fleets on their evolutions and at target practice, and he made a study of all things pertaining to the manipulation of the big and little guns on the ships. During target practice out on the open sea Mr. Roosevelt would become so intensely interested in the shots as to be oblivious to his surroundings. He would shout and cheer lustily when an extraordinarily good shot was made. To this day he maintains his interest in this very important part of the service, and frequently consults with the naval officers regarding methods of improving marine gunnery, and criticises reports that do not show what he conceives should be a good record of efficiency.

The president takes just as deep an interest in the army as he does in the navy, and studies the details of the army equipment just as he does that of the navy. A recent example of this was when he sent a letter to the general staff recommending that a change be made in the bayonets and swords used in the army.

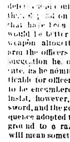
Wants Effective Weapons.

MR. ROOSEVELT believes that if a weapon is to be used at all it should be substantial and effective. In this matter he criticised the light stiletto-like bayonet that has been in service as being too small and brittle for practical use. He called attention to the fact that on the slightest test the thin blades would snap. In an engagement where the bayonet would be called into play, this weapon would be useless, and the president therefore recommended that something more substantial be adopted, and on his recommendation the general staff has adopted a broad, strong, dagger-like bayonet that can be wielded with terrible effect, if necessary, at close quarters.

The president had the same criticism to make of the pretty, toy-like swords which the officers have been wearing, and he recommended that for actual service a good, sharp saber be substituted, one that would prove a weapon of [illegible] would do execution. Rather than depend on the fancy dress swords that have been in use, he declared it would be better to do away with such a weapon altogether and if practicable arm the officers with rifles. The latter suggestion he, of course, did not advocate, as he admitted it would be impracticable for officers in command of troops to be encumbered with a rifle. He did insist, however, on a change in the sword, and the general staff has in consequence adopted the saber, which is to be ground to a razor-like edge, so that it will mean something when used in a contest.

Another arm that is engaging the president's attention is the new rifle, which is being supplied to the army. The president wants a thorough test to be made of these guns, and suggests the trials of their effectiveness be made on long ranges, such as may be found at some of the western posts.

Little Data from Japanese War.

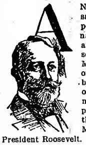


IN THEIR consideration of the adoption of new bayonets and sharp sabers, army officers have been eager to secure information regarding the use of such weapons in the present war between Russia and Japan. They have had considerable difficulty in gaining the knowledge desired. The war department recently invited the Japanese minister here to furnish what information he could on the effects of bayonet attacks in the present war, but Mr. Takahira very politely declined, and the general staff has been obliged to proceed with the investigation on such information as had been obtained from our own officers in Manchuria.

Minister Takahira informed Secretary Taft that the Japanese government felt obliged to adhere strictly to the policy of retaining all information of whatever sort until after the war, when this government will be placed in possession of full facts and figures. This appears to be an overcautious policy, and the army officers here cannot understand what harm could come to the Japanese by reporting the effects of their bayonet and sword attacks in the recent battles in Manchuria. The army experts are anxious to learn the results of bayonet attacks, as there is a suspicion that the loss of life from that weapon is not as great as has been represented. Medical officers say that if this is proven it will be an interesting discovery and will present a new phase of the value of the bayonet, the moral influence of which has been well established.

The declination of the Japanese minister to give any information on this subject is another illustration of that reticence which has been so marked on the part of Japan all through the present war.

New Figure in Political Field.



A NEW figure, it is said, is about to appear in the field of national politics and in the public service. This is Mr. Henry C. Frick, of Pittsburg, the business associate of Andrew Carnegie and the warm personal friend of the late President McKinley and of President Roosevelt. It is persistently reported that Mr. Frick will at some time in the near future enter President Roosevelt's cabinet. The portfolio which is to be offered him has not been so positively predicted. There is a strong impression, however, that if Secretary Shaw retires next February, as it has been intimated he may, then Mr. Frick will be invited to become the financial head of the government.

Mr. Frick has had a phenomenally successful business career and is a financier of high rank. He has amassed great wealth in the coke business and in the steel business in connection with the Carnegie interests. He is much more democratic than the "Laird of Skibo." He has had a taste of politics and in a quiet way has had a good deal to do with local and state affairs. He was a very warm friend and supporter of the late Senator M. S. Quay, of Pennsylvania, and is a close personal friend of former Attorney General, now Senator, P. C. Knox.

President Roosevelt became personally acquainted with Mr. Frick three years ago this summer, when he attended a Fourth of July celebration in Pittsburg, as the orator of the day and guest of honor, and was entertained by Mr. Frick at the latter's palatial home in the Smoky city. Since then the Pittsburger has been a frequent visitor at the white house, and a fine painting representing Pittsburg with her glowing furnaces which hangs in Mr. Roosevelt's study is a token of Mr. Frick's regard for the president. Mr. Frick also engaged the French artist, Chartran, to paint a picture of the signing of the peace protocol with Spain, and presented that to the late President McKinley as an addition to the white house collection of paintings. The picture cost $20,000.

Japanese Labor for Isthmus.

THE Panama canal commission has decided that Japanese is the only labor available for digging the canal. Chief Engineer Wallace, who has spent many months on the isthmus and personally observed the force of men at work there, the influence of the climate upon them and their efficiency, gives it is his opinion that the little Japs are better adapted to this work than any other class of laborers that can be obtained. He has consulted with Secretary of War Taft on the subject and the latter agrees with his conclusions.

White labor cannot exist on the isthmus on account of the climate and the sickness it produces. Chinese are not available, as they are prohibited by law to be landed on the isthmus. The West Indian laborers, the colored men from the various islands, are too shiftless, lazy and inefficient. South Europe labor is not available either. The question has resolved itself, therefore into the employment of Japanese labor if good execution is to be secured. Repugnant as it is to the customs and laws of the United States this Japanese labor will doubtless be employed through the Padrone system. Contracts will be made with Japanese contractors who will furnish the laborers and charge the government so much per head per day.

The labor leaders have been sounded on this question, and it is understood they raise no serious objection to the employment of contract labor on the actual digging of the canal. They appreciate conditions on the isthmus and recognize that no body of laborers that could belong to their organizations, could endure the climate and do the work. As the interests of labor organizations have been safeguarded in other ways, such as the manufacture of machinery and material, the employment of ditch diggers does not interest them particularly.

CHICAGO'S FREIGHT SUBWAY

Will Furnish Facilities for the Best Underground Mail Service in the World.

Far below the surface of Chicago's streets scores of electric locomotives are pulling freight trains that are taking thousands of tons of coal into the boiler rooms of skyscrapers, without dirt, noise or sign of effort in the street, says the Scientific American. They are removing tons of ashes, and caring for the excavations from the basements of buildings in course of construction. More than this, they are hauling daily thousands of tons of freight which was formerly carried over the pavements in wagons. On February 15, 1905, the company entered into a contract with the government under which all Chicago's second, third and fourth-class mail matter will be transferred from the railway stations to the new post office through the tunnels. A further plan to utilize the tunnel for mail purposes involves the building of chutes connecting the street corner mail boxes with boxes in the tunnel, where the mail can be collected by cars. When the new schemes are perfected and added to the present pneumatic tube service for first-class mail, Chicago will have the most perfect underground mail facilities in the world. Eight hundred and eighty tons of mail will be handled in the tunnels daily, in special locked United States cars. The system will be in operation by June 1.

Without noise, dirt, smoke or the slightest delay to traffic, the central business district of Chicago has been honeycombed with these tunnels. Twenty-eight miles already have been constructed, and extensions are projected.

OUR SHARE OF SIMPLON.

Drill That Made the Plan Possible Was Invented by an American.

To the great Alpine tunnels we have, of course, contributed nothing in money and probably nothing in labor. It is not probable that an American was employed in any of them. But we did contribute the original invention which enabled the Mont Cenis to get through even in 13 years, the St. Gothard in nine, and the Simplon in less than seven, says a writer in the Chicago Inter Ocean.

J. J. Couch, an American, in 1849 made the first machine rock drill. He was the first man in all the world to substitute steam or other mechanical power of human muscle in such work. The use and adaptation of his invention was slow in spreading. In 1857 it was so little known that work began on the Mont Cenis tunnel with hand drills, and machine drills were not used on the Italian end until 1860, or on the French end until 1862.

The American inventor made the Mont Cenis tunnel commercially practicable. He shortened the time of such works all over the world. He made the Simplon tunnel possible in less than seven years.

That is the American share in the great engineering work whose completion Europe is now celebrating.

WASHINGTON'S ARMY HOME

House at Valley Forge Which Sheltered the General for Six Months.

It is hardly more than an hour's ride from Philadelphia to Valley Forge, and one alights from the railway train about 100 yards from the ancient, pointed stone house of miller Isaac Potts; the structure which all America cherishes to-day as the home of Washington for the half year the continental army was encamped in that country. As nearly as can be ascertained, writes W. H. Richardson, in Four-Track News, the building is very much the same as it was when it was getting its right to a high place on history's page. "The log cabin to dine in," about which Mrs. Washington wrote, has been rebuilt, and otherwise the restorations have been carried on in a consistent manner. Externally the substantial and comfortable look of the building is very impressive, and its simple, dignified proportions appeal at once to the good taste of every visitor. The curious porch over the front door, the exquisite hand-made moldings and other details of its architecture are charming notes in the very pretty harmony. Interest in the interior is heightened by the presence in the various rooms of rare old furniture, prints, engravings and other relics of the colonial and revolutionary eras.

Biblical Arithmetic.

To the number of times Paul was stoned add the number of times he was shipwrecked; add the number of times he was beaten with rods; multiply by number of times he received 40 stripes save one; add the number of fathoms at first sounding when Paul was shipwrecked; add number of days they sailed; multiply by number of anchors cast out, and the result will be number of persons on board the ship that was to carry Paul to Rome.—Ram's Horn.

Bulls Killed in Spain.

A Spanish contemporary says that in 1904 nearly 12,000 bulls were killed in bull fights of the country. The bulls killed about 10,000 horses. The best and most valuable bulls for the arena are raised on the vast estates of the duke of Veragua, in Andalusia, who has made a fortune out of this business.

Elastic But Not Stretchy.

Customer—I thought you said that last pair of rubber shoes you sold me were elastic?

Salesman—So they were; what was the matter with them?

"Nothing, only I couldn't make them stretch from one end of the winter to the other."—Chicago Journal.

Nine Nations

Now Use Liquozone. Won't You Try It—Free?

Millions of people, of nine different nations, are constant users of Liquozone. Some are using it to get well; some to keep well. Some to cure germ diseases; some as a tonic. No medicine was ever so widely employed. These users are everywhere; your neighbors and friends are among them. And half the people you meet—wherever you are—know some-one whom Liquozone has cured.

If you need help, please ask some of these users what Liquozone does. Don't blindly take medicine for what medicine cannot do. Drugs never kill germs. For your own sake, ask about Liquozone; then let us buy you a full-size bottle to try.

We Paid $100,000

For the American rights to Liquozone. We did this after testing the product for two years, through physicians and hospitals, after proving, in thousands of different cases, that Liquozone destroys the cause of any germ disease.

Liquozone has, for more than 20 years, been the constant subject of scientific and chemical research. It is not made by compounding drugs, nor with alcohol. Its virtues are derived solely from gas—largely oxygen gas—by a process requiring immense apparatus and 14 days' time. The result is a liquid that does what oxygen does. It is a nerve food and blood food—the most helpful thing in the world to you. Its effects are exhilarating, vitalizing, purifying. Yet it is a germicide so certain that we publish on every bottle an offer of $1,000 for a disease germ that it cannot kill. The reason is that germs are vegetables; and Liquozone—like an excess of oxygen—is deadly to vegetal matter.

There lies the great value of Liquozone. It is the only way known to kill germs in the body without killing the tissue, too. Any drug that kills germs is a poison, and it cannot be taken internally. Every physician knows that medicine is almost helpless in any germ disease.

Germ Diseases.

These are the known germ diseases. All that medicine can do for these troubles is to help Nature overcome the germs, and such results are indirect and uncertain. Liquozone attacks the germs, wherever they are. And when the germs which cause a disease are destroyed, the disease must end, and forever. That is inevitable.

WILL GO TO GREENBUSH

Through Service To the End of the New Extension Will Begin Next Monday.

Begining next Monday the train service on this line of the Grest Northern will be changed, and the trains will commence running thru to the end of the new extension which was built last fall.

The passenger train will run through to Greenbush daily, instead of the mixed train that has heen running from Thief River to the end of the line. The change will not affect the time of arriving and leaving here either way, and for the present at least it will remain the same.

The freight service will also be changed and two trains will be run on the line. One going up one day and coming back the next and vice-versa. This will give Greenbush a much better service but will not change our present service here much.

George Will "Butt In."

Editor L. E. George, of the Fertile Journal, came up with the track team Tuesday. Instead of attending the track meet, however, triend George and several others spent the afternoon at the North Side dam angling for the festive pike. We promised not to tell just how Lou's luck run, but as he took home a long string of the prized beauties we will leave it to him to tell his home people how he got them.—Red Lake Falls Gazette.

ANOTHER MEET.

Drainage Bosrd Will Meet in Crookston on First Tuesday in August.

The outcome of the successful State Drainage Board meeting at Bemidji on Ssturday will no donbt develop into the plscing on the market of thousands of acres of lands, which nutil drained are practically worthless and nnsaleable scattered thruout the northern part of Minnesota. With this end in view a drainsge lesgue meeting will he held in Crookston on the first Tuesday in August when a permanent organization will he effected. Governor Johnson, Auditor Iverson and Secretary Hanson have heen invited to he present; invitations have also heen sent to Senators Nelson and Clapp and the entire Minnesota House delegation. The secretary has also heen reqnested to send an invitation to each hoard of county commissioners in the state and ask them to select one man from each commissioner district to represent their county in the league meeting. A most interesting program will be arranged for the meeting and entertainment provided for the visitors. The meeting will no doubt bring a large crowd to the city.

Olson and Saxernd.

Last Wednesday at the meeting of the village and township chairmen in the first and third commissioner districts of Beltrami county, I. B. Olson, of Bemidji, and Chss. E. Saxerud, of Maple Ridge township, were chosen as commissioners to succeed Wes Wright and F. O. Sibly, who were recently removed by Governor Johnson for malfeasauce in office. Olson was elected on the first ballot and Saxernd on the fourth.

ARE AT BLACKDUCK

A Large Delegation of Our Citizens Are Taking in the Tournament At Blackdnck.

About fifty of our townspeople, including the band and the Firemen's running team, left Mondsy evening on the Great Northern railroad for the tournament at Blackduck, which will last fonr days.

The band will furnish the music during the fonr days the tournament lasts, and the running team will endeavor to capture a few of the prizes hung np by the Blackduck business men. The band will certainly do its part towards entertaining the crowd and had ought to make quite a reputation for itself. The running team will certainly do it's best in their attempt to bring back some of the prizes and it is almost a certainity that they will.

An effort will be made to have the next tournament held here, our enterprising citizens having subscribed enough money to insure it's success. Warren and Bemidji sre also after it and in all probabilities it will be a hard fight. Here's hoping that our boys may be successful in their effort to bring it to the best town in the valley.

AFTER SEVERAL COUNTIES.

Reported That Governor Johnson May Investigate.

Gov. John A. Johnson may probe into the affairs of several counties in the uorthern part of the state from which complaiuts of corruption and maladmiuistration have been received. It was stated at the governor's office Friday that from three to five complaints are heing received every day, and that many connties, villages and townships are involved.

The complaints have heen referred to Attorney General Yonng and if it is fonnd that the governor has jurisdiction and there is a cause of actiou, proceedings will he instituted similar to those instituted in Beltrami connty.

It is said in several instances much evidence of gross maladministration has heen procured.

This evidence will be examined carefully and in those cases the governor has no jnrisdiction, the complainants will be informed of the law and the methods they shonld pursne to bring ahont the desired reforms.

It is charged that ditches, roads, hridges and pnhlic bnildings, in many mnnicipalities, have not heen let to the lowest bidder as the law provides.

It is claimed further that the floating indebtedness of some of the mnnicipalities is ahove the legal limit, that some of the officials have been guilty of gross misconduct and honds have been issued in violation of the law.

Manager Pettibone is feeling good over the fact that he has nearly enough logs now on hand to last the season. The logs have been coming in very rapidly lately and it is thought that there is nearly ten million here at present.

The Neils saw mill at Cass Lake claims the biggest log of the season. It was a white pine, 16 feet long and produced 1140 feet of 1¼ inch clear lumber. The log came from the Leech Lake reservation and is said to be the biggest yet found in that part of the country.

The Thief River Falls ball team, which is recognized as a good one, will play a game here the 4th of July with the White Earth Indians. The teams played at White Earth last Wednesday the score being 4 to 2 in favor of Thief River, but the Indians are strengthening their team and are coming up here on the 4th with blood in their eye looking for scalps. It will be a great game. You can't afford to miss it. Come.

In 1882 when St. Hilaire was scattered along the river for three or four miles and additions were platted in every direction, Christ Olson built a hotel and called it the "Central House." For a time it was "central" between the present townsite and Crocker, Cundy & Nelson's additions, but for the past twenty years it has been about a half mile from the business part of the village. It has long been one of the landmarks of the town but it has seen its day and served its purpose and is now being torn down for fire wood.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound of imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

PLUMMER

(From the Pioneer.)

Julius Pleth and A. J. Riebe drove to Red Lake Falls Monday on business.

Julius Pleth left last evening for St. Cloud. Mrs. Pleth has been visiting with her relatives there for the past two weeks and will return with Mr. Pleth in a day or two.

Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Germo were out from Red Lake Falls on Tuesday and called on friends here. They were making a trip through this part of the country in an endeavor to solve the hired girl problem.

S. O. Ostby, who has been visiting for the past few weeks with his brother Paul I. D. Ostby, left last evening for Putney, S. D., to take charge of the Great Northern railway company's station there.

Hon. L. C. Simons and Bank Examiner W. R. O'Hern drove over from Red Lake Falls on Wednesday evening. This was the examiner's first visit to the Plummer bank and he expressed himself as well pleased with the volume of business and the manner in which it is conducted.

A crew of Soo surveyors were here Thursday to survey ground for a mile or so of new sidetracks which the company will put in here in the near future. The present trackage here is entirely inadequate for the amount of business which the road does here. When this work is completed Plummer will have nearly two miles of sidetrack.

At about 10:30 o'clock on Thursday morning an alarm of fire startled our citizens and all promptly responded. It was a small blaze in the upper story of the Robinson building which was quickly subdued by the impromptu department. The principal damage was done to the carpets and furniture by the water and a hole chopped in roof to permit access to the attic where the flames were gaining a start when discovered. The fire started in a bedroom opening off the kitchen in the rear and the cause is a mystery. The loss will be practically nothing, as the building and contents were amply insured.

Furious Fighting.

"For seven years," writes Geo. W. Hoffman, of Harper, Wash., "I had a bitter battle, with chronic stomach and liver trouble, but at last I won, and cured my diseases, by the use of Electric Bitters. I unhesitatingly recommend them to all, and don't intend in the future to be without them in the house. They are certainly a wonderful medicine to have cured such a bad case as mine." Millionaire's Poor Stomach.

The worn-out stomach of the over-fed millionaire is often paraded in the public prints as a horrible example of the vile attendant on the possession of great wealth. But millionaires are not the only ones who are afflicted with bad stomachs. The proportion is far greater among the toilers. Dyspepsia and indigestion are rampant among these people, and they suffer far worse tortures than the millionaire unless they avail themselves of a standard medicine like Green's August Flower, which has been a favorite household remedy for all stomach troubles for over thirty-five years. August Flower rouses the torpid liver, thus creating appetite and insuring perfect digestion. It tones and vitalizes the entire system and makes life worth living, no matter what your station. FARM AND GARDEN

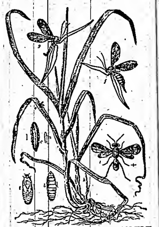
PARASITES OF HESSIAN FLY

How the Insect Friends of the Farmer May Be Distinguished from the Enemy of the Wheat Field.

The importance of parasitic enemies of insects that prey upon our farm crops is very great and grave. In a recent bulletin from the Missouri experiment station Prof. J. M. Stedman calls attention to a number of parasites of the Hessian fly as follows:

"The great importance of the work of various parasitic insects in destroying the Hessian fly and preventing its undue increase can scarcely be overestimated. Undoubtedly these parasites kill practically every year from 50 to 90 per cent. of the Hessian flies before they reach maturity, and in some years a greater per cent. are thus destroyed. Still, notwithstanding this great reduction by parasitic insects and also by unfavorable climatic conditions, these insects frequently become unduly numerous and consequently destructive. It is not only because of the economic importance of these parasites of the Hessian fly, but also because of the fact that otherwise the cultivator would not as a rule be able to distinguish them from the Hessian fly itself, that we have thought best to give an illustration of the more common species of these parasites found in this state. A glance at the illustration shown will go much farther toward acquainting the average agriculturist with these insects, and of enabling him to recognize and separate them from the Hessian fly, than any amount of description would do; and hence we will not enter into description of each species.



WHEAT PLANT AND HESSIAN FLY.

a, egg; b, larva; c, puparium or "flaxseed;" d, pupa; e, adult female; f, adult female, enlarged; g, male, enlarged; h, "flaxseeds;" i, parasite of Hessian fly.

"It should be observed that the Hessian fly has but one pair of wings, the second pair being represented by a slender club-like rudiment; while in all the parasites there are two pairs of wings, the first pair, however, much larger than the second pair. In one species, Baetomus subapterus, the insect is frequently found without wings at all. Although the Hessian fly and its various parasites look alike to the casual observer, the above facts will enable one to note the difference, if followed with a little close observation and sharp eyes, especially if one be provided with a hand lens."

CUTTING POTATO FOR SEED

Rules Which Should Be Observed in Preparing the Pieces for Planting.

In cutting seed potatoes take the potato in the left hand with the stem end toward you. If it is large cut off a good-sized piece with two or three eyes. Revolve the potato to the right and keep cutting off about the same size pieces, finishing the potato by splitting the seed end. Cut potatoes as you want to use them and after they are cut never expose to the sun or air to dry out.

If you cannot use them immediately pour out on damp ground in the shade of trees or building and cover with a blanket. Seed the least bit dry, says Farm and Home, comes up slower, blights easily, and yields lighter, just in proportion as it is dried out. To cut seed use a kitchen knife ground down narrow and thin, so that the potato can be cut with very little force and not tire the hand.

FARM NOTES.

Scatter a little wheat where the quails can get it.

Sell the hay and straw through the medium of live stock, and save on the fertilizer bill.

Does the cold wind triumphantly whistle: "No windbreaks here!" If so, take the hint.

The farmer who uses a nail keg in the village store for his workshop on rainy days rarely has his tools in repair.

The farmer who speculates in stocks is pretty certain, sooner or later, to furnish stock for the village gossips to speculate on. Our folks will not do it.

There are classics in agriculture, as in other books. No farmer can afford to be without those works which bear directly on his farming.

OYAMA CARRYING OUT PLAN TO DRAW NOOSE AROUND THE RUSSIAN ARMY.

No Negotiations for an Armistice Have Begun and St. Petersburg Hears the Czar's Troops Are in a Dangerous Position—President Roosevelt Anxious to Facilitate Peace Movement in Order to Avert General Battle.

St. Petersburg, June 19.—It is the belief at the foreign office that the Russo-Japanese peace conference at Washington will not convene for at least a month or six weeks. In the meantime, so far as indicated here, there has been no move in the direction of a suspension of hostilities. No confirmation has been received here of the report from Godzyadani of June 17 that negotiations for an armistice had been begun between Field Marshal Oyama and General Linevitch. On the contrary the latest news from the front leaves little doubt that Oyama's columns are in motion and disquieting rumors are current here regarding the position of the Russian army, according to which Oyama has succeeded in pushing both his flanks far forward, respectfully opposite Kuanchengtsu and Kirin, whence he can draw a noose around troops below this line.

POSTPONES HIS DEPARTURE.

President Anxious to Aid in Furthering Peace Negotiations.

Washington, June 19.—While the progress of the preliminary negotiations for peace between the Far Eastern belligerents is necessarily slow at this stage of the proceedings it is known that President Roosevelt hopes they practically may be concluded before he shall go to Oyster Bay for the summer. His desire to facilitate in every possible way the negotiations induced him to reconsider his original plan to go to Oyster Bay this week. After his visit to Worcester and Williamstown, Mass., where he will go to attend the commencement exercises of Clark university and Williams college, he will return to Washington, arriving here next Friday morning. It is expected that if nothing unforeseen shall have occurred in the meantime some definite announcement of the status of the negotiations may be made soon after his return. There is a possibility even that the selection of the plenipotentiories of both Russia and Japan may be announced before the president leaves for Massachusetts.

Would Avert General Engagement.

It is the hope here that the arrangements for the conference may proceed with such facility as to avert a general engagement in Manchuria between the forces of Generals Linevitch and Oyama. The precipitation of a great battle at the present stage of the peace negotiations would be regarded here as a most unfortunate error of judgment—an error which might imperil seriously the negotiations for the conference. Indeed, it is believed in some quarters that whatever might be the result of such a conflict it would arouse so much bitterness that the negotiations, the status of which is now so favorable, would collapse.

It can be said that President Roosevelt is giving no heed to irritating personal references to him which have appeared in a part of the Russian press. His conduct of the peace negotiations thus far has been as nearly directly as possible with the emperors of the belligerent powers and the arrangements concluded represent their personal views as well as his own.

GRAND DUKE ALEXIS RESIGNS.

High Admiral of Russian Navy Steps Down.

St. Petersburg, June 16.—The sensational announcement was made shortly before midnight that Grand Duke Alexis, the high admiral, who is an uncle of the emperor, and Admiral Avellon, head of the Russian admiralty department, had resigned. This announcement was followed a few minutes later by an imperial rescript relieving the grand duke of the supreme direction of the navy which he had held since the days of the emperor's father, Alexander III., when Russia resolved to enter the lists as a first-class seapower and to build up a great navy, the remnants of which were destroyed in the battle of the Sea of Japan.

Grand Duke Alexis has been savagely criticised for his administration of his admiralty office and ugly stories are now current regarding his retirement. It is probable, however, it is on account of public animosity toward him, though the reason may not be known for some time.

MUST QUIT PORT ARTHUR.

American and European Firms Given Notice by Japs.

Chefoo, June 19.—American and European firms still in Port Arthur have been notified by the Japanese authorities to depart and to remove their merchandise. Many of the firms are now arranging to charter steamers for that purpose.

Oldest Postmaster in Iowa Dead.

Des Moines, Ia., June 20.—Nathan G. Roosa of Border Plains, the oldest postmaster in Iowa, is dead as a result of a sudden attack of heart failure. He had served as postmaster from Lincoln to Roosevelt, a period of thirty-eight years.

WISCONSIN TORNADO.

One Man Killed and Much Property Destroyed.

Blue Mounds, Wis., June 20.—A young German farmhand, name unknown, was killed on the farm of Charles Collins while milking, over $150,000 damage was done to crops and farm buildings, and scores of head of stock were destroyed by a tornado that passed through Dane and Iowa counties and over the townships of Barneveld and Blue Mounds during the evening. Telephone and telegraph wires are down, and the full extent of the damage can only be estimated. The storm broke with wild fury following an extremely sultry day, and through a tract eight miles long and one to two miles wide, the destruction of property was complete.

The hail at Blue Mounds village broke all glass on the west and northwest sides of buildings.

Highland, Wis., reports a severe hail and wind storm which wrecked over a dozen barns and windmills and ruined crops. The path of the storm was two miles wide and hail piled up a foot in depth.

Similar reports come from Dodgeville and Mount Horeb.

APPLY FOR OLD JOBS

PRONOUNCED BREAK IN RANKS OF STRIKING TEAMSTERS AT CHICAGO.

Chicago, June 19.—A pronounced break in the ranks of the strikers occurred during the day. For the first time since the strike began many weeks ago there were numerous instances where striking teamsters applied individually for former positions without waiting for the strike to be formally declared off. This was especially true at the lumber yards. George K. Wenig of the Wenig Teaming company said:

"Many of my old teamsters have asked for their positions. Not one of them said anything about deliveries to the boycotted firms. I have done nothing yet in the matter and shall not do anything until I consult with other employers."

Additional evidence of conspiracy, it is said, has been obtained by the grand jury, which is devoting its attention to the "graft" charges and to finding out who was responsible for the killing of nonunion drivers during the strike riots.

BY REFERENDUM VOTE.

Chicago Teamsters Likely to Declare Strike Off.

Chicago, June 19.—There are indications that the teamsters' strike will come to an end before the close of this week. The announcement is made from a source high in the counsels of the union that the strikers will be allowed to decide for themselves whether the strike shall be called off without conditions or allowed to continue.

One of the strongest arguments in favor of the referendum, it is argued, is the fact that the peace terms of the employers contain demands diametrically opposed to the principles of the teamsters' organization and the drivers would rather call off the strike than agree to them.

DEMURRER OVERRULED.

Members of Cleveland Coal Trust Must Stand Trial.

Cleveland, June 17.—Judge Stone of the common pleas court has overruled the demurrer of the Cleveland Coal Dealers' association, known as the "coal trust."

This means the members of the association indicted under the Valentine anti-trust law must stand trial unless a higher court reverses Judge Stone's decision.

The Coal Dealers' association, in its demurrer to the indictment, attacked the validity of the law which provides for punishment of members of any combination found in restraint of competition.

TWO DECKHANDS PERISH.

Steamer City of Collingwood Totally Destroyed by Fire.

Collingwood, Ont., June 19.—The steamer City of Collingwood, owned by the North Shore Navigation company of Collingwood and valued at $80,000, was totally destroyed by fire early in the day at her dock here and two of her deckhands were burned to death. Several of the crew jumped overboard into the bay, where they were rescued by firemen.

GAYNOR AND GREENE WIN.

Americans Granted an Appeal to the Canadian Supreme Court.

Montreal, June 14.—Judge Hall has granted the petition of counsel for Gaynor and Greene to be allowed to appeal to the supreme court against the decision of Justice Davidson that Judge Lafontaine had the right to act as extradition commissioner. This action undoubtedly will cause a delay of six months.

FIVE HUNDRED KILLED.

Explosion in Russian Colliery Proves Fatal to Many.

Ekaterinoslav, Southern Russia, June 19.—Five hundred persons were killed in the explosion which occurred at the Ivan colliery at Khartsisk, belonging to the Russian Donetz company.

TWENTY-FIVE KILLED

PASSENGER AND FREIGHT TRAINS COLLIDE HEAD ON NEAR PATAPSCO, MD.

Baggage Car Crowded With Railroad Laborers Telescoped and Most of Its Occupants Instantly Killed or Seriously Injured—Trainmen Charged With Disobedience of Orders Meet Death in the Wreck.

Baltimore, June 19.—The death roll of the disaster on the Western Maryland railway now foots up twenty-five and this number is likely to be increased from the list of those seriously mangled. All the dead were employes of the railroad and were returning to their homes in the small towns along the railway. The train carried a large number of passengers, all the coaches being filled. As many of the workmen as could do so went into the baggage car, the remainder of the gang of thirty-five finding places on the platform.

In the neighborhood of Patapsco station the road has many curves and that just west of the bridge crossing the Patapsco river is a sharp one. An extra freight made up of heavy coal and provision cars was running east. It should have taken a siding to allow the passenger to pass. Why the orders were disregarded will never be known, for those who should have seen that they were obeyed are dead.

The passenger train was running at a speed of thirty miles an hour and the freight was making good time. Just west of the bridge they came together with terrific force, the three engines being piled on one another. The fearful impact drove the passenger tender into the baggage car and demolished it and the mail car. Practically every man in the baggage car was killed, but those on the platform escaped death by being hurled along both sides of the track. Five firemen, three engineers and a freight conductor are among the dead.

GERMANY WINS POINT

FRANCE AGREES TO MOROCCAN CONFERENCE UNDER CERTAIN CONDITIONS.

Berlin, June 19.—Premier Rouvier has informed Prince Radolin, the German ambassador at Paris, that France is inclined to accept the invitation to take part in the proposed conference on Morocco provided the German and French governments can reach a mutually satisfactory agreement as to the precise points to be considered by the conferees. The conviction exists at the foreign office that France and Germany will be able to agree on this programme. Although earnest differences of view are yet to be reconciled the authoritative judgment of the foreign office is that they will all be overcome by negotiation. M. Rouvier has thus yielded to Prince von Buelow on two essential points on which M. Delcasse, the former foreign minister, had refused the invitation to take part in a Morocco conference. M. Rouvier first consented to reopen the question and then agreed to take part in the conference provided the protocol is in conformity with French interests. This will be accepted by Germany, which will limit the deliberations of the conference.

Great Britain, supporting France, had also refused to join the proposed conference, but Foreign Secretary Lansdowne has, it is understood, said that if France accepted Great Britain would also accept.

A great diplomatic battle is in progress with the probabilities leaning toward German success.

ANTI-AMERICAN PROPAGANDA.

Boycott Favored by Important Meetings at Tientsin.

Tientsin, June 19.—Two important meetings have been held in the native city in connection with the anti-American propaganda. The meetings were attended by 600 students, representing twenty-six colleges. Ten resolutions were passed, of which the most important was the following:

To boycott American goods; to stimulate Chinese manufactures; to circulate anti-American literature and record results.

Other bodies, representing 200 members from the commercial guilds of seventeen provinces, have signed an agreement under a mutual bond to forfeit 50,000 taels if any member is reported purchasing American goods.

The Peking guilds are circulating 10,000 copies of the agreement.

TORNADO HITS SCHOOLHOUSE.

Church Also Blown Away and Poorhouse Damaged.

Marshalltown, Ia., June 19.—A tornado in Hancock county Sunday night blew away the public schoolhouse and church at Duncan and tore the roof off the poorhouse. No inmates were injured. Many farm buildings were damaged and hundreds of windmills were blown down. The storm was general throughout Iowa. At New Baglay five farmhouses were blown down and three members of the family of Joseph Scaruba were injured.

It is not strange that Page fence will stretch up smoothly over hills and down through ravines. It is made to do it, and it is simply putting into use one of the innate properties of its coiled wire. It is elastic.

It is not strange that short kinks or bends in wire cannot supply this elasticity like a coil or spiral. If they could, why haven't the manufacturers of spring balances, or of car springs used a kinked, crimped or other shaped metal than a coil. Probably the reason is that kinked or crimped metal will not let out and take up, will not shorten and lengthen like a coil spring.

Further, why do you suppose that high-carbon stock is always used for springs unless it is because low-carbon stock will not make a spring. Low-carbon stock is much the cheaper.

Hair springs in watches are made of only a little higher carbon stock than Page-Wire is made of, in fact, there is not much more difference between the proportion of carbon in Page-Wire and watch-spring wire, than there is between the fence wire generally in use and that which we use for all the horizontal wires in Page fences.

L. A. DAUTREMONT, PROPRIETOR
SAM S. HAISLET, EDITOR AND MANAGER

Published weekly, Thursday evening, entered as second-class matter in the post office at Red Lake Falls.

Official Paper of Red Lake County.

Official Paper of Red Lake Falls.

Subscription, $1.00 per Year

A scientific paper remarks that the invention of a noiseless typewriter would bring the inventor a fortune. Not from us. Our typewriter makes a great deal of noise. But such a voice. Ah!

The Thief River Press remarks that if another deluge would visit this earth, their city would be the only place in Minnesota above water and that all the steamboats would be headed that way. Yes, dear brother, but they would be headed that way from necessity and not from choice.

In a recent issue of the Sauk Center Herald, Frank M. Eddy says: We had a bee—a gubernatorial bee—in our bonnet a year ago. It got away from us, and, unlike the cat it never came back. We want it distinctly understood we are no apiary. We don't want any bee inspector fooling around us.

The Gully Sunbeam passed out of existence last week, and the publishers, Messrs. Hunt and Singer, have moved the plant to Quehnel, this county, and will commence publication about July 1st. This makes seven newspapers for Red Lake county, but here's hoping that it will prove a success and that its publishers may never regret coming to Red Lake cunty.

Not to be egotistical, but better to bring out my point, let me say that I have visited every state and territory in the union, I have recently visited Mexico and other countries on this side of the Atlantic. I visited lands abroad, and everywhere I went I made a special study of agricultural conditions. As a result of these investigations, covering a period of years, I have come to the conclusion that there is not another state or land where conditions are so favorable to diversified farming as within the borders of the state of Minnesota.—S. M. Owen, editor Farm, Stock & Home.

ROOSEVELT'S DIPLOMACY.

Thanks to the efforts of president Roosevelt, there is a prospect of the war between Russia and Japan being brought to a close says the Crookston Times. He has been tactful in his proceeding and achieved a marvelous success as a diplomatist. As he does everything, he went straight to the point in his note to no effusiveness, but a plain statement that the time had come when hostilities should cease. The result is that his advice has been accepted and plenipotentiaries will take up the place of generals. The only thing that will stand in the way will be an excessive demand for indemnity on the part of Japan. That nation has always been moderate in its exactions from Russia. and will no doubt be now but the Russians cannot purchase peace as cheaply now as they could some months ago Every day has added to the outlay of the Japanese, and they will ask for reimbursement. This is the law of war the defeated party must pay the hills. The acceptance of any terms will be bnmiliating to the Czar, but he must abide by the fortunes of war. And he is between two fires in his own country. The peace party are demanding a cessation of hostilities while the radicals, or aristocracy are loud in opposition to surrending to the "venomous dwarfs." But the prospects of present peace is due to our president. He has been depicted as a strenuous fighting man, and the "big stick" has been hurled at him by his distractors. No one loves peace more than he, and if be is ever in the role of a fighter it is because he is forced into it. Then he fights, and fights for all that is in him. In his effort for peace he has shown diplomacy that has won praise for him throughout the civilized world.

A BOOST FOR EDDY.

Next year there must not be any rubbing of the fur the wrong way if the republicans are victorous at the polls. Every vote is needed, no matter whether it comes from a Dunn, Collins or Eddy supporter. John A. Johnson is making good, and to defeat him will be found the hardest proposition the republican party ever undertook. — Anoka Union.

That is it exactly. But will the Collins men of last year support next year a man who was identified in the fight for Dunn? Will the men who fought for Dunn support a man from the Collins ranks? It need not be expected that the Collins men and the Dunn men will join unanimously on either a Collins or a Dunn man. For the republican party to proceed upon such a hypothesis will mean the reelection of Governor Johnson. Neither is it a time for a dark horse. For a disaffected party to consider a dark horse in going against a united and powerful opposition, is to accept defeat in the begining. But there was a third contingent in last year's campaign —the Eddy contingent. Mr. Eddy's direct following was not large, to be sure, but there were a great many in each of the larger followings who were very favorable to Eddy, and he made no enemies in either, and his friends to a man heartily supported the republican candidate. Thus is Eddy the logical candidate for 1906. Besides the circumstances above stated, which point to him as the most available man for the nomination, he is an organizer and a vote-getter. As to fitness, worth and general qualification for the office of governor of Minnesota, no one is better equipped than is Frank M. Eddy.—Wairoad Plaindealer.

COL. COLVILLE DEAD.

Colonel William Colville, who led the famous First Minnesota charge at Gettysburg, was found dead at the Soldier's Home Wednesday last, having peacefully entered into the last long rest. He had arrived from his home at Red Wing to take part with the veterans of the civil war in the ceremonies attendant upon the removal of the Minnesota battle flags to the new state capitol. The desperate and intrepid charge of 262 of Minnesota's First Regiment will ever remain among the most valiant and glorious charges in history. In a few moments 215 including Col. Colville were down, but the noble fellows faced death unhesitatingly, and as every school boy knows, saved the day for the Union and Gen Hancock paid the following tibute to Col. Colville regiment in his report of the fight:

'There is no more gallant deed recorded in history.' I ordered these men there because I say I must gain five minutes time. Reinforcements were coming on the run, but I knew that before they could reach the threatened point the Confederates, unless checked, would seize the position. I would have ordered that regiment in if I had known that every man would be killed. It had to be done and I was glad to find such a gallant body of men as the First Minnesota at hand willing to make the terrible sacrifice that the occasion demanded.

For forty years but the mere battered remnant of a man by reason of wounds received during the war Col Colville has answered the last roll call; be has finished his course, and somewhere there is laid up for him eternal peace and happiness. All honor to the memory of Minnesota's gallant hero!

There are seventy-five life men in the Minnesota state prison. This is a large number, considering the smaliness of tne population. One of this number has been here a long time. He was received April 11, 1876. This is the longest time served by anyone since the prison was huilt. The next longest almost equals the foregoing one, there being only four years difference. He was received March 25, 1880.—Prison Mirror.

WRIGHT WILL FIGHT.

Contends That He is Still Commissioner of Beltrami County.

That Wes Wright is still county commissioner from the first district of Beltrami county is the contention of his attorney, Chester McKusick, who Thursday night applied for and was granted a restraining order by Jndge Spooner forbidding I. B. Olson, the newly elected commissioner, to take a hand in the proceedings of the board. The order was made returnabla at Grand Rapids this afternoon at 4 o'clock, when Mr. Olson will be reqnired to show canse before Jndge McClenahan why he shonld not be removed from the position to which he was appointed last week ago and Wes Wright be reinstated as county commissioner. Providing the facts set up by Mr. McKusick as grounds for action are found to be trne by Judge McClenahan, Mr. Wright will resnme his dnties as commissioner.

The application for a permanent injunction restraining Mr. Olson from acting as a member of the board is based upou the allegation made by Mr. McKnsick to the effect that Mr. Wright's removal was unlawful.

The application alleges that Mr. Wright was not served with a copy of the charges against him in time to allow him to prepare a defense, that the charges were not specific enough to warrant his removal and that the investigation of the charges and the hearing before the governor were void.

The restraining order was served upon Mr. Olson yesterday morning before the meeting of the board which was to have been held yesterday was called to order. As a result he was nnable to vote at the meeting and the other four members of the board failed to hold a meeting, there being no quorum present. Consequently, no county attorney was elected and the meeting was adjourned to Jnne 27, when another special meeting will also be held for the purpose of transacting the rontine businasa to come bafore tha board.

The contention of Mr. Wright'a attorney and the issnance of the restraining order was a decided surprise to those who are interested in the election of former Connty Attorney Loud's sneccessor, and much interest is manifested iu the ontcome of the hearing before Jndge McClenahan this afternoon.

Should Mr. Wright be reinstated, it will be necessary in in order to remove him to appeal from the decision of Judge McClenahan to the snpreme court of the state, and Jndge McClenahan is snstained another inveatigation will ba necessary.

Celia Harrington.

Miss Celia Harrington, 303 Second avenue, Detroit, Mich., writes:

"Weakness has filled many months of my life with suffering. Through carelessness I caught a severe cold two years ago which settled in catarrh and seriously interfered with the regular functions of the body, and made me nervous and irritable. I began taking Peruna and found in it a faithful helper, as it enriched my blood and invigorated the whole system. I have no pains now and am always well."

Female weakness is generally dependent upon catarrh of the pelvic organs. Peruna cures catarrh wherever located.

Climatic Cures.

The influence of climate conditions in the cure of consumption is very much overdrawn. The poor patient, and the rich patient, too, can do much better at home by proper attention to food digestion, and a regular use of German Syrup. Free expectoration in the morning is made certain by German Syrup, so is a good night's rest and the absence of that weakening cough and debilitating night sweat. Restless nights and the exhaustion due to coughing, the greatest danger and dread of the consumptive, can be prevented or stopped by taking German Syrup liberally and regularly. Should you be able to go to a warmer clime, you will find that of the thousands of consumptives there, the few who are benefited and regain strength are those who use German Syrup. Trial bottles, 25c; regular size, 75c. At all druggists A. L. Reichert.

DEATH OF GENERAL GOMEZ.

Cubans Mourn Demise of Revolutionary Leader.

Havana, June 19.—The death of General Maximo Gomez, the Cuban patriot, has caused general mourning throughout the island. The flags of every nation represented in Havana are at half mast over the legations and consulates and from Cabanas fortress a gun booms every half hour. In every street there are long rows of Cuban flags draped in mourning and even the poorest tenements have crepe tied to the windows. The Spanish club joined in the mourning by hoisting the Castilian flag at half mast.

The body of General Gomez was taken to the palace, where it now lies in state in the principal salon, surrounded by great masses of flowers sent by relatives, friends, comrades, the government departments and social and political organizations. The body is guarded by a detachment of rural guards and several of the general's friends are acting as a guard of honor.

Congress at a special session decided that the period of mourning shall continue for three days, during which time public business will be suspended.

Berner, its president, in the form of an address to the king and the Swedish people. The socialists thereupon fired and the Cossacks replied and then charged with drawn swords into the thick of the procession. FEMALE WEAKNESS

542 1-2 Congress St.
PORTLAND, MAINE, Oct. 17, 1902.

I consider Wine of Cardui superior to any doctor's medicine I ever used and I know whereof I speak. I suffered for nine months with suppressed menstruation which completely prostrated me. Pains would shoot through my back and sides and I would have blinding headaches. My limbs would swell up and I would feel so weak I could not stand up. I naturally felt discouraged for I seemed to be beyond the help of physicians, but Wine of Cardui came as a God-send to me. I felt a change for the better within a week. After nineteen days treatment I menstruated without suffering the agonies I usually did and soon became regular and without pain. Wine of Cardui is simply wonderful and I wish that all suffering women knew of its good qualities.

Wilhelmina Snow
Treasurer, Portland Economic League

Periodical headaches tell of female weakness. Wine of Cardui cures permanently nineteen out of every twenty cases of irregular menses, bearing down pains or any female weakness. If you are discouraged and doctors have failed, that is the best reason in the world you should try Wine of Cardui now. Remember that headaches mean female weakness. Secure a $1.00 bottle of Wine of Cardui today.

WAIL OF ROYAL CHEF

WELL PAID BUT MASTERS ARE MOST EXACTING.

How the Kingly Menus Are Prepared —Franz Joseph Selects His Own— Kaiser Eats in Four Languages —Sultan Fears Poison.

London.—"Menus are the greatest burden of sovereignty," once remarked the emperor of Austria, and this, coupled with the statement of the late Czar Alexander III. that a monarch required more diplomacy in dealing with his cooks than with his ministers leads one to believe that culinary matters are a source of unceasing worry to every crowned head.

Emperor Franz Josef has, however, good cause to grumble, because although the actual cost of the food he consumes himself does not amount to $5,000 a year, he pays his chef—a Belgian—a salary of $10,000 per annum, and the kitchen expenses at the palace are never less than $75,000. The reason for this is that, whereas the emperor always takes his meals alone in his study, his palace dinners are produced regardless of expense.

The emperor's chef always submits a menu for the following day's dinner to his royal master when dinner is served. Punctually at six o'clock his valet enters with a large tray, which he places on the emperor's desk, and while Franz Josef is negotiating his soup he scans to-morrow's menu and crosses off with a blue pencil anything he does not care for.

At the German court things are somewhat different. There are four chefs—a German, a Frenchman, an Englishman and an Italian—because the kaiser never decides till the day arrives whether he will have a German, a French, an English or an Italian meal, with the result that there is much scurrying to prepare a menu. This is not an easy matter if there are many guests present, because each chef is only allowed so much a head, and he must serve up an elegant meal at that figure. Each chef has five assistants and has to render an account of each day's expenses to the head steward.

The chef at the Portuguese court is an Englishman and he receives only $4,000 a year. When King Carlos paid his first visit to England and was staying with the late Lord Salisbury, he said that what struck him most about Britain was the roast beef, and he forthwith took back with him an English chef. King Carlos insists on an English meal every day, but the queen and the members of the household have two French chefs to study their wants, and they each receive salaries of $5,500 per annum.

The most trying post any man can wish for is that of chef to the sultan of Turkey at the palace at Yildiz. Here the royal kitchen is situated right under the royal apartments; it is quite a small room, strongly guarded, and even the windows are barred. The sultan's horror of poison led him on one occasion to install a soldier whom he trusted as chef, and for two years he endured badly cooked food rather than face the risk of poison.

The present chef has held his post seven years, but he is only responsible to Kelarji, the chief steward, for the food, and this official is in his turn responsible to the sultan. When the meal is ready it is placed on a tray and the tray is then covered with a black cloth, the ends of which are sealed by Kelarji before it is borne into the imperial apartment.

The czar of Russia's chef is likewise a much harassed individual, but as he is well paid—his salary from all sources being over $10,000 a year—he is not to be pitied.

THIRTEEN PROVES UNLUCKY

Courtship Lasted 13 Months; April 13 Set for Wedding; Groom Dies After 13 Days' Illness.

Muskegon, Mich.—The number "13" proved unlucky to F. Delong, who died here after all preparations had been completed for his marriage to one of the most prominent young women of this section.

After a courtship of just 13 months Delong proposed and was accepted. April 13 was set as the wedding day, and all preparations for the wedding were completed when the prospective bridegroom became ill. For 13 days and 13 nights the bride-to-be was his constant attendant, even to eating her meals at his bedside.

The unlucky combination of thirteens had been noted, and when the thirteenth day of illness ended to-day the sudden death of the patient was hardly a surprise to his superstitious friends.

The young woman who was to be a bride April 13 is hysterical, and refused to leave the hospital or be consoled.

Never Had Seen White Men.

Nordenskjold, the famous arctic explorer, has returned to Montevideo, Paraguay, from an expedition into the interior of South America to the borders of Brazil, Bolivia and Peru, where he found Indians who had never seen white men. They are among the most primitive people in the world. They believed him to be some god because he gave them flesh of monkeys he had hunted. They begged him to remain as their chief, but he did not accept the offer, knowing the prestige would not outlive his ammunition.

Reaching the Goal.

Russia is to carry on the war to "the bitter end." There must be rather a bad taste in the Russian mouth already.

DYNAMITE MAKES CHANNEL

Ice in Long Island Sound Was Blown Up to Permit of Navigation.

The severity of last winter in the neighborhood of New York is emphasized by an occurrence at Port Chester, N. Y., on Long Island Sound, says the New York Tribune. Usually the harbor of that place is not closed in the winter by the ice. The steamers from New York are able to make their way up the Byram river, the mouth of which forms the harbor of Port Chester, to the wharves. In the winter just ended it has been impossible for them to do this, for ice more than a foot in thickness formed and effectually blocked navigation in the channel.

The manufacturers became tired of waiting for nature in the form of gentle spring to release them from their icy bonds. When March came roaring in, and the ice was found still to be from a foot to 18 inches in thickness, they decided to treat the ice themselves. Procuring 450 pounds of dynamite, they set to work. Beginning at the open end of the ice field the ice was divided into huge blocks with plows. Then sticks of dynamite were inserted in holes made for the purpose. The dynamite was exploded by an electric current, and three or four miniature geysers of mixed ice and water would shoot up into the air.

Foot by foot the ice was broken away. Finally after five days of ice breaking of this sort the channel was opened sufficiently to permit a steamer to reach a wharf.

AN APPEAL FROM AFRICA.

What the People of the Dark Continent Ask of Those of Other Nations.

It is but very little that we ask—the right to work on our own soil, among our own people, ruled by some, at any rate, of our rulers, and to be permitted to eat and drink what we think good for us, instead of having deadly poison poured down our throats, says an extract from "Africa's Appeal to Christendom," in Century. Even if foreign powers should for a time be financial losers, they cannot eventually be anything but gainers—aided by a country almost unlimited in its capabilities, and the willing, grateful service of 20,000,000 of people rescued from the moral as well as physical death now staring them in the face. They will not have the obstacles presented to them in their own country; all will be with them in this crusade; leaders and people alike are stretching out their hands for aid. We appeal, not to England, not to France, not to Germany, not to other empires and states, but to the consciences of the individual men forming such nations. We appeal, not for a gift or favor, but for our right. Even as the Americans appealed for their rights, and obtained them by heroic measures, so do we claim the right for "freedom to worship God," and to worship Him by sobriety, industry, good will and all the Christian graces.

FOUND IN "LEMON" PIES.

Analysis of Restaurant Pastry Fails to Bring to Light Any Lemon.

Three lemon pies brought from the shelves of downtown restaurants were analyzed in the office of the state food inspector, and this is the composition of the filling of one of them, as announced by the chemist, reports the Chicago Record-Herald.

"Starch, in thick, firm paste, flavored slightly and very little acid; 21 per cent. sugar. Aniline coloring (methyl-orange group). The color is made synthetically from aniline, and aniline from coal. Method—di-methyl-aniline on diazo-benzine sulphonic acid. Methyl orange is poisonous in large doses. Found to contain very little flavoring and acid from lemon. Filling of starch paste, sugar and colored deep yellow.

In plain English, it was explained by the chemist that aniline is used instead of eggs. The butter was neglected altogether and the lemon juice was slighted.

Another lemon pie was beginning to decompose when it was delivered to the laboratory. There was dough at the bottom. The third lemon pie examined was said to be tolerably good. The much-abused mince pie escaped with good reputation, but one of the two pumpkin pies examined was said to be old.

Largest Known Sun Spot.

The Abbe Moreux has published a chart of the great sun spot made at the Observatory of Bourges, when on February 2 it attained its greatest extension of about 175,000 kilometers long and 102,000 kilometers wide—that is to say, about one-twenty-ninth part of the solar disk. It is the largest yet known. Lengths of 200,000 kilometers have been noted, but they represented a group of spots. One in 1858 was 250,000 kilometers long, but owing to its narrowness only measured one-thirtieth of the solar surface. The spot passed the central meridian of the sun on the night of February 3. It lay in the southern hemisphere, and varied notably in its aspect.—London Globe.

Pa's Theory.

Little Willie—Say, pa, what is the meaning of "noblesse oblige?"

Pa—I don't know, my son, unless it has some connection with those foreign nobles who are obliged to marry for money.—Chicago Daily News.

Real Strenuous.

He—I understand Softleigh has been assigned a very difficult role in your amateur theatricals.

She—Yes, poor fellow! They gave him a thinking part.—Chicago Sun.

THE VALUE OF GOOD COWS

Few Farmers Realize the Income Which May Be Realized from Them.

Prof. Eckels, in charge of the department of dairy husbandry at the University of Missouri, says of the value of good cows:

"Very few farmers realize the income that can be had from a good cow. The farmer who keeps a cow a year to raise a $15 or $20 calf, usually thinks he has done well, but his profits do not compare with those of the dairyman. Except with the high-priced registered cattle, the milk, not the calf, is the most valuable product of the cow.
